MEMORIAL DAY AND THE FLORISTS

DON'T NEGLECT ADVERTISING.

It Pays to Push.

Have you noted that the retail florists who appear to be making the most progress are the ones who use the most printers' ink?

Fact, isn't it?

Well, here's just one little hint, gathered from the experience of the advertising florists, that's convertible into real money next week: As surely as it pays to advertise all the time, it pays best to boost your business at the seasons of special demand.

It reminds one of the old saw about making hay while the sun shines, the modern version of which is "Push along while the going's good."

Now comes Memorial day.

The demand is there.

So is the stock.

To get them together in the store, use the newspaper. Tell the people there is something better than a bunch of snowballs when May 30 comes around.

Awakening Desire.

Thus far in the history of the flower business there is little record of any attempt, on the part of the better class of stores, to do more than satisfy the existing demand. This is changing. Effort now is being made by a number of shrewd flower merchants to quicken the demand.

Once upon a time a couple of advertising "experts" had a long debate as to whether or not advertising really creates demand. One argued that it does, while the other stoutly maintained that the demand already exists and that advertising only wakes it up. Profitable theme, wasn't it? A distinction without a difference.

We don't care whether advertising creates a demand for flowers or only awakens the natural desire for them, the demand that already is there. The point is, and it is the only interesting point, that the better advertiser a retailer is the better business he does—the more flowers he sells to his old customers and the more customers he makes.

What Advertising Does.

Penn, the Bromfield street florist in Boston, has given the subject of advertising a lot of hard study. He knows advertising pays. This is what he says of his advertising at this time last year:

"About a week before Memorial day we started a series of ads calling attention to wreaths for cemetery use. The advertisements were distinct and the results were equally clear-cut and readily traceable. It is worth while recording that out of 840 wreaths made up in anticipation of the demand, only five remained unsold at closing time on Memorial day."

Reproduced on this page is one of the Penn advertisements that sold the 835 wreaths that one day. There is no necessity for saying that the Penn plans for next week are all laid and that they include, not only the manufacture of many hundreds of wreaths, but the repetition of the advertising.

Going At It.

It is a curious fact that a good many men buy advertising with their eyes shut—they don't apply to it the common sense they use so well in making other purchases. Though the practice is not nearly so general as it was, a lot of men still buy advertising because they like the solicitor, or for some other equally valid reason, while others take space in everything that's offered, without a thought as to what they are getting for their money. The advertiser sees only one copy of his advertisement. It may look as good to him in his one copy of a paper practically without circulation as it looks in his one copy of the paper that everybody reads. The cost is about the same, and the appearance is similar, but there's a difference in results! But let Penn tell it:

"We didn't go into it blindly; we considered all the available papers, basing our choice on circulation among the kind of people we wanted to reach. You always can pick the best advertising medium by noting the amount of advertising carried. The paper that prints the most advertising calculated to interest the same people you are after will always be the best advertising medium for you. That large volume of advertising is a summing up of experience paid for by men who want to get the most their money will buy.

"It seemed to us, and events have proved that we were right, that the one best paper was all that we needed to use. Of course there are some possible customers we do not reach, but are they worth while doubling the expense? We think not, and doubling the expense wouldn't reach every possible buyer; it would be necessary to use all the papers to do that—so we let it go at the one with the biggest circulation. Then we can afford to take enough space to tell our story the way we want to tell it."

Try Penn's Plan.

Why not try Penn's plan for Memorial day? Size up the newspapers available to you, pick out the one that reaches the most of your kind of people, call in its representative and get his help in preparing some advertising that will give to you the results Penn gets with his.

If you do it at all, do it now. Advertising never should be hastily prepared.

MEMORIAL DAY WINDOWS.

To Move the Stock on Hand.

What any one dealer shall exhibit to attract trade for Memorial day can be decided by no one but himself, for his window display should consist largely of the stock he expects to sell in quantity. This, together with the purpose of keeping his establishment in a favorable light before the public, is the object of window displays.

What do I want to construct with this certain stock so as to attract the most notice? That is the question, not "Can I do it?" Never admit that weak-kneed proposition. Whether there is a way to do it, or whether anybody else has done it, are not pertinent questions. Seize the inspiration and find or invent a way to carry it out.

Avoid the funereal aspect to any decoration for Memorial day. We are now far enough away from that sad time to rejoice in the benefits while we sigh at the bloody price. Let our emblems be those of triumph, realizing that the dead yet speak and live in their deeds.

Some Appropriate Arrangements.

Here are some suggestions that may be utilized with whatever setting of plants you use to push sales for Memorial day:

Remove the head from a large drum. Fill with flowers and mount in a field of blooming plants with a background of flag drapery.

Inscribe on a large floral scroll some quotation from the emancipation proclamation. Throw a broken chain over the lower end of the scroll. Lean a musket against it and set in a patch of blooming plants and ferns.

Erect as a monument a large broken column frame. In place of the orthodox garland, drape a silk flag, caught in place with a knot of jasmines. Across the base, at the front, place a large pillow with an appropriate inscription or the dates, 1861-1911. Bank at the rear with a wealth of bright blooming plants.

If a stuffed eagle can be borrowed for the occasion, mount it over a gorgeous field of blooming plants, and from its beak to each side throw a pennant of red, white and blue, after the design on our coins.

Something in Motion.

Something in motion is always attractive. Mount a good sized flag on a staff among plants and flowers, near the center of the window. From a point near a front corner of the window, concealed by a bushy group of plants, set the flag in motion and keep it waving by an electric fan.

While it is somewhat expensive, a flag of flowers makes an attractive display piece. Make a ripple from the top to the lower edge; if well executed it is quite graceful. A setting of white blooming plants or an all-green background will make the best developer for such a piece.

An immense shield will be found an attractive piece. It should be made solid, distinct as to the color stripes and clear as to outline. Mount it over an archway, the columns of which are banked high with light colored flowers, such as lilies, gladioli or irises.

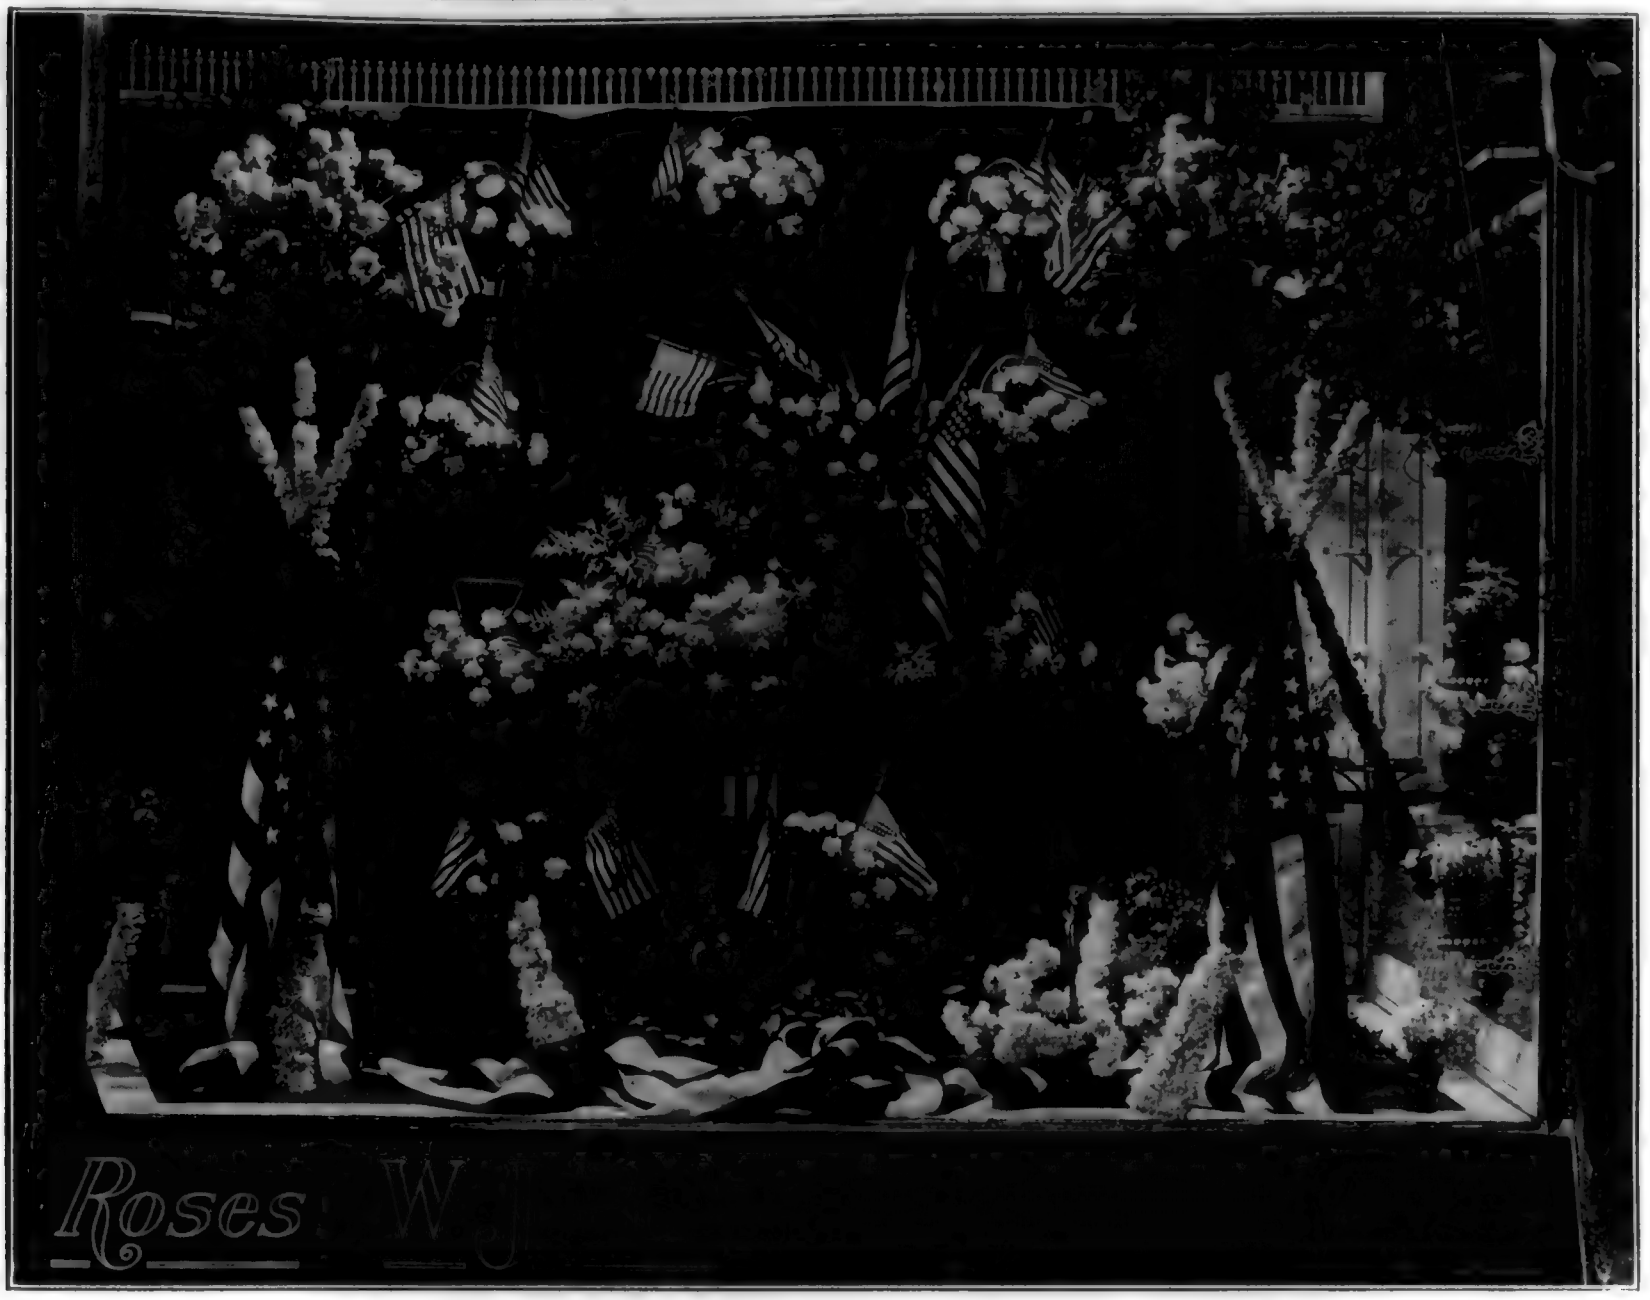
A REFRIGERATED WINDOW.

Artificial refrigeration preserves the stock used in the window display of the Alpha Floral Co., at Kansas City. In the illustration of the Memorial day window on this page of The Review the frost-encrusted coils are to be seen at the left. Of course, the display space is enclosed at the back and both ends, so that the window is really a big ice-box—except for the light, flowers keep as well in it as in any cool room. This is a great advantage and a money-saver, for a special display will stand much longer than it will in the ordinary window and, when there is no special decoration on, the public can be given the impression that a large stock is on hand without incurring an excessive loss of flowers.



TWO TIMELY WINDOWS.

Reproduced on these pages are two last season's Memorial day window displays, one by W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, and one by the Alpha Floral Co., Kansas City. Those who have tried special window arrangements for special events say that they have an advertising value fully equal to the cost. The money outlay on special windows need not greatly exceed the sum expended on the upkeep of the ordinary run of florists' window displays—but the thought and work are vastly greater; that is why so few make use of this means of attracting extra attention. In Buffalo Mr. Palmer has made quite a feature of his timely window displays, a good share of the year picturing behind his plate glass some event at the moment occupying a large place in the minds of the people. Santa Claus, the dog show, the automobile show, Labor day, Valentine's, the comet—they all afford an idea the Palmer decorator works out in flowers. So frequent and so good are these special windows that people passing by almost always turn to look for the latest.

Paucity of ideas and pressure of time are the two great difficulties to be surmounted by one who undertakes to keep up a series of special windows, but Memorial day is one of the easiest of special floral days to picture in the window. All one has to do is to buy or borrow a few old muskets, a sword or two, a few flags, and your stage properties are at hand; the setting may be after almost any fashion.

The ideal Memorial day window would be the one that combined a touch of the sentiment of the day with the serious business of selling flowers. The accouterments of war afford the suggestion of the day. Put these in a setting of flowers, but don't forget the commercial idea that should lie at the base of all such windows. Show the flowers and flower arrangements appropriate to the day. For Memorial day use cemetery wreaths and sprays. It is not a violation of good taste to attach neat cards, telling purpose and cost of such arrangements.

FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Timely Arrangements.

With the whiff of jasmine on the breath of summer arrives this last holiday of our season, claiming the output of garden, greenhouse and woods. A price and a place for almost any flower can be found somewhere in the innumerable possibilities of rare blues and greens, the salmons and creams, the varying shades from geranium reds to obconica pinks, that are still with us. After the drain of the shipping trade has done its best, by the time the local trade calls for its supply about everything in sight will be snapped up if shown to advantage, and they all have their possibilities for good display.

It does not require much work to sell carnations for Memorial day, or to sell some other well known flowers shown in the store, but you must show some skill in arrangement if you expect to sell cut heliotropes, geraniums, primulas, sweet alyssums, pansies, lobelias, etc., not because they are not beautiful, but because they are called common. On account of their softness of stem and texture, it is well to use them largely in background work.

Suggestions for Wreaths.

In order to dispose of this kind of stock to some advantage, here are a few suggestions as to combinations:

Blue pansy wreath, with forget-me-nots and jasmines.

Ivy, boxwood, wild smilax or huckleberry wreath, with a spray of carnations, jasmines or lilies. The frames for these can be made in advance, and the decorations added quickly. They ship well and last finely. Other designs may be made on the same plan, but the wreath will sell most readily.

Wreath of purple pansies, with a decoration of pink ramblers.

Wreath of yellow ramblers and Shasta daisies.

Wreath of purple pansies, with a decoration of yellow ramblers.

Wreath of double pink daisies, with a decoration of spiræa and mignonette.

Wreath of grass pinks, with a decoration of fancy grass, mignonette and abutilon.

Wreath of feverfew, with forget-me-nots and Azalea mollis.

Wreath of yellow-green coleus foliage, with a decoration of spiræas and heliotropes.

Wreath of double heliotropes and white petunias, with a decoration of white peas and mignonettes.

Wreath of purple verbenas, with spiræas and ferns.

Wreath of heliotropes, with a decoration of white and lavender peas.

Wreath of blue cornflowers, with a decoration of double white centaureas and fancy grasses.

Wreath of purple pansies, with a decoration of white lilies.

Bouquets and Monument Wreaths.

Here are some agreeable combinations for cemetery bouquets:

Blue and white columbines, with candidum lilies.

Candidum lilies and lavender iris.

Day lilies and snowballs.

Peonies with fancy grasses.

Lilacs and spiræas.

Small plant baskets, containing an assortment in harmonious sizes and colors of bloom and foliage, make salable little Memorial day offerings. "They outlast cut flowers many times over and are inexpensive," may be your argument to the customer.

Some nice orders are usually landed for decorative pieces for monuments. The wreath, as usual, holds the place of favor, and second in preference comes the heavy garland. How does a monument wreath differ from any other wreath? It should show from both sides. How shall I make one which shall be easily handled and placed? After ascertaining the size of the shaft, make two wreaths of the same size and fasten them together, back to back. Secure to the shaft near the center, and if there is nothing about the shape of the shaft which holds the double wreath in place, fasten it with a wire loop around the monument and fasten each end to the inside wire of the wreath frame. If the height of the monument is too much for you, make a loose wreath and secure the ends after encircling the shaft.

Garland for a Monument.

A heavy garland, made on a substantial rope of green and decorated with flowers, makes a handsome and dignified decoration for a monument. Make a loop at the top, of the proper size to catch on a top corner of the shaft. It may be necessary to strengthen its hold by wiring also. Then proceed to drape it around the body of the monument till a convenient place is found on the pedestal for a stop. Attach to a formal emblem, which may be placed on the ground or against the vase. To elaborate this, bank all around the base of the monument with blooming plants, ferns or tall spikes of cut flowers, sinking the vases or pots in the ground or covering them with moss or cut green. Let the whole decoration be in keeping with color restrictions.

If it is desired to decorate the grave or the lot further, cover it with panels, in sections of convenient size, of low-growing plants or cut flowers, after the manner of a casket panel. The garland for draping should be about one-half as long again as the height of the monument.

As incidental to this subject, the matter of inscriptions comes in for consideration. The artistic value of an inscription on a piece is small. It is one of the things which a designer of refined taste seldom suggests, and most pieces are the better for its absence. A pillow, a scroll, the arms of a cross—these are examples of a few places where an inscription may be happily placed. In addition to these, we find ourselves compelled to admit it on lodge and society emblems, but only such lettering as belongs to the badge and never for the purpose of suggesting the donors. Call attention to the fact that the significance of the emblem and the message of the flowers themselves should be sufficient, without the literal inscription. Gertrude Blair.

Cambridge, Mass.—The ground covered by Fred C. Becker's eleven greenhouses, on Cambridge street, is regarded as some of the most valuable land in the city. The business was founded in 1860 by the late Frank Becker, who was succeeded in 1895 by his son, the present proprietor. Karl F. Becker, son of the present owner, has also been assisting for some years in the management of the business.

CEMETERY WREATHS.

Loose Flowers Often Unsatisfactory.

A good many florists, probably a great majority of them, still are selling 50-cent bunches as the big item for Memorial day.

But a good many retailers have found that the flower buying public always is ready to take up with any suggestion of better things—and this applies at Memorial day just as thoroughly as it does at Christmas or any other time.

Of all the unsatisfactory things florists can sell at Memorial day, loose cut flowers are the worst. The person who goes to the cemetery with loose cut flowers and no provision for using them there, invariably meets with disappointment. If there is no vase on the plot, all that can be done with loose flowers is to "strew" them on the grave—that amounts to throwing them on the ground, and it utterly destroys the sentiment on which the observance of the day is based. A person who pays a dollar for a dozen good carnations to take to a cemetery May 30, lays them reverently on a grave and contemplates the effect, is pretty sure to conclude it wasn't worth doing. Such a customer doesn't come back. If people ask for loose cut flowers, inquire if there is a vase at the cemetery. If not, offer to supply one at such small cost that the sale will be certain. That way saves the customers for other years.

Boosting Memorial Day Wreaths.

Low Priced Wreaths Best.

The 50-cent bouquet is an improvement over the loose cut flowers—if there is no vase it will at least stay together when it is laid down—but there is a still better way at Memorial day.

The retailers who are looking up, not down, are selling wreaths and sprays to go to the cemeteries. Memorial day is not a time for high prices. The wreaths and sprays must be inexpensive, but they can be sold in enormous quantity. The experience of dozens of enterprising retailers proves it.

Blackistone, at Washington, does an enormous business in 2-dollar wreaths for May 30. The accompanying illustration shows Blackistone's newspaper advertisement. It is reduced to one-fourth the size it occupies in the Washington papers. At the same time, Blackistone backs up the newspaper advertising by filling his window with these Memorial wreaths. The sale is so great that the wreaths must be manufactured by hundreds in advance.

The prepared magnolia leaves that are now sold by all the supply houses, and which practically every retail florist carries in stock, make it possible to have stock wreaths on hand at all times; all they need is trimming with flowers. Also, wreaths for Memorial day can be made of galax leaves, boxwood, ivy or other materials. These can be made up in advance and stored where they will keep in perfect condition until the morning of May 30. Then they can be trimmed with whatever flowers have been ordered and made ready in quick time for delivery. When you come to think of it, a pretty nice wreath, not too large, can be made for $2. It takes only a few flowers to make quite a showing.

Sprays seem just a trifle less popular than wreaths for Memorial day. But you can make a mighty fine spray with a dozen peonies and double your money when you sell it at from $2 to $2.50. For a little more money sprays of roses, carnations or other flowers can be supplied.

The people who buy these wreaths or sprays at one Memorial day are almost certain to be customers as regularly as May 30 rolls around for years to come. When they take such flowers to the cemetery, they get an effect that looks to be worth the money. Work away from loose flowers or cheap bunches. Sell wreaths.

TAGGING WITH FLOWERS.

A new use for flowers has been discovered by A. L. Randall, the Chicago wholesaler. He says that the latest wrinkle in tag days is to do the tagging with a flower instead of a piece of pasteboard on a string. It recently has been tried in cities in the south and worked to perfection. People "loosened up" much more freely for a flower than they ever did for a tag. The charity profited, the local florist who supplied the flowers made a comfortable sum, and a big lot of stock was called out of a heavily loaded market.

The idea is capable of wide use; there is no copyright on it. Any florist can organize a tag day in his town; there always are charities that are willing to push along any new idea that promises a profit. Every florist who is in touch with the situation knows that there are times when he can buy large lots of cut flowers at a price that will give him a chance to get a good return for the effort necessary to work up the order; it don't take much talk to impress people with the fact that a tag day with flowers will make a hit.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

Remarkably fine collections of narcissi have been shown recently at the leading English shows in London and Birmingham. The leading hybridizers exhibited their latest novelties and several awards were made.

At a conference in Birmingham, the consensus of opinion showed disapproval of the lines on which the hybridizers are working, as they are neglecting garden decorative varieties and varieties of commercial value for cut flower purposes, and introducing such as are only of value to fanciers who grow for exhibition. Some of the hybridizers present admitted that among their seedlings they discarded many on account of their not being "show" flowers, and promised to consider the question of running a second department in their trial grounds, to meet popular demands. This view will commend itself to commercial growers, as there have been few narcissus introductions of commercial value in recent years. The word "commercial" is intended to be read in its full sense. True, the seedlings introduced have commercial value, but their sale is limited, at £3, £5 and £10 per bulb, to narcissus fanciers, and they do not pass through the hands of seed merchants.

TROUBLE WITH CATERPILLARS.

Enclosed find a moth which is causing us considerable annoyance while still in the caterpillar form by eating the under side of leaves. We have tried heavy fumigating and spraying without results. Do you know of any remedy? H. F. C.

The caterpillar of the enclosed moth is quite annoying, being specially bad on chrysanthemums, cinerarias and marguerites, also attacking geraniums and some other plants. Some sticky fly papers hung around will attract and catch many of the moths and fumigation should also destroy them, but is usually ineffectual against the caterpillars themselves. Kill all the moths you possibly can by hand, destroy the larvæ in the same way and you will soon exterminate them. C. W.

ROSES

MILDEW AND LEAF ROLLERS.

Can you tell me what to do with my rose bushes? I think they are troubled with mildew. The leaves curl up, with a white, dry dust underneath and sometimes on the buds. I have used dry sulphur, but it does not seem to have any effect. Also, what should I do for slugs on roses? I enclose a leaf infested with rust. F. J. H.

Sulphur dusted on the foliage when it is a little damp with dew will be found the best remedy for mildew. There are a number of special remedies, among which Hammond's Grape Dust is one of the best. Blow the sulphur on with a pair of powder bellows. To destroy the leaf roller, or slug, dust hellebore on the foliage as soon as the second leaves appear. More than one application may be necessary, as rains will sometimes wash away the poison. If white thrips appear, force of water is the best remedy, while any of the soap solutions or kerosene emulsion will care for black or green aphis if it appears. If you have a good water pressure convenient to your bushes, use it freely and you will have little trouble with insect pests. They always breed faster when the plants are suffering from a lack of moisture. W. N. C.

ROSES IN ALABAMA.

Will Killarney, Bride, Maid, Richmond and Beauties do better on benches than on beds composed of six inches of soil over about the same depth of cinders? What is the best night temperature for Richmond? Could it be grown successfully in the same house with Killarney? Is it treated like Killarney? If not, in what respects does the treatment differ? My location is Alabama. F. G.

Killarney, Bride, Bridesmaid and Richmond will all do quite well in the same house. An average night temperature of 56 degrees during winter will be found about right. Unless you have customers who continue to call for Bride and Maid, you would be well advised in dropping these two in favor of Killarney and White Killarney. Both sell much better than the older sorts in all the markets; in fact, Bride and Maid are hard to sell when Killarney is procurable, and their numbers are being rapidly reduced.

All the roses named will do much better in solid beds than on raised benches. The latter would give you possibly a few more flowers in midwinter, but they would not average so well either in quantity or quality as those in beds. Richmond's treatment differs little from that of Killarney. The objection to Richmond is that it is not sufficiently double, and is of little value when hot weather has set in. There are promising red sports of Killarney which should be heard from later. Rhea Reid is also an excellent red rose, a good forcer, and with greater substance than Richmond it would certainly be worthy of a trial from you. C. W.

tle Memorial day offerings. "They outlast cut flowers many times over and are inexpensive," may be your argument to the customer.

Some nice orders are usually landed for decorative pieces for monuments. The wreath, as usual, holds the place of favor, and second in preference comes the heavy garland. How does a monument wreath differ from any other wreath? It should show from both sides. How shall I make one which shall be easily handled and placed? After ascertaining the size of the shaft, make two wreaths of the same size and fasten them together, back to back. Secure to the shaft near the center, and if there is nothing about the shape of the shaft which holds the double wreath in place, fasten it with a wire loop around the monument and fasten each end to the inside wire of the wreath frame. If the height of the monument is too much for you, make a loose wreath and secure the ends after encircling the shaft.

Garland for a Monument.

A heavy garland, made on a substantial rope of green and decorated with flowers, makes a handsome and dignified decoration for a monument. Make a loop at the top, of the proper size to catch on a top corner of the shaft. It may be necessary to strengthen its hold by wiring also. Then proceed to drape it around the body of the monument till a convenient place is found on the pedestal for a stop. Attach to a formal emblem, which may be placed on the ground or against the vase. To elaborate this, bank all around the base of the monument with blooming plants, ferns or tall spikes of cut flowers, sinking the vases or pots in the ground or covering them with moss or cut green. Let the whole decoration be in keeping with color restrictions.

If it is desired to decorate the grave or the lot further, cover it with panels, in sections of convenient size, of low-growing plants or cut flowers, after the manner of a casket panel. The garland for draping should be about one-half as long again as the height of the monument.

As incidental to this subject, the matter of inscriptions comes in for consideration. The artistic value of an inscription on a piece is small. It is one of the things which a designer of refined taste seldom suggests, and most pieces are the better for its absence. A pillow, a scroll, the arms of a cross—these are examples of a few places where an inscription may be happily placed. In addition to these, we find ourselves compelled to admit it on lodge and society emblems, but only such lettering as belongs to the badge and never for the purpose of suggesting the donors. Call attention to the fact that the significance of the emblem and the message of the flowers themselves should be sufficient, without the literal inscription. Gertrude Blair.

CEMETERY WREATHS.

Loose Flowers Often Unsatisfactory.

A good many florists, probably a great majority of them, still are selling 50-cent bunches as the big item for Memorial day.

But a good many retailers have found that the flower buying public always is ready to take up with any suggestion of better things—and this applies at Memorial day just as thoroughly as it does at Christmas or any other time.

Of all the unsatisfactory things florists can sell at Memorial day, loose cut flowers are the worst. The person who goes to the cemetery with loose cut flowers and no provision for using them there, invariably meets with disappointment. If there is no vase on the plot, all that can be done with loose flowers is to "strew" them on the grave—that amounts to throwing them on the ground, and it utterly destroys the sentiment on which the observance of the day is based. A person who pays a dollar for a dozen good carnations to take to a cemetery May 30, lays them reverently on a grave and contemplates the effect, is pretty sure to conclude it wasn't worth doing. Such a customer doesn't come back. If people ask for loose cut flowers, inquire if there is a vase at the cemetery. If not, offer to supply one at such small cost that the sale will be certain. That way saves the customers for other years.

Low Priced Wreaths Best.

The 50-cent bouquet is an improvement over the loose cut flowers—if there is no vase it will at least stay together when it is laid down—but there is a still better way at Memorial day.

The retailers who are looking up, not down, are selling wreaths and sprays to go to the cemeteries. Memorial day is not a time for high prices. The wreaths and sprays must be inexpensive, but they can be sold in enormous quantity. The experience of dozens of enterprising retailers proves it.

Blackistone, at Washington, does an enormous business in 2-dollar wreaths for May 30. The accompanying illustration shows Blackistone's newspaper advertisement. It is reduced to one-fourth the size it occupies in the Washington papers. At the same time, Blackistone backs up the newspaper advertising by filling his window with these Memorial wreaths. The sale is so great that the wreaths must be manufactured by hundreds in advance.

The prepared magnolia leaves that are now sold by all the supply houses, and which practically every retail florist carries in stock, make it possible to have stock wreaths on hand at all times; all they need is trimming with flowers. Also, wreaths for Memorial day can be made of galax leaves, boxwood, ivy or other materials. These can be made up in advance and stored where they will keep in perfect condition until the morning of May 30. Then they can be trimmed with whatever flowers have been ordered and made ready in quick time for delivery. When you come to think of it, a pretty nice wreath, not too large, can be made for $2. It takes only a few flowers to make quite a showing.

Sprays seem just a trifle less popular than wreaths for Memorial day. But you can make a mighty fine spray with a dozen peonies and double your money when you sell it at from $2 to $2.50. For a little more money sprays of roses, carnations or other flowers can be supplied.

The people who buy these wreaths or sprays at one Memorial day are almost certain to be customers as regularly as May 30 rolls around for years to come. When they take such flowers to the cemetery, they get an effect that looks to be worth the money. Work away from loose flowers or cheap bunches. Sell wreaths.

TAGGING WITH FLOWERS.

A new use for flowers has been discovered by A. L. Randall, the Chicago wholesaler. He says that the latest wrinkle in tag days is to do the tagging with a flower instead of a piece of pasteboard on a string. It recently has been tried in cities in the south and worked to perfection. People "loosened up" much more freely for a flower than they ever did for a tag. The charity profited, the local florist who supplied the flowers made a comfortable sum, and a big lot of stock was called out of a heavily loaded market.

The idea is capable of wide use; there is no copyright on it. Any florist can organize a tag day in his town; there always are charities that are willing to push along any new idea that promises a profit. Every florist who is in touch with the situation knows that there are times when he can buy large lots of cut flowers at a price that will give him a chance to get a good return for the effort necessary to work up the order; it don't take much talk to impress people with the fact that a tag day with flowers will make a hit.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

Remarkably fine collections of narcissi have been shown recently at the leading English shows in London and Birmingham. The leading hybridizers exhibited their latest novelties and several awards were made.

At a conference in Birmingham, the consensus of opinion showed disapproval of the lines on which the hybridizers are working, as they are neglecting garden decorative varieties and varieties of commercial value for cut flower purposes, and introducing such as are only of value to fanciers who grow for exhibition. Some of the hybridizers present admitted that among their seedlings they discarded many on account of their not being "show" flowers, and promised to consider the question of running a second department in their trial grounds, to meet popular demands. This view will commend itself to commercial growers, as there have been few narcissus introductions of commercial value in recent years. The word "commercial" is intended to be read in its full sense. True, the seedlings introduced have commercial value, but their sale is limited, at £3, £5 and £10 per bulb, to narcissus fanciers, and they do not pass through the hands of seed merchants.

Geraniums

DISCOLORED GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

Please tell me what is the matter with my geranium plants. I am enclosing some leaves, so that you can see how they look. F. G.

The leaves forwarded were of a uniform brown color when received, and it is difficult to tell what has been the trouble with them. Leaving cuttings too long in the propagating bench, keeping them too moist and close and damping the foliage too much are probable causes of the disease. Spread the plants out. Throw away any that are badly affected and pick bad foliage from the others. Give them all possible sunlight and abundant ventilation and let them dry out well between waterings; let the night temperature run from 45 to 50 degrees and no higher; keep the atmosphere on the dry side and your plants should show improvement. C. W.

GERANIUMS NOT FLOWERING.

Here is a sample of my geraniums this season. I have been growing them over thirty years and never had them like this before. The treatment has been the same as in other seasons, but you will notice that I have a great deal of leaf growth but scarcely any buds; also, the buds that come drop off as soon as they begin to show color. What is the trouble and how should I set about correcting it? R. C. L.

The sample plant received had an abundance of soft, rather weak-looking growths and the flower trusses were yellow. I think it probable that you have given the plants too much nitrogenous food. To grow them stocky and have them flower freely, little rotted manure should be used in the soil, and that should be thoroughly decomposed. Some fine bone should be added to the soil, at the rate of a 3-inch potful to a bushel of soil. Potting should be firmly done. The plants should never be kept wet, as this causes a rank, soft and almost flowerless growth. On the other hand, if let dry out fairly well between waterings, the wood becomes hard and stocky, and this tends to floriferousness. A cool, sunny and airy house suits geraniums. The temperature should not be higher than 50 degrees at night and 45 degrees will answer well; 55 degrees is too high. Avoid using stimulating foods, such as nitrate of soda, cow manure, etc., unless the plants look starved and appear in need of a tonic.

It is late now to correct any shortcomings in the geraniums, but if you take cuttings from strong, field-grown stock just before freezing weather, carry them cool over winter and pot along as suggested from time to time in The Review, you should have no further trouble of this kind. C. W.

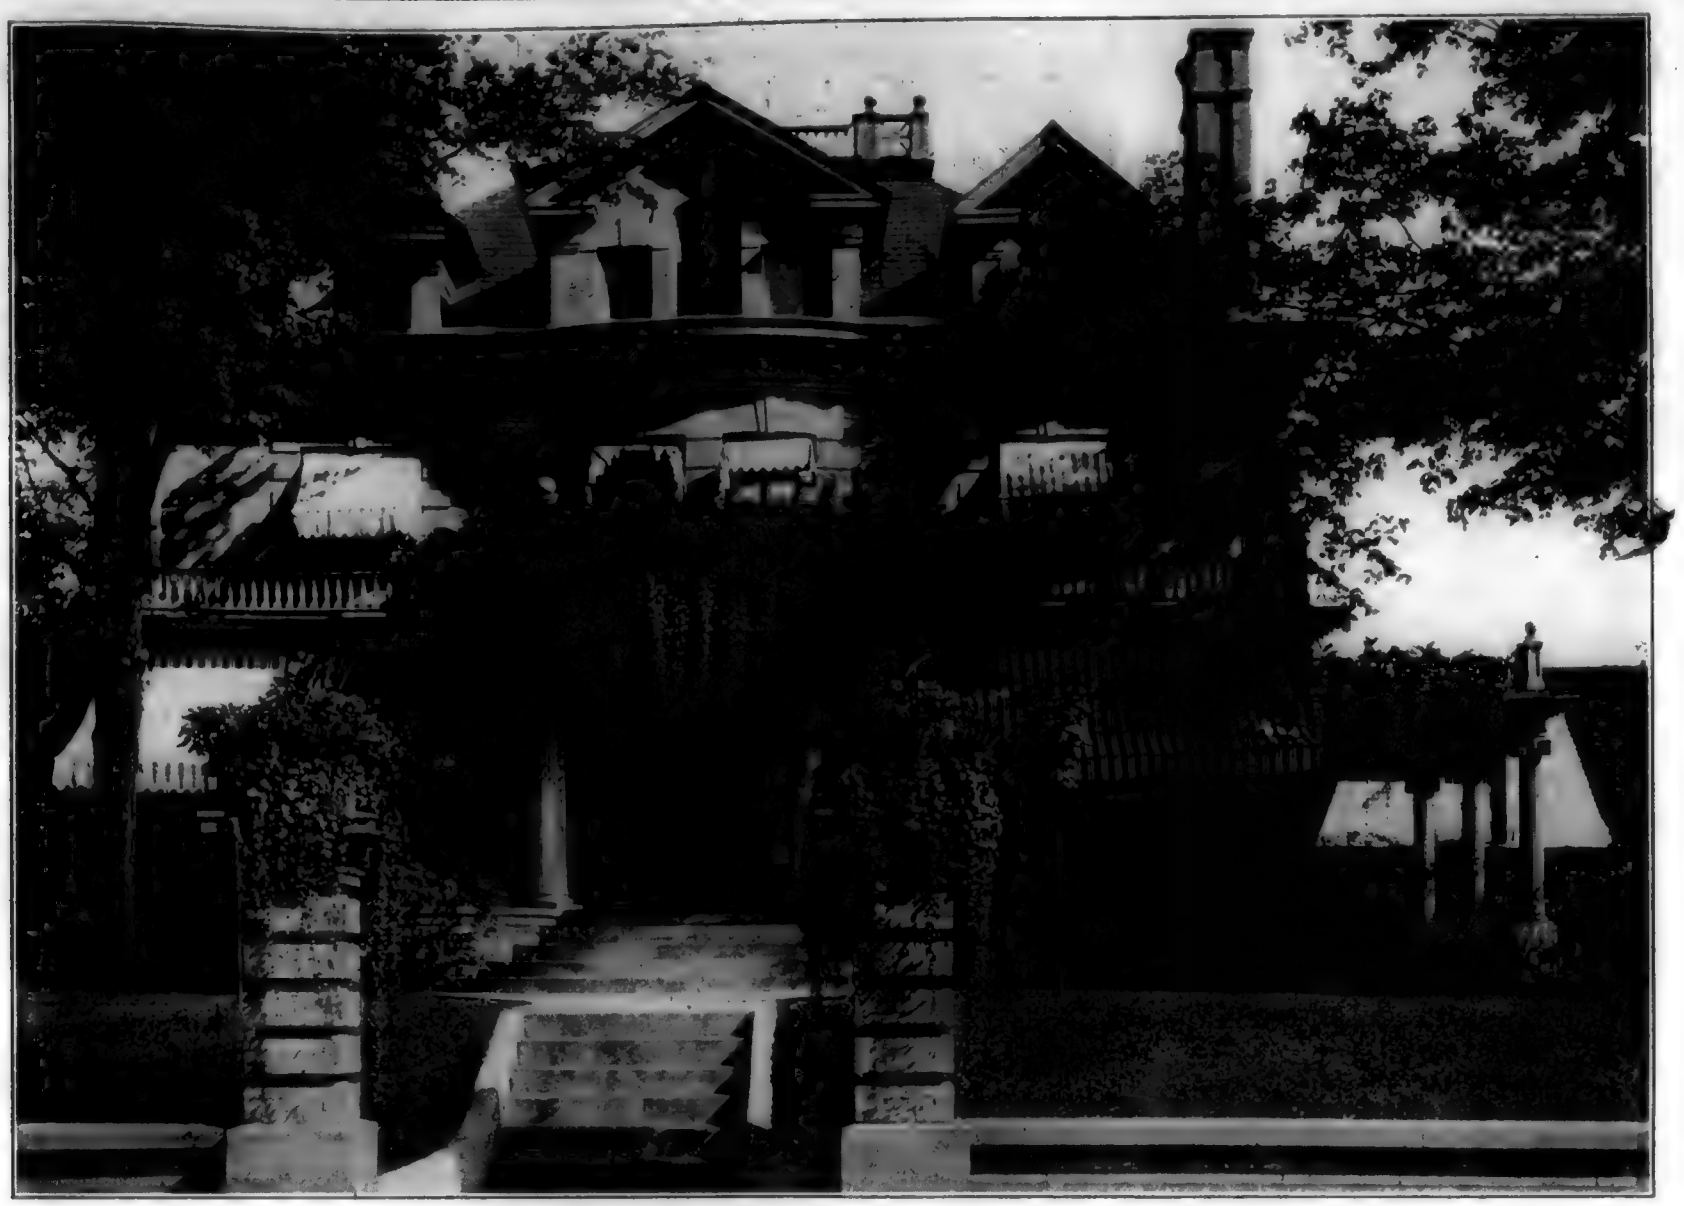
WINTER-FLOWERING GERANIUMS.

Will you please publish a list of the best winter-flowering geraniums? When should I start them to have nice plants in 4-inch pots in bloom for Thanksgiving? L. F. M.

In order to have good 4-inch pots of geraniums blooming for Thanksgiving, put the cuttings in 2-inch pots of sandy loam toward the end of May. They will root either in a greenhouse or cold-frame, and should not be shaded. Among double varieties you will find the following good: Alphonse Ricard, vermilion; Jean Viaud, mauve rose; E. H. Trego, bright scarlet; Beaute Poitevine, shrimp pink, shading to white; S. A. Nutt, dark red; Mme. Landry, salmon pink; La Favorite, pure white; Jean Oberle, peach pink, and Marquise de Castellane, soft crimson.

In the single section, the following make excellent pot plants: Paul Crampel, brilliant scarlet; Snowdrop, pure white; Jacquerie, rich glowing crimson; The Sirdar, rich scarlet, small white eye; Maxime Kovalevski, vermilion orange; Ian Maclaren, salmon orange; Scaramouche, reddish salmon, and Richmond Beauty, scarlet, white center.

For home retail trade the singles will be found much better than the doubles, as they flower more profusely, but for shipping to a distance doubles should have the call. Keep the flowers pinched off the plants until early in October, and then let them develop. Geraniums for pot culture are better if kept under glass all the time. C. W.



FILLING CEMETERY VASES.

After the arrival of the outdoor planting season, a considerable proportion of the business of florists who are situated in the neighborhood of cemeteries—especially if they are "good, live cemeteries"—consists in the filling of cemetery vases. Most florists find that this department of their work recompenses them well for all the time, effort and attention it requires.

Whether the profits are great or small depends much, of course, on two factors which largely determine results in every line of trade; namely, the degree of competition which the florist must encounter and the way in which he manages, systematizes and pushes the work. In both of these respects the cemetery work throughout the country is on a somewhat uncertain basis. The prices are not well established, and in some localities, therefore, one florist has a virtual monopoly of the business and there is nothing to prevent its being reasonably lucrative. In other communities the competition is ruthlessly keen and the prices are reduced till the margin of profit is so narrow as to be invisible to the naked eye. When one or two florists slash the prices recklessly, the others may be compelled to follow the bad example or retire from the struggle.

It seems to be becoming a more and more common practice, when the vases are to be filled, to remove them, or at least the detachable tops or bowls, to the greenhouses for that purpose. The late William Scott said: "We used to load up wagons and drive to the cemetery with plants and soil, but find a much better plan is to bring home the top or bowl of the vase, fill it and return it."

Many florists, having a large, well systematized trade of this sort, reserve a conspicuous part of their greenhouse grounds, near the store or the front entrance, as a place in which to collect, fill and arrange the vases. There the vases, when filled, receive the florist's expert attention until the date arrives for their delivery. The majority of them, perhaps, are delivered a few days before Memorial day.

The illustration shows a corner of the greenhouse grounds of Wm. Oakes & Son, Westfield, Mass., with some rows of cemetery vases, well filled and neatly arranged, awaiting the time for delivery. No data accompanied the photograph, but it speaks well for itself and serves well to illustrate the subject.

FOR PORCH AND PIAZZA.

Among the encouraging signs of the times, from the florist's point of view, is the increasing use, from year to year, of window and porch boxes, especially in the residence districts of the cities and larger towns. There is no good reason why the filling of these boxes should not be a profitable branch of the business, if well managed, and if the right preparations are made before the opening of the season. It is well, also, to begin the season early, by encouraging the customers to have the planting done as soon as the weather is favorable, rather than postpone the work unnecessarily. As a means of furnishing this encouragement, and at the same time increasing the demand as well as hastening it, perhaps the florist can employ no better method than to display one or two tastefully planted boxes in front of his own store. He can thus supply a strong incentive and a valuable object lesson.

Of course any fairly enterprising florist attends to the matter of providing beforehand a good supply of suitable soil, and it is hardly necessary to remind him of the fact that, since the plants are crowded into narrow space and their root run is restricted, the soil must be proportionately rich. The compost generally recommended for the purpose is about as follows: Two-thirds fibrous loam, one-third dry cow manure passed through a coarse screen, and a 3-inch potful of fine bone to each bushel of soil.

There seems to be general agreement in the opinion that the box planting should be done at the greenhouses, rather than at the customers' homes. One of The Review's correspondents says emphatically: "All boxes are best filled at the greenhouses. One experience in carting soil and plants to a distance, and being short of this or that, will convince anyone of this."

The photograph here reproduced shows a pleasing sample of this sort of porch and piazza decoration—a sample of the work done by W. A. & J. S. Bitler, of the Highland Park Greenhouses, Kokomo, Ind. The residence that is thus beautified belongs to A. V. Conradt, superintendent of the Great Western Pottery Works, of Kokomo. The boxes were filled with plain green vinca, variegated vinca, Sprengeri, Latania Borbonica, geraniums, marguerites, coleus, and Ageratum Little Blue Star. They were filled May 26, 1910, and were photographed August 26, 1910.

HANGING BASKETS.

While hanging baskets are not used to anything like the extent of either window or piazza boxes, there seems to be an increasing number of these called for each year. Wire baskets, of course, are the best. Wooden ones are clumsy and usually square, which is not a suitable shape. It may be that orders for these baskets of plants are not received until the time they are wanted post-haste, but if it is known in advance what will have to be filled it is a great advantage to do the work now and give the plants a chance to get established

Baskets filled even a couple of weeks before being sent out do not have the freshly filled appearance incidental to those just made up, and there are occasional stormy days, even in the busy month of May, when this work can be done. Line the baskets well with moss; either sphagnum or sheet moss will answer, and use soil well enriched with old rotted manure. Remember the plants have only a limited space in which to root and if the soil is not good at the start they will soon show signs of starvation.

Almost any of the pendent plants used ordinarily in window boxes are adaptable for baskets, such as green and variegated vincas, maurandias, glechomas, English ivy, Lobelia gracilis, some of the begonias, Asparagus Sprengeri, nasturtiums, ivy-leaved geraniums and others which might be named. Asparagus Sprengeri answers nicely by itself where the location is somewhat shaded and green effects are wanted. Ivy geraniums also prefer a little shade, as do fuchsias, which are excellent basket subjects. Among the finest flowering basket plants where something out of the ordinary and rather choice is needed, are the achimines. These can be planted all over the basket. They must have a shaded house to bring them along and a fair amount of warmth, and if given a sheltered place under the piazza they make a beautiful show, no basket whatever being visible.

PEONY CULTURE.

[A paper by E. J. Shaylor, of Wellesley Farms, Mass., read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, May 16, 1911.]

The peony is a native of cold countries mostly, and is hardy. The ancients used both the roots and seeds in a medicinal way. It is related that in the Trojan war one Pæon used the roots to heal the sick and the wounded, and from him the name was derived. I remember vaguely that in my childhood, about sixty years ago, some of my neighbors obtained some roots to be steeped for medicine; so its use for such purposes came nearly down to the present. The roots, dried, were worn also about the neck to ward off disease. The seeds were taken inwardly to shoo away the nightmare.

We are all acquainted with a head gardener of Wellesley, who, hearing a workman complain of malaria, took from his pocket some peony seeds, and handing them to him in a joking way, said, "Here, Tim, are some pills; try them and maybe they will help you." Sure enough, Tim took them regularly for a few days, until the head gardener thought the joke had gone far enough, and then he asked him how he was. Tim said he was better, and gave the pills credit. Then the head gardener told him what they were. To the ancients it was dead earnest and no joke. They were cured, no doubt, by faith, a thing which in our day has been capitalized as a huge dividend paying religion.

Planting.

The planting of peonies should be done with care. It is not enough simply to dig a hole and put them in. Trench the ground deeply and work in old manure. It does good to mix in some bone meal or hardwood ashes, or a potato fertilizer strong in potash. The most successful field planting I ever made was done in this way. The patch was new ground which had been grubbed over in summer. In September furrows were dug to the depth of twelve or fourteen inches and the loam was piled along the rows in ridges. In the bottom of the trenches old manure was put and chopped into the soil with the spade. On the ridges of loam that lay along the trenches we scattered some air-slaked lime and some potato fertilizer. As the roots were set, this loam was filled in, thus mixing the lime and the fertilizer well with the soil. The next spring, when the plants were just coming up, some bone meal was scattered along one side of the rows, and some of the same kind of potato fertilizer along the other side, and these were cultivated in with a hand cultivator. This planting gave the best results, both in blooms and roots, that I ever obtained.

Never use any fresh manure. One year I made a mistake and set some rows of peonies so that the rows ran through a place where a pile of manure had lain for six months. They were set in the fall. The next spring I noticed at once that the peonies where the manure pile had lain were in trouble. I took them up and scrubbed them off in a tub of water. The strong soil was eating them up. They were set out in another place and I saved most of them. I have no doubt that, if they had been left where they were, they would all have been lost.

Be sure that your place has good drainage. If the soil becomes sour or soggy, good-by to your roots; I don't know why, only I know that it will either kill them outright or make them worthless. After they are set out in good shape, do not forget that you must agitate the hoe about them quite often. Clean culture is the best trick to play in your garden.

Diseases and Pests.

Insects trouble them some. The cutworm likes them for breakfast, dinner and supper, and for lunch between meals. I have received letters asking, "What shall I do to keep the ants off the peony buds?" My answer is, "Nothing." The sap that is in the stalk is like a sweet syrup, and it exudes at the top. The ants only drink that. I presume the sweetness of the stalk is the reason for the cutworms' partiality to them. The rose bug comes about the time peonies are ending, and they eat the petals off the blooms. Generally, however, peonies are over before these come in numbers sufficient to do much harm.

Peonies have been considered ironclad, but my experience is that they have their chills, the same as I have. The black rot gets in and eats away the roots. Air-slaked lime is the best remedy I have found. Dig away the loam, put in some lime and put back fresh loam. If you can move them to a new place, then cut the rot away, dust the roots with lime and reset them. I think this is caused sometimes by their being set entirely in the shade, where dampness does it. If your place is shady, then set the roots four feet apart, so the air can circulate freely about them. I do not recommend setting peonies in complete shade; they should have half sun, anyway.

Club-foot or Knotty Root.

There is also the club-foot or knotty root, which affects peony roots. I have not been able to master this. Roots have been sent to Professor Bessie at Miami, Fla., one of the best government experts; also to Amherst, in our own state, and to Professor Whetzel, at Cornell, and I have not had any help from any of them. Professor Bessie advised soaking the roots in a solution of formalin. This I did, but it did not help me any. I wrote to A. Dessert, and he said he had some of these affected roots, from the same source from which mine came, "for ten years and they have never bloomed, and I consider them lost." I got out of patience with mine, and, after keeping them five years, threw most of them on the dump. In some extreme cases, some of these roots have grown out of it. As for me, I have some now which I have had for eight years and which are failures.

I am not sure but there is a blight that affects the leaf and stem and causes the root to rot—something in the nature of the potato blight. Some few roots seem to be affected in this way. I have never been troubled with it except in a small way, and have paid no attention to it. It could, no doubt, be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture.

Where the buds are blighted, it is well to cut them off and burn them up. The stem-wilt is a fungous blight, but it does not live over winter. Plants affected one year may be unaffected the next.

Japanese or Imperial Peonies.

The varieties which are called Japanese peonies, or imperial peonies by the Englishmen, have their ups and downs. They seem to go all to pieces some years and do nothing at all. They do not seem to be of good constitution. Peonies of this kind that are grown from seed here in America may be more vigorous. There are some others, among the regular peony roots, which go to pieces when they are divided. They are weak. Most of Richardson's seedlings do not recover after division for three or four years. A few of these can be counted on, such as Harry Woodward—or grandiflora, as I think it was originally named—Rubra superba and Milton Hill. The others seem to be weak.

All my English imperial peonies went to pieces after division, and many of the English varieties of the regular peonies.

There are many positions in which peonies can be planted to be effective. Their blooms are large and their colors carry well long distances. In hedges, I would use solid colors. For borders and beds, use mixed colors. Borders and beds are best used where one wants to cut flowers for the indoor rooms. The sun fades the flowers out quickly. The most chaste and delicate colors will change in a forenoon in the sun. To get these fresh and delicate colors for your vases indoors, I advise cutting when the buds are only half open and putting them down-cellar; then, when they are brought up, they will quickly open, retaining all their beautiful colors and fragrance.

Growing Them From Seed.

To grow peonies from seed is interesting. Gather the seed as the pods open in August and September, and sow at once. I sow in drills about as you would peas. Some come up the first year, some in two years, and some not until three years after planting.

After they have grown a year in these rows, I transplant them, giving them room enough so I can leave them in one place until they bloom, so as to see which ones to try out. These are taken out and put into the trial grounds, where they will not have to be moved for three or four years. No one can tell what a peony will amount to until it has been set about three years and has become established.

Seedlings will not give characteristic flowers in less than two or three years. They are like divisions of old roots. I have had divisions produce single blooms the first year, and after two or three years the full doubles came. Some think they "wabble," but it is not so. I never knew the color to change. The form alters; that is all. Do not name a seedling until you have flowered it three or four years in a permanent place. You can not grow peonies from seed with any satisfactory success unless you possess lots of patience.

Some Reliable Varieties.

Now a word to the florists. There are about a half-dozen white or nearly white varieties on which you can count for money-making blooms. They will not disappoint you when any one has blooms. They will always be choice and bring the top figures. These are Festiva maxima, Mme. de Verneville, Baroness Schroeder, Marie Lemoine, Eugenie Verdier, often sold as Pottsi alba, and Harry Woodward. Two of these are early, one is midseason, two are medium late, and one is the latest bloomer of all.

There are lots of pinks and flesh colors. The first pinks for me came from Umbellata rosea—or Sarah Bernhardt, as it was first called—Edith Lyttleton and Polyphemus. These were all two days or more ahead of Edulis superba. In fact, they were the first blooms for weddings or receptions that I had. The list of pinks is a long one, with all shades from those that start with a blush to the deeper ones.

In reds or crimsons there are only a few.

Disbudding and Cutting.

To grow large blooms, you must disbud. The blooms wanted to sell by the dozen can all be disbudded. The blooms wanted for decorative purposes, where the varieties bloom in clusters, should be left with all the buds on. There are a number of varieties that open both the terminal bud and the laterals at the same time; these make a large show, giving a stalk with three or four blooms.

In cutting peonies it is best not to cut more than one-half of the foliage away. If a clump has twenty stalks, I would not cut more than ten stalks. Leave at least one leaf-stem on each stalk; it is really better to leave two when you can. Some have ruined their roots by cutting all the stalks and also cutting closely. That is the way to kill anything—cutting it down when in full leaf. It is more profitable to keep your roots vigorous and growing than to sell everything out one year and ruin your roots. If your customers insist on long stems or nothing, then sell them the clumps, charging what they are worth added to the cost of the flowers.

I have not told you anything of the new and superb varieties that are to be had in peonies. Each year brings out new ones. Some of them are, without doubt, acquisitions to the existing varieties. Their story is one by itself, which I will leave for another day.

Treatment of Old Clumps.

After your clumps become old and the blooms are smaller, it is best to feed them liberally each spring by digging in bone meal about the roots. A good potato fertilizer, which runs 4—6—10, is also good. If they then do not grow good blooms, divide them and set in new ground. This is advisable, anyway, once in eight or ten years.

You will all find that in growing anything well, it will take your best care and thought. It is not easy, and you must not think of it except in this light, that to do anything that is a credit to you takes great pains.

About all I have said to you has been gained from practice, not from observation. I tell it to you to help you, to spur you on to do your best with these noble flowers. To grow fine flowers is grand work, but to tell others how to do it is grander and not nearly so hard.

A BAD CASE OF THRIPS.

I am sending you some samples of carnations. Plase tell me what is the matter with them. Last year the trouble developed about the middle of May and ruined the crop. It first appeared when the buds began to show color. The stock now is in fine shape. There is a heavy crop of buds, with nice, stiff, long stems, but those spots are beginning to show on the petals. The carnations are planted in a house 30x90, with side and ridge ventilation, and the air is fully turned on in fair weather. They are planted in about five inches of soil. When I benched them I used well rotted sheep manure and bone meal; I have used no fertilizer since then. I water when the soil becomes dry—about every third day. Now, what causes the petals to decay or turn brown and how can I prevent it? J. R. J.

The cause of your trouble is one of the most common ones that confront the carnation grower; indeed, it probably gives us more concern than any other. There is perhaps no pest or disease which we have to combat so continually and persistently as we do these thrips. They are undoubtedly at the bottom of your trouble; the brown edges of the petals show that most conclusively.

This late in the season, with warm weather right upon you, you will find it an uphill job to get the pest under control. With a good foothold in a carnation house, they multiply by the millions after warm weather sets in, and it takes heroic measures to get rid of them. By spraying or fumigating throughout the winter we keep them down, and afterward, with a little increase in the doses applied, we are able usually to keep the plants fairly free from them. Persistence is certainly the key to success in combating thrips.

Get a supply of one of the standard nicotine solutions and use it both as a spray and as a fumigant; alternate between the two and skip one day between applications. Keep this up until you can see that you are getting the upper hand; then gradually diminish until you are making two applications each week.

Bear in mind that the spots will not disappear as soon as you have destroyed the insects. They puncture the petals when these are young and tender, and perhaps two weeks or more pass before the damage is really apparent. You should, however, begin to see an improvement in about three weeks if your efforts are successful. Tear open a bud occasionally and look for a tiny insect, about one-sixteenth of an inch long and of a yellowish-brown color. I found plenty of them in the specimens you forwarded. These puncture the petals, destroying the tissue, which turns brown or a dead color when exposed to the sun. When you can find no more of these insects, your trouble will disappear. A. F. J. B.

THE BRITISH CARNATION SHOW.

The annual spring show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society was held in the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, May 2 and 3. The display of blooms was fully up to the average and in several classes the quality has never been surpassed. Richness in color and size of blooms were especially commented upon. Gold medals were awarded to artistic arrangements of choice collections from Young & Co., Cheltenham; C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, and H. Burnett, Guernsey. There was only one new variety before the floral committee, Edith Waters, bright cerise, from C. F. Waters, Balcombe, and it received an award of merit.

The American challenge cup for three vases of American varieties distributed since January 1, 1909, was won by B. Bell, Guernsey, with J. Whitcomb Riley, Bay State and Gov. Deneen. It was acknowledged that all three were shown better than ever previously seen in England. W. E. Wallace, Eaton Bray, was second with Scarlet Glow, May Day and Delight. The Brunton challenge cup for three vases of British raised varieties was won by C. Engelmann, with Rex, Regina and Carola. The Covent Garden challenge bowl for two varieties, sixty blooms of each, went to W. E. Wallace with White Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress. A silver gilt medal for the best vase in the show was carried off by B. Bell with magnificent blooms of Mrs. C. W. Ward.

In the color classes the competition between professional growers was keen, most of the varieties winning being of American origin. In the classes for amateur growers there was spirited competition, and eight dinner table decorations were a splendid feature of the show.

At the dinner, the chairman, J. S. Brunton, in proposing the toast of the king and queen, alluded to the great satisfaction that existed in the minds of all carnation growers at the choice of her majesty in selecting the carnation for the coronation banquet. No doubt it would prove a boon to growers, as it would go a long way towards still further raising the popularity of the flower. Messrs Brunton, Engelmann and Wallace reported on their visit to the National Show at Boston, Mass., and to the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society. The reports were listened to with much interest. The society's winter show will be held December 5 and 6. Bee.

CULTURAL NOTES.

All-the-year Indoor Culture.

For the method of growing carnations in pots all summer, or for the all-season indoor culture, I have no use, as I think both methods are too expensive. In the first method the plants do not get branched enough to make it pay at the prices we are realizing for them. The watering with the hose all summer and shifting from one size of pot to another are also big items against this plan. The indoor culture tends to weaken the constitution of our stock. I think that if this method were kept up every year with the same stock, our favorites would run out in a few years and there would be a good deal more opportunity for the seedling raiser. Is it any wonder that poor Lawson went to the bad, considering the treatment to which it was subjected? It seems to me my Lawson family is today in as good health and vigor as ever. Another variety that would not stand much abuse is Beacon. The propagator can not be too cautious in the selection of stock, as it is. Many of you probably have noticed how some plants have more split flowers than others. It can be detected by examining the plants closely, when you will easily notice the weak constitution of some of them. As far as I can judge, the nature of the carnation, unlike that of the rose, has not yet been sufficiently transformed to adapt it to all-year indoor culture.

Preparations for Housing.

Now as to housing the stock. In the first place, I should not have neglected, of course, to prepare my soil. I think the easiest way is to plow a piece of sod land in fall, with a liberal coat of manure on it. The frost does the chopping during the winter. In the spring repeat the operation several times. In this way we can save a man's wages for several weeks. If it can not be done this way, make the pile as low as possible, so the frost and air can get at it. You can not put in too much fertilizer. One-fourth stable manure is not too much, if well rotted—horse manure for heavy soil and cow manure for light soil. As to the texture of the soil, the carnation is not particular, although I am inclined to think that moderately heavy soil is preferable. I have heard growers say that in solid beds the soil does not need to be renewed every year. I wish this were so, but I think it pays more than double to do it; we gain that much in quality.

In preparing the benches before planting, I must say that it is important to see that the whole house, as well as the benches, is thoroughly cleaned and whitewashed, in order to kill as many insects as possible, especially thrips, which seem to be quite a nuisance in plant growing. Six inches of soil I consider about the right depth for carnations.

In the House.

I do not think it necessary to give details as to the operation of planting, but can not refrain from cautioning the planter as to depth. Planting too deep is certainly one of the main causes of stem-rot. I try to place the plants as nearly as possible in the same position as they were when standing outside, roots and all. I plant them 10x11 inches apart. By doubling up I arrange it so that I have plants with ten to fifteen well developed shoots. This insures a fairly good crop for the season. After planting I give a good soaking singly. After that I keep them only moderately moist at the roots, but keep up frequent syringing on sunny days until they are started. If the weather happens to be sunny during planting time, a little shade for a week or so is beneficial, but it should not be left on too long, or it will cause a weak and spindly growth. We can not be too particular at this time of the game, for on the starting of the plants depends a great deal of our season's success.

The next consideration is the cultivating and staking. All I have to say here is, do not wait too long; we all know the consequences. It pays to disbud before the side buds get as big as the main bud; yet it is not advisable to take them too small.

OUTDOOR INSECT PESTS.

For the next few weeks insect pests outdoors will abound and, in order to save trees from defoliation, insure perfect fruit and protect a large variety of plants from complete or partial destruction, a vigorous warfare must be waged. No florist's outfit is complete without some of the paraphernalia for spraying trees and shrubs. Barrel sprayers mounted on wheels, or ordinary barrels placed in an express wagon, with a pump attachment, are serviceable. All sprayers should have agitators to keep the spraying liquid thoroughly stirred. It would seem as though many florists might do considerable of this work and make a good profit on it. The necessary outfit is not costly and once customers find that they can have their trees and shrubs protected at a moderate cost, the up-to-date florist who enters this field is assured of a good return on the little money invested.

The slug or leaf roller will already in some cases have attacked hardy roses. Two or three dustings of hellebore early in the morning, while the leaves are slightly damp, usually settles them. If they have been allowed to get a start, it will pay to go over them and squeeze the slugs in the rolled up leaves. Spraying with Ivory soap, Whale Oil soap, kerosene emulsion or any of the nicotine extracts will take care of aphis. Where a hose can be called into use and there is a good water pressure, the surest way to keep spider, white thrips and aphis in check is to syringe the plants vigorously every evening. Arsenate of lead should not be used on roses. It will kill any slugs on the foliage, but whitens the leaves so that they are unsightly. If used at all on them, a little yellow ocher and Prussian blue should be added to make the color like the foliage.

Arsenate of lead is the best of all poisons for leaf-eating worms of every description, and while most commodities have been rising in price of late years, this has been steadily declining, the present prices being the lowest on record. For the currant worms, potato beetles, tussock moths, gypsy moths, brown-tail moths, elm beetles, tent caterpillars and other pests, if the foliage is sprayed as soon as developed at the rate of four pounds to fifty gallons of water and well dried in before rain comes, there is little fear of defoliation. It is sometimes necessary to make the mixture stronger if the caterpillars have been allowed to get in their work and have reached a considerable size; in such cases five to six pounds or even more can be used with perfect safety.

A BAD CASE OF THRIPS.

I am sending you some samples of carnations. Plase tell me what is the matter with them. Last year the trouble developed about the middle of May and ruined the crop. It first appeared when the buds began to show color. The stock now is in fine shape. There is a heavy crop of buds, with nice, stiff, long stems, but those spots are beginning to show on the petals. The carnations are planted in a house 30x90, with side and ridge ventilation, and the air is fully turned on in fair weather. They are planted in about five inches of soil. When I benched them I used well rotted sheep manure and bone meal; I have used no fertilizer since then. I water when the soil becomes dry—about every third day. Now, what causes the petals to decay or turn brown and how can I prevent it? J. R. J.

The cause of your trouble is one of the most common ones that confront the carnation grower; indeed, it probably gives us more concern than any other. There is perhaps no pest or disease which we have to combat so continually and persistently as we do these thrips. They are undoubtedly at the bottom of your trouble; the brown edges of the petals show that most conclusively.

This late in the season, with warm weather right upon you, you will find it an uphill job to get the pest under control. With a good foothold in a carnation house, they multiply by the millions after warm weather sets in, and it takes heroic measures to get rid of them. By spraying or fumigating throughout the winter we keep them down, and afterward, with a little increase in the doses applied, we are able usually to keep the plants fairly free from them. Persistence is certainly the key to success in combating thrips.

Get a supply of one of the standard nicotine solutions and use it both as a spray and as a fumigant; alternate between the two and skip one day between applications. Keep this up until you can see that you are getting the upper hand; then gradually diminish until you are making two applications each week.

Bear in mind that the spots will not disappear as soon as you have destroyed the insects. They puncture the petals when these are young and tender, and perhaps two weeks or more pass before the damage is really apparent. You should, however, begin to see an improvement in about three weeks if your efforts are successful. Tear open a bud occasionally and look for a tiny insect, about one-sixteenth of an inch long and of a yellowish-brown color. I found plenty of them in the specimens you forwarded. These puncture the petals, destroying the tissue, which turns brown or a dead color when exposed to the sun. When you can find no more of these insects, your trouble will disappear. A. F. J. B.

THE BRITISH CARNATION SHOW.

The annual spring show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society was held in the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, May 2 and 3. The display of blooms was fully up to the average and in several classes the quality has never been surpassed. Richness in color and size of blooms were especially commented upon. Gold medals were awarded to artistic arrangements of choice collections from Young & Co., Cheltenham; C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, and H. Burnett, Guernsey. There was only one new variety before the floral committee, Edith Waters, bright cerise, from C. F. Waters, Balcombe, and it received an award of merit.

The American challenge cup for three vases of American varieties distributed since January 1, 1909, was won by B. Bell, Guernsey, with J. Whitcomb Riley, Bay State and Gov. Deneen. It was acknowledged that all three were shown better than ever previously seen in England. W. E. Wallace, Eaton Bray, was second with Scarlet Glow, May Day and Delight. The Brunton challenge cup for three vases of British raised varieties was won by C. Engelmann, with Rex, Regina and Carola. The Covent Garden challenge bowl for two varieties, sixty blooms of each, went to W. E. Wallace with White Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress. A silver gilt medal for the best vase in the show was carried off by B. Bell with magnificent blooms of Mrs. C. W. Ward.

In the color classes the competition between professional growers was keen, most of the varieties winning being of American origin. In the classes for amateur growers there was spirited competition, and eight dinner table decorations were a splendid feature of the show.

At the dinner, the chairman, J. S. Brunton, in proposing the toast of the king and queen, alluded to the great satisfaction that existed in the minds of all carnation growers at the choice of her majesty in selecting the carnation for the coronation banquet. No doubt it would prove a boon to growers, as it would go a long way towards still further raising the popularity of the flower. Messrs Brunton, Engelmann and Wallace reported on their visit to the National Show at Boston, Mass., and to the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society. The reports were listened to with much interest. The society's winter show will be held December 5 and 6. Bee.

CULTURAL NOTES.

All-the-year Indoor Culture.

For the method of growing carnations in pots all summer, or for the all-season indoor culture, I have no use, as I think both methods are too expensive. In the first method the plants do not get branched enough to make it pay at the prices we are realizing for them. The watering with the hose all summer and shifting from one size of pot to another are also big items against this plan. The indoor culture tends to weaken the constitution of our stock. I think that if this method were kept up every year with the same stock, our favorites would run out in a few years and there would be a good deal more opportunity for the seedling raiser. Is it any wonder that poor Lawson went to the bad, considering the treatment to which it was subjected? It seems to me my Lawson family is today in as good health and vigor as ever. SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Memorial Day Crops.

Memorial day is near. It is the time when flowers of every description sell well. As a cut flower holiday it is away ahead of Easter, as gluts are practically unknown. Everyone wants flowers on this occasion and every effort should be made to time all possible crops about as exactly as weather conditions will permit. It is easy to force along late lilies and the early ones can be cut and stood in water in a cold cellar. Such crops as ten weeks' stocks, antirrhinums, candytuft and feverfew, if well advanced, must have the glass shaded and be kept as cool as possible. Hold as many of these flowers as possible for Memorial day, as the demand for them is not now good. Gladioli of both the large and small-flowered types are invaluable at this season. They should be cut as soon as the first flowers open and kept in a good bulk of cold water. Spanish iris, if in flats, can be moved and retarded, but if in benches it will be difficult to hold it back. Spiræa Japonica is a useful cheap flower for bunching. Pots can be easily retarded, but when planted out it may be necessary to cut part of the crop and hold in water. Much can be done in the case of all these Memorial day crops by shading the glass rather heavily and giving an abundance of ventilation.

Asters.

The ground for the main batch of asters should have been plowed in the autumn and, if kept well stirred by the horse or hand cultivator, should now be in nice condition for planting. If cutworms are troublesome, spread some lime or soot over the ground and scratch it in. If grass land borders your aster patch, scatter a little gas lime along the edges of the grass; cutworms have no use for this. If the seeds were sown outdoors, the plants probably will not be ready to plant out before the middle of June, but if started under glass they will require planting earlier. Take advantage of cool, moist and cloudy weather to do the planting, and be sure to allow the strong, vigorous varieties, such as Vick's Branching and Semple's, more room than you would smaller sorts, such as Victoria, Peony, Perfection and Queen of the Market. To have good asters, the land must have been well manured, and in dry seasons, such as we have had of late years, bottom lands have given plants with really remarkable stems. Asters will stand a surprisingly long drought if they have a deep soil and the same is kept persistently cultivated.

The earliest batch of plants set out in greenhouse benches of the varieties Queen of the Market and Dawn are now running up to flower and will furnish some cutting during June and July, at a season when carnations are of poor quality. They are now filling the benches with roots and require a good water supply. The surface soil has just had a light mulch of old manure, which prevents excessive drying out. Plenty of ventilation night and day is given, as asters resent anything like coddling.

Marguerites.

The yellow marguerites are more popular than the white ones in the markets as cut flowers, but they do not as a rule make as shapely plants. They do not carry over the summer as well as the white varieties. Usually if set outdoors they make some blind wood or die altogether. It has been found that it pays to carry a quantity of the old plants over in frames, where they can be plunged, with a cheesecloth or lath shading run at a good height above them to break the direct rays of the sun. The lath shade is preferable, as wind storms will sometimes wreck the cheesecloth covering. Keep the plants where they can get some shade and necessary water and you will get a good crop of cuttings in the fall. The white sorts can be planted in the field and if well headed back will break and give an abundant crop of cuttings in September and October; and, by the way, if you want a few marguerites for early flowering, of specimen size, dig up and pot some of these old plants. The fine specimens seen at the flower show in Boston were old plants carried over and any commercial grower having such plants could readily get a fancy price for them.

Primulas.

The earliest sowing of primulas should now be in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots. The compost should be light; equal parts of leaf-mold, not too much decayed, and loam with a little sand is suitable for the initial potting. After this date the plants should be grown in a coldframe and if they are partially plunged in fine coal ashes all the better. This keeps the roots cool and moist. A spraying overhead each afternoon will be beneficial. After the end of May it is better to raise the sashes eight or ten inches top and bottom, to allow of a free circulation of air all the time, and instead of whitewashing the glass, use lath shades, which give necessary light but keep the plants much cooler. These of course are only to be used during strong sunshine. A little sun morning and late afternoon will help to stiffen up the little plants.

Late sowings of any of the primulas will all be better in frames, as greenhouses after this time become too hot for their proper welfare. Primulas, be it remembered, come from a cool latitude and our hot summers are not to their liking; however, they can be well grown in frames facing the north.

IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

By W. A. Cull, Edmonton, England.

Our American friends' wholesale establishments are beautifully fitted up, and each contains a cool chamber for the storage of unsold flowers. We visited two or three dozen of these establishments. Little plant trade done by this class of florists. In Philadelphia we visited the seed warehouses of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., beautifully fitted up. The quantities of sweet peas on hand from the firm's seed farms in California seemed large enough to supply the world. I was greatly impressed by the way in which Mr. Burpee looks after the comforts of his work people. Between 200 and 300 are employed, many of the girls earning from 25 to 30 shillings a week packeting seeds and making up orders. A large restaurant forms part of the establishment, and meals can be obtained at cost price —lower than the prices prevailing in the public restaurants. This provision is much esteemed by the employees.

We called at White Marsh, Md., where R. Vincent, Jr., and his sons run a splendid up-to-date nursery, growing large quantities of geraniums, fuchsias, coleus, cannas, etc. Messrs. Vincent own much of the woodland around the nurseries, and run their own saw mill for making packing cases for plants and flowers.

I think Washington the most beautiful of all the American cities we saw, though Chicago is a wonderful city. The glasshouses of the Poehlmann brothers cover forty-five acres, by far the largest cut flower nurseries we visited.

Arriving in Boston, we spent four days there, the principal attraction being the National Show, which did not come up to our Temple shows. We visited the nurseries of Mr. Sim, where sweet peas and violets were well done—one house of sweet peas, 400 feet long, forty-three feet wide and twenty-three feet high!

By C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden.

The great American trip, so eagerly looked forward to for many weeks, is a thing of the past. We have survived the voyage, with its pleasures and otherwise, and even the banquets have left nothing worse than a disordered liver; as for the rest, nothing but the memory remains.

Compost Mixer and Pulverizer Used by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.

Now, as I sit here and dream it all over again, the one question that rises uppermost is: "Was it worth while?" My answer now is, and will ever remain, "Yes, most decidedly it was." It was worth while not only as a grower, it was worth while as a man and as a citizen.

As growers we have seen many things. If we make the best of them and make use of them, they will repay us the cost of the trip several times over. Sometimes we thought—and rightly, too—we can do this better at home; but in many ways we must confess that things are right ahead of us, especially in labor-saving devices, the perfect heating systems, the convenient packing houses and cool storage chambers. Yet with it all the trade appears to be in its infancy. Some of the largest establishments are not twenty years old; I wonder what the next ten years will bring forth; it will be worth while to watch and even go over again, in spite of the cost, the distance and the intervening Atlantic.

I certainly did not see so much of the petty jealousy among the members of our craft as is to be found on this little island of ours, and in all our wanderings we did not find any closed doors. On the contrary, everybody seemed eager to show his brother craftsman whatever he had. I am inclined to think this is the kind of policy that makes for progress. Progress is written in very large letters wherever one looks "on the other side," and before many years are over I hope to go again, for I like to see progress when she moves fast.

Houghton, Mich.—Harper & Thomas have opened a flower store in connection with their undertaking establishment. The members of the firm are Josiah Harper and James Thomas.

MIXING THE COMPOST.

The visitors at the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., invariably are impressed by the mechanical features of the establishment; hand labor still is the rule in a great many greenhouse plants, and the amount of labor performed by machinery at the Poehlmann establishment seems to impress the average visitor as strongly as any other feature of the place.

Just now one of the busiest Poehlmann machines is that shown in the accompanying illustration. It is the pulverizer and mixer for compost. In every large establishment the changing of the soil is a tremendous task; the mixing of the compost, the importance of which justifies infinite care, consumes the time of many men. But at Poehlmanns' the work is done by electric power and all that is required is a gang of shovelers to load the conveyor.

The compost is stacked along the ends of the houses in the autumn as it would be in any smaller place—a layer of soil and a layer of manure. When the time arrives for putting in the new soil the machine is drawn up to the end of the long pile and set in operation. The compost merely is shoveled on to the conveyor, which carries it up and drops it into the cylinders, which are fitted with teeth for the destruction of all lumps. Passing through the cylinders, the compost comes out thoroughly mixed and as fine as wanted. Falling upon the second conveyor, it is run to the very doors of the greenhouses and stacked up ready for use. The machine runs with a forty horsepower motor, now electric, but originally a gasoline engine. The machine was built on the place. With it it is possible to work up each day as much soil as is required for the benches of two 250-foot houses.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The St. Louis cut flower market took another turn last week, becoming just the opposite of what it was the week before. All cut stock was again plentiful and prices dropped down a few cents. Trade among the retailers was not so brisk. The weather has been warm and good window displays could not be made. Those who handle plants are having all they can do in the line of planting out. All the wholesale houses were loaded down with cut stock. Sweet peas were especially plentiful, and in big lots they sold as low as $2 per thousand for the best. The demand for roses has not been good of late and plenty of them were dumped last week. Carnations, after selling cheaply all the week, went up on Saturday and Sunday to as much as 4 cents for whites. Peonies, cape jasmines, outdoor valley and candidum lilies are in great abundance. Flowers for Mothers' day sold well.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, May 11. The attendance was slim, as most of the members had too much outdoor work to attend to. President Connon could not attend, so Vice-president Frank Weber took the chair for the first time and made an excellent impression as a presiding officer. There was a lot of business to transact, but this required a larger attendance, so most of it was laid over for the June meeting, when the final announcement will be made about the banquet of the club members, June 28, at one of the large hotels.

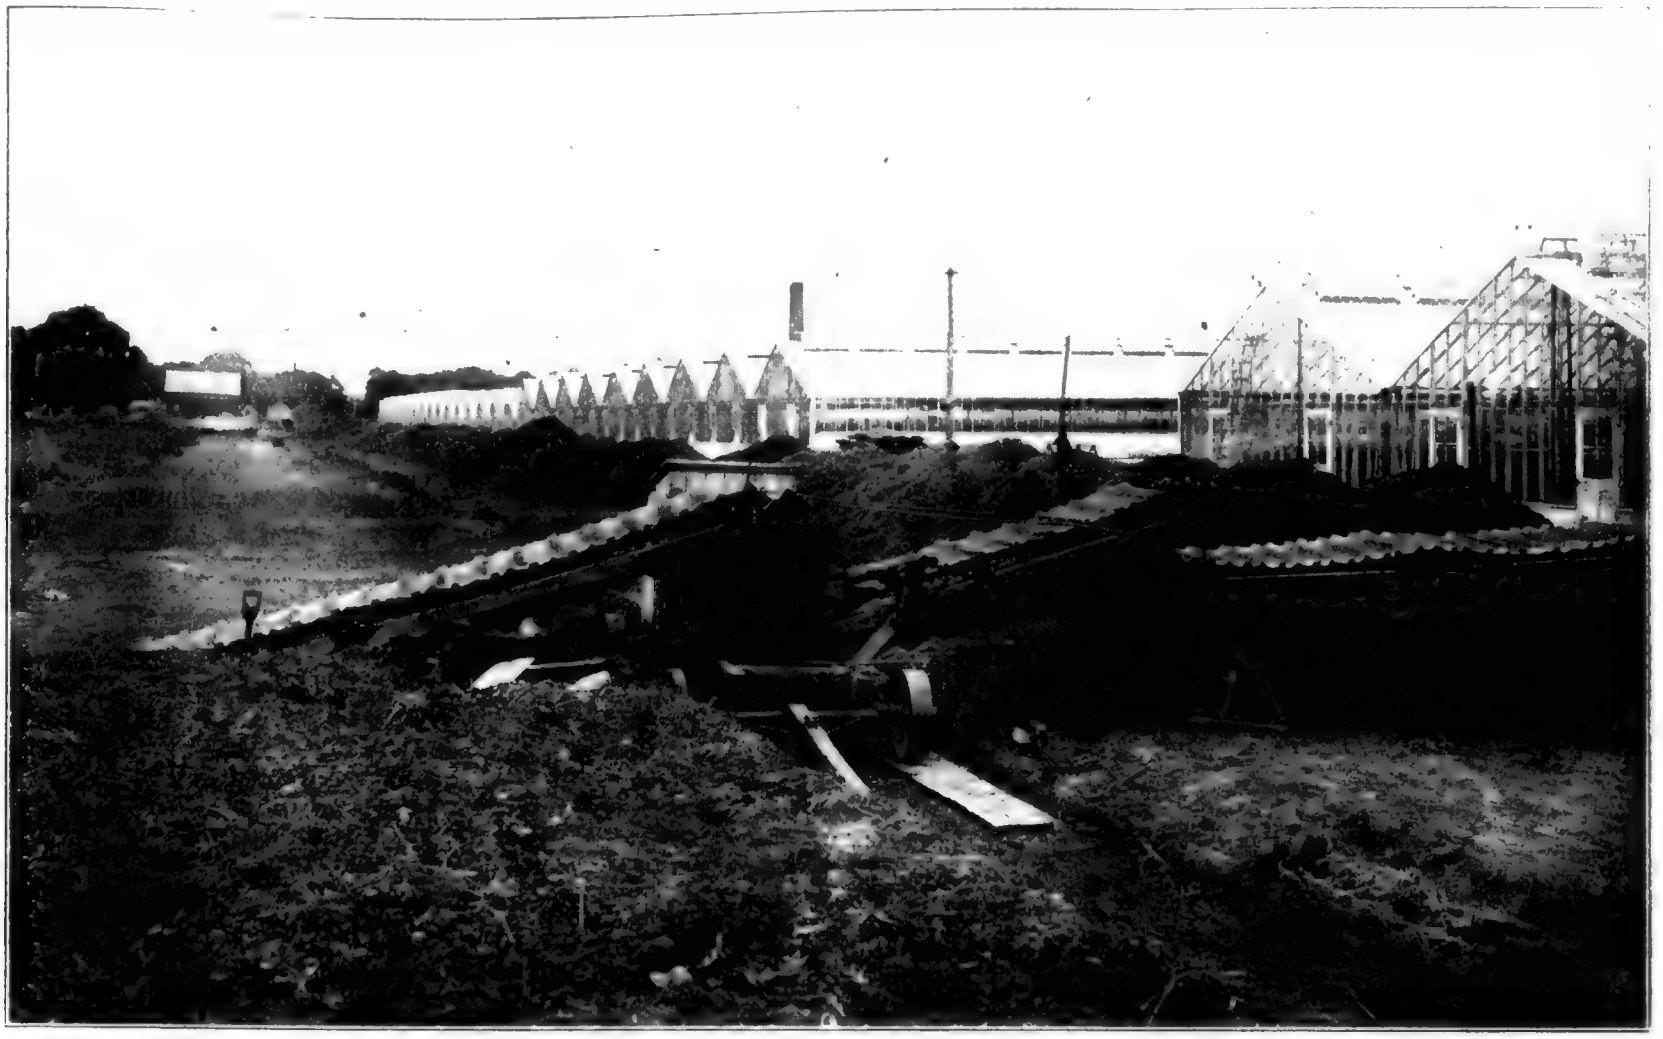
IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

By W. A. Cull, Edmonton, England.

Our American friends' wholesale establishments are beautifully fitted up, and each contains a cool chamber for the storage of unsold flowers. We visited two or three dozen of these establishments. Little plant trade done by this class of florists. In Philadelphia we visited the seed warehouses of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., beautifully fitted up. The quantities of sweet peas on hand from the firm's seed farms in California seemed large enough to supply the world. I was greatly impressed by the way in which Mr. Burpee looks after the comforts of his work people. Between 200 and 300 are employed, many of the girls earning from 25 to 30 shillings a week packeting seeds and making up orders. A large restaurant forms part of the establishment, and meals can be obtained at cost price—lower than the prices prevailing in the public restaurants. This provision is much esteemed by the employees



We called at White Marsh, Md., where R. Vincent, Jr., and his sons run a splendid up-to-date nursery, growing large quantities of geraniums, fuchsias, coleus, cannas, etc. Messrs. Vincent own much of the woodland around the nurseries, and run their own saw mill for making packing cases for plants and flowers.

I think Washington the most beautiful of all the American cities we saw, though Chicago is a wonderful city. The glasshouses of the Poehlmann brothers cover forty-five acres, by far the largest cut flower nurseries we visited.

Arriving in Boston, we spent four days there, the principal attraction being the National Show, which did not come up to our Temple shows. We visited the nurseries of Mr. Sim, where sweet peas and violets were well done—one house of sweet peas, 400 feet long, forty-three feet wide and twenty-three feet high!

By C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden.

The great American trip, so eagerly looked forward to for many weeks, is a thing of the past. We have survived the voyage, with its pleasures and otherwise, and even the banquets have left nothing worse than a disordered liver; as for the rest, nothing but the memory remains.

Compost Mixer and Pulverizer Used by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.

Now, as I sit here and dream it all over again, the one question that rises uppermost is: "Was it worth while?" My answer now is, and will ever remain, "Yes, most decidedly it was." It was worth while not only as a grower, it was worth while as a man and as a citizen.

As growers we have seen many things. If we make the best of them and make use of them, they will repay us the cost of the trip several times over. Sometimes we thought—and rightly, too—we can do this better at home; but in many ways we must confess that things are right ahead of us, especially in labor-saving devices, the perfect heating systems, the convenient packing houses and cool storage chambers. Yet with it all the trade appears to be in its infancy. Some of the largest establishments are not twenty years old; I wonder what the next ten years will bring forth; it will be worth while to watch and even go over again, in spite of the cost, the distance and the intervening Atlantic.

I certainly did not see so much of the petty jealousy among the members of our craft as is to be found on this little island of ours, and in all our wanderings we did not find any closed doors. On the contrary, everybody seemed eager to show his brother craftsman whatever he had. I am inclined to think this is the kind of policy that makes for progress. Progress is written in very large letters wherever one looks "on the other side," and before many years are over I hope to go again, for I like to see progress when she moves fast.

Houghton, Mich.—Harper & Thomas have opened a flower store in connection with their undertaking establishment. The members of the firm are Josiah Harper and James Thomas.

MIXING THE COMPOST.

The visitors at the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., invariably are impressed by the mechanical features of the establishment; hand labor still is the rule in a great many greenhouse plants, and the amount of labor performed by machinery at the Poehlmann establishment seems to impress the average visitor as strongly as any other feature of the place.

Just now one of the busiest Poehlmann machines is that shown in the accompanying illustration. It is the pulverizer and mixer for compost. In every large establishment the changing of the soil is a tremendous task; the mixing of the compost, the importance of which justifies infinite care, consumes the time of many men. But at Poehlmanns' the work is done by electric power and all that is required is a gang of shovelers to load the conveyor.

The compost is stacked along the ends of the houses in the autumn as it would be in any smaller place—a layer of soil and a layer of manure. When the time arrives for putting in the new soil the machine is drawn up to the end of the long pile and set in operation. The compost merely is shoveled on to the conveyor, which carries it up and drops it into the cylinders, which are fitted with teeth for the destruction of all lumps. Passing through the cylinders, the compost comes out thoroughly mixed and as fine as wanted. Falling upon the second conveyor, it is run to the very doors of the greenhouses and stacked up ready for use. The machine runs with a forty horsepower motor, now electric, but originally a gasoline engine. The machine was built on the place. With it it is possible to work up each day as much soil as is required for the benches of two 250-foot houses.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The St. Louis cut flower market took another turn last week, becoming just the opposite of what it was the week before. All cut stock was again plentiful and prices dropped down a few cents. Trade among the retailers was not so brisk. The weather has been warm and good window displays could not be made. Those who handle plants are having all they can do in the line of planting out. All the wholesale houses were loaded down with cut stock. Sweet peas were especially plentiful, and in big lots they sold as low as $2 per thousand for the best. The demand for roses has not been good of late and plenty of them were dumped last week. Carnations, after selling cheaply all the week, went up on Saturday and Sunday to as much as 4 cents for whites. Peonies, cape jasmines, outdoor valley and candidum lilies are in great abundance. Flowers for Mothers' day sold well.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, May 11. The attendance was slim, as most of the members had too much outdoor work to attend to. President Connon could not attend, so Vice-president Frank Weber took the chair for the first time and made an excellent impression as a presiding officer. There was a lot of business to transact, but this required a larger attendance, so most of it was laid over for the June meeting, when the final announcement will be made about the banquet of the club members, June 28, at one of the large hotels.

Joe Matter was elected to membership on a clear ballot. The picnic given by the club annually for the local florists and their families will again take place in July and will be in charge of the board of trustees, of which E. W. Guy is chairman and A. J. Bentzen and H. C. Ostertag are the other members.

Frank Weber gave the chair to Ex-president Fillmore, who made quite a lengthy talk on the nurserymen's convention, which takes place here June 14 to 16. He told us how he has planned to entertain the visitors.

The next club meeting will be held June 8.

Various Notes.

The Ladies' Home Circle met on Wednesday, May 10, at Trimp's hall. After a short meeting, the rest of the afternoon was taken up with bowling and lunch.

Otto Sander is still making splendid window displays during the hot weather and he says he will keep it up, as it pays well.

Guy Reyburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, spent a few days here last week, with good business results.

The trustees of the club have decided to have a banquet for the members of the Club, June 28, to celebrate their twenty-fifth anniversary. It will take place at one of the leading hotels. The only invited guests will be ex-presidents who are not now members of the club.

On Tuesday, May 9, the house of delegates called for a public hearing on the bill presented by the Retail Florists' Association to prohibit crepe pulling. The hearing was for 4 p. m. and there was quite an attendance of retail florists, all of whom favored the bill. C. C. Sanders, J. J. Beneke and R. J. Windler spoke, making quite lengthy arguments before the committee in favor of the bill. On calling for a talk from those opposed to the bill, there was no response. The chance of passing the bill is excellent.

A. S. Cerny, lately with the Woodbine Floral Co., is building two houses, 32 x 100, in Kirkwood, and will grow carnations, violets and sweet peas for the market. W. A. Rowe, a member of the Woodbine Floral Co. for the last two years, has now purchased the entire property of that firm.

Julius Koenig, the new city forester, took the office last week. He has as yet made no changes in the make-up of his working force.

Planting out was begun in earnest last week and all the plantsmen have all they can do to get through with their work. Everybody wants the work done at once, as the good old summertime is close at hand.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, says that they will dispose of their Cass avenue store and do all their business at one store, 702 Washington avenue. Their large forces of saleslades have been kept busy.

There is talk of organizing a base ball team composed of athletic employees of the wholesale district. Mr. Patten, of Smith's, has the affair in charge and he says they are after the scalps of the Bentzen and Mullanphy teams.

George H. Angermueller says there is a good demand for red, white and blue ribbons for Memorial day.

Mrs. W. C. Smith has been quite ill for the last ten days, but is now on the road to recovery.

Arthur Meyer, who broke his arm recently, has returned to his post at C. A. Kuehn's, but has only one hand to work with and it will be another week before the plaster cast will be off.

R. H. Moore and J. M. Hargitt, employees of the Phoenix Nursery Co., Bloomington, Ill., spent Sunday, May 14, in St. Louis, visiting the local trade. They say they will attend the nurserymen's convention here next month.

William C. Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., says they have never before been so busy as this spring, both at the store and greenhouses. The planting-out time is now at its height and extra forces of men are sent out each morning to finish up the work.

Frank A. Weber will have charge of the nurserymen's convention, June 14 to 16. The meeting will take place in the parlors of the Southern hotel. J. W. Schuette will be superintendent of displays. C. C. Sanders, Emil Rothenheber and William Weber have been placed on the entertainment committee. The wives and daughters of the local nurserymen will compose the ladies' committee. The features of the meeting will be a boat trip to Jefferson barracks, the Henry Shaw banquet to the visitors and the trip to the Stark Bros. Nurseries, at Louisiana, Mo. An automobile trip for the ladies will also be a pleasing feature. J. J. B.

Albert Senger, the Lexington avenue florist, is adding two houses, each 20x 100, and expects to have them completed by July 10. The Robert Thomson Co., a local firm, has the contract.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been heavy here for the last two weeks; since the warm weather set in everyone is on the move with planting out and the outlook now is there will be a heavy call for all such stock. Stock has been very good, considering the warm days we have had. Roses are holding up nicely and the demand has been strong. Carnations are fine and available in great quantities. Sweet peas are still good and the demand quite heavy for them. Outdoor valley has been in the market for a week or so and has about taken the place of the indoor article, as the quality is good.

Trade for Mothers' day was certainly heavy. Everything in white carnations was cleaned up early and after they were gone buyers commenced on the light shades, and toward the last they bought anything that looked like a flower. From all reports everybody had a regular clean-up. It was impossible to get anywhere nearly enough white carnations to go around. One grower said his sales last week equaled Christmas week financially.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business, both in plants and cut flowers.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has had a heavy cut of roses and carnations and is busy with bedding stock at present.

The Columbus Floral Co. has been cutting heavily on carnations and cleaned up everything for Mothers' day.

Wm. Graff has returned after spending a couple of weeks in and near Chicago.

C. A. Roth reports trade rushing in the cut flower line.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports heavy business for Mothers' day and a rush in the seed department. J. M.

SPRINGFIELD, O.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club held May 8 took the form of a spring banquet and was well attended, in spite of the counter attraction of the first circus of the season, notices having been mailed to the members in the following style:

On Monday ev'nin', 8th of May,
We'll feast just at the close of day,
On tables full of good things spread
In Reese's roomy, well-kept shed.

Don't say "too busy,"—start in time
For Reese's place,—it's on South Lime;
And eat no supper 'fore you start
'Cause Mellen, he will do his part.

When all git full of florists' hash
The speakers then will cut a dash;
And you'll be shot—at, if not there,
By Mister Toastmaster,—beware!

There's lots of bizness to discuss
And likely something like a fuss
Might happen, should you stay
From this great spring event away.

Clinton L. Reese, the veteran local retail florist, was host, and his model establishment on South Limestone street, with its unusually large and well appointed shed and packing rooms, together with office and residence adjoining, furnished an admirable place for banqueting purposes. George H. Mellen and Harry Reeser, of the entertainment committee, had prepared a bountiful spread, the main course consisting of roast beef with gravy, salad, etc., and the finish strawberry shortcake, coffee and cigars.

After doing ample justice to the menu, President Charles W. Schmidt presided over a short business session, and then introduced George D. Leedle as toastmaster, who, instead of calling on the speakers by name, requested the members to select the one best designated by a series of original rhymes, which he read, and in every instance the proper victim was called to his feet with a chorus of good-natured "kidding," and responded as best he could after the unexpected and unusual demand for a speech.

Responses were given in rapid-fire succession by some twenty-five members, each called upon by a rhyme.

Incidental to the numerous interesting and witty talks, many valuable suggestions were advanced for the good of the profession, and in the finish an animated discussion arose as to the proper varieties and kinds of roses to be planted in the proposed rose garden in Snyder park, with some differences of opinion as to the comparative merits of own root and grafted roses for certain purposes. Christian Binning and Arthur C. Leedle held that grafted stock had certain advantages in particular cases, while Roger Murphey and John M. Good led the battle for the own root forces, the latter agreeing to start even with own root roses and in a fair contest outdo any grafted rose on earth. This subject appeared to have so large a scope that it was deemed best to give it an entire evening for discussion on some future occasion.

The matter of the annual picnic was mentioned and will be decided at the next regular meeting, which will be held Monday evening, June 12.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The expectation of lighter shipments of roses and carnations has not materialized. There has been no decrease, and the market is literally crowded, so there is little to be added to the report of a week ago. For Mothers' day there was a thorough clean-up of everything in white carnations and white roses, while valley and white sweet peas also were well taken. Interest in this token of affectionate memory is certainly increasing, and each year finds its observance more general. The close of the week, therefore, was fairly encouraging to the wholesalers, and retailers all over the city featured the mother sentiment and advertised it persistently.

Business at the opening of this week is stagnant and prices are low. Late inquiry would indicate a top of 4 cents for roses and 2 cents for carnations, while the best Beauties were selling at $10 per hundred. The opening of the big ocean resorts at Coney and Rockaway has lessened the street brigade already and decreased that outlet for the surplus. Orchids hold well, the best cattleyas bringing 60 to 75 cents, while 30 to 50 cents buys the commoner and smaller varieties.

Memorial day promises to be the largest floral holiday of the year. Lilies will doubtless advance considerably before that day, but at present there has been little improvement from the low figures of April, 2 cents to 4 cents now being the limit. Valley is down to $1.50 per hundred for the selected and gardenias go at 50 cents a dozen. Sweet peas must be long stemmed and perfect to induce an offer. Callas are neglected, with 50 cents a dozen the best offer. Iris and gladioli are arriving profusely, with little call for either. Retailers complain of vanishing customers, many of the Four Hundred having already departed for the continent and the coronation.

Various Notes.

The new market is a busy place from midnight on. The florists complain of the early and complete clean-up of all the best bedding and other plants by the peddlers. Most of the stock arriving is sold in advance. By daylight there is not a vestige of the busy market left. Years of this method have established it so that it has become a habit, and the majority rules—only official city interference can change it. The veteran John Birnie drops in on his bowling confreres at about midnight occasionally, Friday nights, on his way to his favorite enterprise, for he may safely be styled the father of New York's coming Covent Garden.

S. S. Butterfield is seriously ill at the Seney hospital, Brooklyn. His family is in Oklahoma.

William Kessler, of Kessler Bros., and Miss Minnie Krieger, of Brooklyn, were married April 7 at St. John's church, of that city. Miss Krieger has managed her own very successful retail store in Brooklyn for some time, and in assuming the duties of domesticity has sold her place on Fulton street, next door to the immortal Johnnie Weir, to David Benjamin. The congratulations of the trade are given these popular young people as they set sail on life's sea.

For Mothers' day the Pennock-Meehan Co. had a neat card printed and distributed many hundreds of them for window reminders.

Patrick O'Mara is back from his southern trip well rested, but nursing one of Job's comforters.

An enormous amount of window box decoration and hotel roof garden work is in process of completion in New York. Many of the larger contracts have been filled direct by growers.

Wadley & Smythe, A. T. Bunyard and Joseph Leikens will be New York's offering to swell Newport this year, and already the principals have been down preparing for the busy season there.

George and Walter Siebrecht are both fully recovered from their illnesses.

The sympathy of every one goes out to Charles Schenck and Mrs. Schenck in the loss of their only child through an accident. Many beautiful floral tokens were sent as silent evidence of the sorrow felt by all their friends.

Bowling.

New York sent some crack bowlers, May 10, to rescalp the Tuxedos in the return match, and the result makes it necessary for a deciding match—Tuxedo vs. New York, Saturday evening, May 27, on the New York alleys. In other words, Tuxedo entertained the New Yorkers so hospitably that their hands forgot their cunning and they lost their reputations. The scores tell the story:

Tuxedo.	1st	2d	3d	New York.	1st	2d	3d
E. Barth	131	125	160	Manda	142	166	185

Totals	747	734	667	Totals	664	702	717

Messrs. Ebel and Holt were the visitors and the special prize for high score, given by Mr. Ebel, was won by Fred Barth, with 219.

Saturday, May 20, the return match, Madison vs. New York, will be bowled at Thumm's alleys. There will be a goodly crowd of New York rooters.

May 12 the scores were:

Player.	1st	2d	3d
Chadwick	191	186	202
Manda	166	196	169

J. Austin Shaw.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed May 12 in Brooklyn against Adolph Jaenicke, who resides in Floral Park, L. I. The petitioning creditors are George Houbitzer and Thomas Callister, of Queens, and John Lewis Childs, of Nassau county. The three allege debts on Jaenicke's part amounting to about $570.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been good. Funeral work has been the leading factor. There were several big funerals, which kept the cut flower stock cleaned up well. Carnations are scarce, and are sadly missed; it is impossible to get as many as fifty of any one color. Roses are in good supply. The winter crop of sweet peas is about off and there will be nothing in this line until the outdoor stock comes in. Ten weeks' stocks have been a fizzle here, as only a small percentage of them were double, and the single ones do not amount to much.

Lilies have been abundant and a good many have been used. The growers who missed the crop for Easter found no trouble in disposing of them as fast as they came in. In fact, without them the market would have been extremely short.

The outlook for an increase in stock is good, as some gladioli, iris and other early summer flowers are coming on rapidly. Peonies will be in crop in about ten days and a good many will be cut, as the plants are all well budded.

Everybody will be busy planting out for the next few weeks. May 10 is usually the starting day here, but the recent warm weather tempted the local florists and some were hustling out bedding stock three or four days before the usual date. There are good prospects of a heavy business in this line this season.

K. R.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Cut flower trade is picking up considerably and consequently there is not now the overstock of carnations, roses and tulips that there has been the last few weeks. All cut flowers are bringing better prices.

A few warm days have made a big demand for bedding plants of all kinds and although it is still a little early, local florists are selling these fast.

There is a great scarcity of greens, such as cut ferns, asparagus, smilax, etc., in Rochester and vicinity; so much so that some local florists have cut fronds from their stock of Boston ferns and cut up spiræas to use in sprays for funerals. The cold storage ferns which were kept over from last year are useless, and the southern ferns have not begun to arrive as yet. Cut asparagus and smilax are bringing a good price.

Various Notes.

W. D. Oviatt is growing some fine Spencer sweet peas under glass; large flowers, pale pink, white and lavender, with stems ranging from six to ten inches in length. J. B. Keller Sons have contracted to buy all he can produce, and that firm could handle twice the supply shipped them.

E. C. Campbell, who opened his new store at 9 North street, near Main, at Easter time, reports that business is growing and that there has been a big sale of bedding plants in the last week. Felix Alberts, who is manager of Mr. Campbell's store, executed an artistic plant decoration in the store of the Guilford Drug Co., which opened a new store May 12. The druggist gave away some 3,000 carnations to the visitors. An opening in a new store with floral decorations and music was an innovation in Rochester. Mr. Alberts is showing some good Golden Glow mum plants in his window this week, which is unusual so early in the season.

Geo. Boucher, 345 Main street east, says trade is brisk and that outdoor plants are selling best just now.

Salter Bros. report business as good.

The Rochester Floral Co., 245 Main street east, is doing a good business in pansies, myosotis and geraniums. Miss Nettie Maher has entered the employ of this concern.

Horace Head, of H. E. Wilson's store, has gone to Hilton, N. Y., for a few weeks for his health. It is reported that he is improving rapidly.

J. B. Keller Sons decorated seventeen tables for a Men's Club dinner May 12. The table of the principal speakers was decorated with a steamer five feet in length, made of pink and white carnations, to reproduce in miniature the hospital steamer of Dr. Grenfel, the guest of honor.

The cold snap and frosts of last week did little damage to flowering bulb stock, shrubs and fruit trees. Forsythias suffered most and turned brown in a few hours. Contrary to the general belief that this season is behind the average, the records for blooming dates for this locality preserved from previous years show that the blossoms are just about on time, according to the average. E. C. A.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Cut flower business in the last two weeks has, on the whole, been quiet, and it looks more so when the supply is compared with the demand. The exceedingly warm weather, together with the fact that there is so much outdoor stock in bloom, may be accountable for these conditions. Lilac, bridal wreath, iris, valley, snowballs and roses are all in full array. One consolation to the florist is that Decoration day will see these all a thing of the past. Outdoor stock is quite "previous" this year, owing to the warm weather.

Indoor cut flowers are scarce in some varieties and overabundant in others. Carnations, while slightly improved, are still scarce, while roses are at just the other extreme, with the market comparatively slow. Lilies are the scarcest they have been in some time, while callas are plentiful enough to meet all requirements. The outdoor valley is knocking the demand for cold storage valley in the head. Gladioli are plentiful and the demand could not be better. While cut flower trade is slow and dependent only on a few parties, commencements and funerals, the pot plant business is making up for it. Bedding plants, boxwood, palms and plants of all descriptions are moving rapidly and trade along this line is most gratifying.

Mothers' Day.

The increasing popularity of Mothers' day is quite evident in Dayton. People seem to be more attracted by it each year; consequently the demand for flowers increases rapidly. Churches, more than any other institution, seemed to call for the flowers, but many business houses presented a flower to each of their employees, and boxes of flowers were sent to mothers, etc., while about every other person one met was wearing a flower on Mother's day. However, though the demand was good and prices were high, there was one drawback, namely, that many people have conceived the idea that nothing but white carnations are appropriate for the occasion. As it is an utter impossibility to meet the demand for these, much talking becomes necessary in order to convince the buyer that a white flower of any kind may be worn for the mother deceased, and a bright one for the mother living. This difficulty, if properly taken up by the florists throughout the country, could easily be remedied, and we believe that, should the matter be taken up at the next S. A. F. convention, much good would result, for, with Mothers' day increasing in popularity from year to year, it would be an impossibility to supply enough white carnations to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

Fruit trees promise a good crop this year, as they have been favored with the right kind of weather.

The Miami Floral Co. has succeeded in getting all the carnation plants out in the field and is now in hopes the weather man will send the much needed shower. Arthur Carey, of this firm, spent May 14 at Yellow Springs, O.

Perhaps one of the busiest men along the line of funeral work in this city is Warren G. Matthews, proprietor of the Dayton Floral Co. He reports that as a general rule nearly all his orders for this sort of work come in on Sunday, making it his busiest day in the week.

Mrs. E. Young reports a splendid trade for Mothers' day.

Mrs. B. Haschke has had splendid success with sweet peas this season. She is cutting some fine ones at present.

Fred Johnson, of Kansas City, Mo., was the guest of Mrs. L. D. Johnson last week.

J. J. Lampert, of Xenia, O., was in town last week. He reports a good business and says he is building another greenhouse, 40x200.

Among the visitors last week were: Mr. Kidder, of the Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich.; Chas. H. Hudson, representing Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., and Frederick U. Creighton, of Arthur T. Boddington, New York city. R. A. B.

GLEN COVE, L. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall Wednesday evening, May 10. President Trepess occupied the chair and there was a good attendance. Messrs. Holloway, Gray and Robinson were appointed judges and their decisions were as follows: For the society's prize, outdoor flowering shrub, first to A. McKenzie, with Persica sanguinea; lettuce, first to J. W. Everett; for exhibition vase of sweet peas, certificate of culture to J. McDonald; brace of cucumbers, certificate of culture to J. W. Everett; asparagus, certificate of culture to J. W. Everett; Stumpp & Walter prize for six varieties of tulips, six of each, first to A. McKenzie, second to E. Westlake.

The schedule for the show on the night of the June meeting was read and approved and Messrs. Duthie, Johnstone and Marshall were appointed judges for that night.

The question box was found to contain quite a few questions, which were answered satisfactorily. S. Trepess exhibited some pieces of peach grafted on plum for the members to examine and decide as to whether the two were united or not. Various comments were made, but the question could not be answered definitely.

H. Cliffe, superintendent of Meudon, gave an interesting talk on the cultivation of grapes under glass and was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks. E. W.

UTICA, N. Y.

At the annual meeting of the Utica Florists' Club, held in Genesee hall, the election of officers for the ensuing year was held and Frank J. Baker was chosen president for the sixth time. The other officers elected were: Vice-president, Harry Brant; treasurer, Charles Seitzer; secretary, J. C. Spencer.

In a discussion of Mothers' day, the speakers expressed their regret that white flowers are so generally worn on that occasion, since colored flowers would frequently be more appropriate. Customers, it was stated, need more education in this line and should be more strongly impressed with the idea first advocated by The Review, that a white carnation indicates respect for a deceased mother, while the wearer of a colored carnation thereby shows respect for a mother who is living.

After the meeting refreshments were served.

OBITUARY.

Gustave Peters.

Gustave Peters, one of the oldest of Chicago florists, died May 13 at his home, 1515 Larrabee street, of cerebral hemorrhage. Mr. Peters was born in Germany May 31, 1840, so that had he been 71 years of age. He came to America twenty-eight years ago and at once located at Chicago, engaging in the business learned in the fatherland. When Charles Arnold married Mr. Peters' only daughter, the firm of Peters & Arnold was formed, the greenhouse establishment being located at Des Plaines. Cut flowers were grown for the Chicago market, and for years Mr. Peters was well known to the frequenters of the Chicago wholesale section. When E. C. Amling moved into the basement of the Trude building, he rented a portion of his space to Mr. Peters, who sold there the output of his greenhouses for some years, the growing end being in the hands of his son-in-law, who has continued the business, consigning his stock to the E. C. Amling Co. since the retirement of Mr. Peters, a few years ago, from active participation in the business. A widow and daughter, Mrs. Arnold, survive. The funeral was held May 15 and was largely attended.

Ransom B. Jones.

Ransom B. Jones, for many years a florist at Stamford, Conn., died May 7. Mary E. Jones, his daughter, says that the business will be discontinued.

George Hollis.

George Hollis, a well-known peony grower and florist of South Weymouth, Mass., died April 27 at his home on Hollis street, after a lingering illness. He was 71 years of age and was a native of South Weymouth. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. A. M. Richardson, and by three brothers, Newton, Henry and Fred Hollis.

C. O. Hunt.

C. O. Hunt, of St. Elmo, Chattanooga, Tenn., died May 6. It is understood that the business will be continued by his wife, Mrs. Marietta Hunt.

Geo. F. Chadborn.

George F. Chadborn, the inventor of the American lawn mower, died May 12 in Newburgh, N. Y., aged 78 years. He was one of the Chadborn family, well known in the trade.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

Bellefontaine, O.—This town has a population of 8,238. J. E. Stelzig sold 1,275 carnations May 13 and 14—one flower for every sixth person in the place. How's that for a Mothers' day record?

Herington, Kan.—J. A. Gordon had a Mothers' day advertisement in two weekly papers and sold almost everything out that looked like a flower. Customers almost all wanted white, but he sold out on all colored stock.

Babylon, N. Y.—Contract has been awarded to Wm. H. Lutton, Jersey City, N. J., for the construction of an additional range of iron-frame houses for Duncan C. Arnold, of this city. A. Kroeschell boiler will be used for heating.

Grand Forks, N. D.—E. O. Lovell says Mothers' day trade was simply immense, many times larger than ever before. The supply of carnations being exhausted early, roses and other flowers sold well. Still greater results are expected next year.

Marysville, Kan.—H. R. Fisher says the people of Marysville took hold of Mothers' day in fine shape; he could not begin to supply the demand. Business here is brisk. He has about finished all outside planting; everything looks promising, but rain is needed badly.

Portland, Ind.—W. Frank & Sons are building three greenhouses, each 300 feet long. Advance ventilating machines are being used, equipped with the new Advance "twist-less" arms, one of the first jobs on which these have been used. The Advance Co. also is supplying the pipe fittings for the new houses.

Alvin, Tex.—The Misses Cook, who did business as Cook & Cook, have married and retired. One now is Mrs. G. N. Yard and the other Mrs. E. J. Sheffield, the business being continued under the name and management of Mr. Sheffield. The firm's old field of jasmine was sold, but a small quantity of stock is now being shipped from a field of young plants.

Dows, Ia.—Shaffer & Larson report that this vicinity was visited, on the afternoon of May 14, by one of the worst hail storms ever experienced here. Huge hailstones were borne onward by a terrific gale from the southwest, shattering hundreds of windows in the city. In Shaffer & Larson's greenhouse, which was built last year, the loss was only fourteen lights. In their hotbeds, however, nearly all the glass was broken. Though this misfortune has befallen them so early in their business career, they are thankful that they escaped so easily.

Newton, Mass.—The greenhouses on the estate of Frank A. Day, the Boston banker, were damaged by fire May 8.

Great Falls, Mont.—The West Side Greenhouses are rebuilding two of their houses, using the Garland truss construction.

Westwood, Mass.—The greenhouses and residence of Charles S. Damrell were destroyed by fire May 8. The loss was about $6,000.

South Bend, Ind.—May day was happily celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willis W. Kinyon by the arrival of a new 8½-pound son.

Utica, N. Y.—Wm. P. Pfeifer, the Whitesboro street florist, presented a large quantity of flowers to the relief committee of the Utica Teachers' Association, to be distributed among the teachers who had been injured in the recent train wreck at Martin's Creek, N. J.

Leominster, Mass.—On the afternoon of May 6 a miniature tornado demolished a section of the roof of George M. Kendall's largest greenhouse, a cucumber house which covers 28,000 square feet of ground. The damage was estimated at upward of $500. The cucumber vines were not injured.

Louisville, Ky.—The Bardstown Road Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $8,000, divided into shares of $100 each. The incorporators and their holdings are as follows: Margaret H. Struck, Beuchel, forty shares; Pratt A. Reynolds, Beuchel, thirty-seven shares; H. J. Marshall, of this city, three shares.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa Seed Co., of which Charles N. Page is president, is erecting a show house and four additional greenhouses on the firm's grounds at Crocker and Thirty-first streets. The show house will be 40x125 and twenty-five feet high in the center. Two of the new greenhouses will be 21x125 and the other two will be 26x185.

Leavenworth, Kan.—R. C. Hinz, at 418 Shawnee street, conducts both a retail and wholesale trade and ships considerable stock to surrounding towns. At Fourteenth and Vilas streets, where his greenhouses are located, he also has several acres of ground which he uses for the growing of shrubbery and other hardy stock.

Westerly, R. I.—John Cirwein, who has been with Conrad Schultz, of this city, for the last three years, is now making arrangements to go into business for himself at Wakefield. He will build a range of greenhouses there and expects to have them ready for use by the first part of October. He will do both a wholesale and retail business.

Carbondale, Ill.—The peony crop in southern Illinois is especially promising this year. A big supply is expected to be ready for Memorial day.

Hutchinson, Kan.—The Underwood-Viles greenhouses, the largest vegetable growing plant in the state, were damaged by fire May 10, the loss being estimated at $20,000.

Stockbridge, Mass.—The greenhouse at Ingleside, the country residence of J. Woodward Haven, was burned April 13 and the stock of about 7,000 plants was destroyed. The loss was estimated at $2,500.

Agawam, Mass.—Mark Aitken is building another greenhouse, 40x160, on the river road. The Lord & Burnham Co. has the contract. The new house will be used for violets, while the present violet house will be used for roses.

Bridgeport, Conn.—A fine new delivery auto, belonging to James E. Beach, appeared on the streets just before Easter and caused much favorable comment. It is a twenty horse-power Sampson car, with the body handsomely paneled and tastefully painted and lettered. It rendered good service during the Easter trade.

Bangor, Me.—J. Martin, Jr., who has greenhouses on Center street, opened a handsome store April 11 at the old Martin homestead, where he was born. He left home when quite young and worked at his trade for seventeen years in Boston and New York. Returning to this city, he built his greenhouses six years ago and his business has steadily prospered.

Rochdale, Mass.—Walter E. Draper, who has conducted the Maple Ridge greenhouses for the last two years, will go into business in Westboro, June 1, in partnership with H. F. Midgley, who has a flower store in Worcester. In Westboro the chief attention will be given to the growing of carnations. The Maple Ridge greenhouses will be run until June by Mr. Draper; then his brother may take charge of them, at least until fall.

Kalispell, Mont.—The Kalispell Gardens report a heavy spring trade, following a record-breaking Easter. The firm has discontinued handling trees and is putting its energies into the growing of cut flowers and greenhouse vegetables. A large part of the grounds has been sown with grain. The latest addition to the population of the gardens is a baby mule, which has been promptly christened Maud. The soil in Kalispell is of remarkable richness, and, with all the water that is needed and a magnificent location, the Kalispell Gardens are going ahead in no uncertain fashion.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01. Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y. Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Curious, but all the suggestions for Fathers' day come from lady florists.

Mothers' day this year was quite a little better than the Memorial days of not so very many years ago.

In printing this issue of The Review 8,800 pounds of white paper were consumed—almost four and one-half tons.

The florists' business appears to be at present quite a little better than in the lines of what are known as the necessities.

There are four double-page spreads in this issue of The Review. When an advertiser's story takes two pages in the telling, you may rest assured there's something in it worth knowing, and knowing thoroughly.

At the recent carnation show in London, Bertie Bell, of Guernsey, won the American challenge cup, offered for three American novelties, with J. W. Riley, described as very fine; Gov. Deneen and Bay state. Now what do you know about that!

Checks for the refund of the sums paid by guarantors of the National Flower Show were mailed May 9 by E. Allan Peirce, treasurer. Complete financial statement is not yet ready, but financial success called only for the reimbursement of guarantors.

Last week's issue of The Review broke all previous records for the amount of classified plant advertising carried. There were thirty-five columns of it. Review classified advertisements are such great little business-bringers that "once tried, always used" is the rule.

The popularity of Mothers' day leads to a demand for Fathers' day, after which no doubt someone will propose a day for sister, brother, aunt. One trouble with success is that a lot of people want to overdo it. But thus far no one has proposed a day for mother-in-law.

The so-called Simmons bill recently introduced in Congress, to give the Secretary of Agriculture authority to prohibit the importation of nursery stock according to his judgment, provides that florists' field grown stock shall be included. The full text of the bill will be found on page 76 of this issue.

Harry A. Barnard, who made many friends in America on the occasion of his recent trip to this country in the interest of Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, London, celebrated, April 29, the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the firm of Low. His fellow employees presented him with a testimonial, suitably inscribed.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

May 12 was Fathers' day in the Chicago market—father was just as busy as busy could be, getting out orders for white carnations for the florists who were pushing Mothers' day. The shipping demand was heavy, far exceeding any previous year, but locally Mothers' day did not amount to much, the city retailers having done little, if anything, to work up interest in the occasion. Consequently, after the shipping orders were out the market was rather flat. There were large supplies of stock in all lines, but the call was almost exclusively for white carnations; the advance orders included colored stock, but the late calls were only for white, possibly for the reason that roses and colored carnations are abundant in all the lesser markets through the country as well as in Chicago. But it was much the biggest day this market has had since Easter, a nice little holiday now well established and sure to grow. It was not possible to fill all the late orders for white carnations, and all colors cleaned up nicely. Prices were good, but not beyond reason. Little overripe stock was seen. At no time last week was it possible for the wholesale houses to clean up on other lines. The heat wave, running up to 87 degrees May 11, brought all flowers along much too fast for the demand.

The current week opened with the market as heavily overstocked as it has been at any time this season. After a day or two of seasonable temperature the weather again turned hot, forcing all crops and causing deterioration in quality. Practically everything is in oversupply, including the best grade of Beauties, as fine orchids as have been seen this season, fancy long-stemmed sweet peas, all varieties of roses, carnations, with the possible exception of white, fancy snapdragons, first-class Spanish iris, and gladioli of both the large and small flowered varieties. The regular demand, while fair, is not nearly strong enough to consume the enormous receipts; the bulk of the stock is moved by the people who run the cheap sales, and even at the buyer's own price it is not possible to sell everything that comes in; the waste is large.

Of the few flowers not suffering, the peony is first. While there is no special demand at the moment, the stock coming in is of better average quality than in previous seasons and is going into storage in fine shape in anticipation of the special demand for Memorial day. Outdoor flowers in general have had a bad time of it. Enormous quantities of lilac have been in. Much of the stock has arrived in such poor condition that nothing whatever could be done with it, for the best has sold slowly at low prices. Such outdoor flowers as violets have been a total loss. Cape jasmine is not so abundant as in other seasons.

Memorial Day Prospects.

The consensus of opinion is that the outdoor flowers will be pretty well out of the way by Decoration day; a week of such hot weather will about finish them. Then will come an enormous demand for Memorial day. The wholesalers are looking forward to extremely large supplies of all indoor flowers, with the possible exception of carnations; it is figured that there will be enough of other things so that the passing of the heaviest cut with the carnation growers will occasion no difficulty. Reports have it that the supply of peonies will be far ahead of other years. Everyone is looking for the heaviest business ever handled for May 30, which has become one of the most important flower days on the calendar.

Now, and For Decoration Day, Offer Your Customers

BEAUTIES

WE HAVE A WONDERFUL SUPPLY

We are cutting a tremendous crop of fancy Beauties, shipments from the greenhouses coming in three times a day. Many thousands of each length. We can supply extra long fancy Beauties in thousand lots, if wanted. Not only is the supply large, but the quality is extra good for this time of year. Use them for your Decoration Day trade. You know there is no flower that will please your trade half so well. Special prices quoted on 100 lots.

CATTLEYAS

The varieties are Labiata and Mossiæ and they are great big luxuriant blooms—and don't forget the color; there's plenty of color in them, and it is what your trade wants.

SWEET PEAS

The Butterfly (Spencer) varieties are coming in heavy. These are by all odds the choicest flowers on this market, and they sell about the best of anything in the list. We have all the fancy colors.

PEONIES

You know that there is a lot of difference in Peonies. If you want to be sure of getting the best Peonies, order of us. Our Peonies are grown by specialists, who not only grow for cut flowers only, and the best varieties, but also know how to cut, pack and prepare them for shipping so they reach you in the best possible condition. Plenty for Decoration Day. You sell and we will supply them.

KILLARNEYS

Not only are these the finest Killarney and White Killarney now coming into the Chicago market, but the supply continues very large. We can take care of any order, no matter how big or how short the notice. We want buyers who like good stock to try these. Order some of these Killarneys now—it will make it sure that you will call on us to supply you for Decoration Day.

CARNATIONS

All the buyers who know this market recognize that we have the largest lot of strictly first-class Carnations to be found in Chicago—the largest first-class lot, or the best large lot. Either way, a word to the wise is sufficient. Place your orders here. A big cut for Decoration Day.

LILIES

We can supply fine Easter Lilies in large quantity every day in the year.

SNAPS

Fancy long Snapdragon in all colors, but specially fine is the fancy pink, just the Killarney shade.

OUR FERNS ARE GOOD

There are plenty of ferns in the country, but those in storage are spoiling fast, and no one wants the soft new stock while good stored stock is to be had. Our ferns are good—never kept better. The supply is large. How many will you have?

Various Notes.

Ted. Vogel, formerly buyer for W. J. Smyth, is getting an experience of the other end of the business, having taken hold with Kennicott Bros. Co. for the Mothers' day and peony rush. This firm has more than doubled its force for May and June and is having the biggest season in its long experience.

The Percy Jones establishment has expanded during the week, to occupy more than double the space heretofore occupied. A complete rearrangement, with an office at the street front, ice-boxes at the rear, new tabling, wide aisles and fresh decoration, adds greatly to appearance as well as facilities. Big, bright gold lettering on the windows calls attention from street and elevated roads.

Vaughan & Sperry say Mothers' day was ahead of the Memorial days of their earlier experience. They expect the business for May 30 to eclipse Easter.

There are no insurrectos among the A. L. Randall customers along the Mexican border, but Frank Johnson spent last week in southwestern Texas, close to the seat of war.

John Kruchten says Memorial day always has brought one of his big weeks and he expects, with increased supplies, to break all records this year.

N. P. Miller fell from a ladder while carpentering at his place at Wilmette last week, dislocating his right shoulder and otherwise bruising him up. It will be several days before he can take charge of the new Kennicott branch at 56 East Randolph street.

C. M. Dickinson says that E. H. Hunt's Memorial day will break all records; already more than a third of their supply of peonies is ordered up. This is the fiftieth Memorial day and the thirty-third for the house of Hunt.

Wietor Bros. are dropping Bride, Bridesmaid and Kaiserin from their list. Next season's planting consists of Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Uncle John and, last but not least, Mrs. Jardine.

Zech & Mann report the refusal of a C. O. D. last week by John Brown, supposed by them to be the assumed name of a Greek, at 41 North High street, Columbus, O.

Next season George Reinberg will grow only Beauties, the Killarneys and Richmond. Bride is dropped.

F. Struvy is making another effort to find purchasers for his two flower stores, so he can remove to California.

The Growers' Exchange opened May 15 in the remodeled and redecorated quarters formerly occupied by the Flower Growers' Market. The idea is to supply growers with everything needful for the wholesale business, the grower selling his own flowers and paying a commission instead of rent. The idea is E. E. Pieser's. H. Van Gelder is manager.

Charlie Erne, who has been with E. H. Hunt for fifteen years, says he Suppose, Mr. Retail Florist, it is May 29 and a customer stands at your counter.

On the counter is a bunch of twelve good Peonies. In another vase there are twelve roses, and in still another vase twelve carnations.

The Peonies cost you 5 cents each flower, the Roses 8 cents and the Carnations 4 cents. Put your own selling prices on them.

Which does the customer select?

The Peonies, practically every time.

The modern Peony is as fine as any rose. It's as big as several carnations, and it makes a showing for the money unequaled by any other flower.

That's why the Peony is the big special item of the Decoration Day demand.

Up to and including May 20, we are booking orders for first-class Peonies, pink and white, mixed, for Decoration Day shipment at the guaranteed price of $5.00 per 100.

Last year and the year before, when Decoration Day came, such goods were selling at from 8 cents to 10 cents.

We don't know what the price will be after May 20 this year, but the chances are the only chance you take is in not ordering enough while the guaranteed 5 cent price is open to you.

That's till May 20.

has resigned, to take effect June 3. He plans to go into the retail business on his own account.

Kyle & Foerster say that, for the first time, red peonies will be abundant this Memorial day.

Frank Ayers says C. W. McKellar will be back from Hot Springs next week, for the holiday rush.

James F. Bernard, who has been employed by Fischer Bros., Evanston, has leased the N. P. Miller greenhouses at Wilmette from June 1, at which date they are to be given up by the Northwestern Floral Co., because of that firm's removal to its new plant at Gross Point.

Winterson's Seed Store says two cars of bay trees were not nearly enough this year. In the cut flower department also, E. F. Winterson reports more business is being done than last year.

W. E. Lynch is this week receiving delivery of 25,000 to 30,000 carnation plants and setting them in field at his new place on the west side. The stock is supplied by the Chicago Carnation Co. The varieties are Enchantress, White Enchantress, Beacon, May Day and Washington.

NOW YOU MUST

IF YOU WANT TO

To-Bak-Ine Liquid

45 per cent Solution of Pure Nicotine

Kills Thrips,

White Fly,

Green Fly,

Black Fly,

In the first hot days of spring—with a good south wind blowing—you open the ventilators, and then the fight with Thrips begins, the hardest battle of the year. You'll lose the fight if you are not prepared. Don't wait until the pests come—get ready to give them a warm reception. Every spring we receive mail rush orders, telegraph and telephone messages from growers who must fight Thrips and have neglected to keep TO-BAK-INE PRODUCTS on hand.

To-Bak-Ine Liquid is the most powerful spraying insecticide known. Spraying is one of the most economical methods, as you can adjust the amount of To-Bak-Ine Liquid to just the strength wanted, and if the pests infest only a portion of the stock they can be eradicated there without going over the entire house.

For Carnations use three teaspoonfuls to a gallon of water, and five gallons is enough to spray thoroughly a house 100x25 feet.

For Roses use four teaspoonfuls of To-Bak-Ine Liquid to a gallon of water, and five gallons of this mixture is enough for each house 100x25.

These directions depend on how badly the stock is infested and on the season, but if used regularly you can depend on clean stock at all times.

PRICES:—¼-pint, 60c; ½-pint, $1.10; 1-pint, $2.00; ½-gal., $7.75; 1-gal., $15.00; 5-gals., $67.50.

Write for prices on 10-20-40-gallon casks with locked faucet and for complete spraying directions and other information.

NOTHING ELSE WILL DO THE WORK

Here is a sample of the letters we receive:

"Send me a 20-gallon keg of To-Bak-Ine Liquid. I have been trying out ———— (a "competing" preparation) again, as they claim so strongly that they are making a strictly A-No. 1 article now, and the price is less than you ask for To-Bak-Ine; but after trying 3 gallons, part said to be 40% and part 50% nicotine, we find it spots and burns the pink roses and carnations—so no more of it for me at any price."

(This is from one of the largest growers in the state of Ohio. Glad to furnish name and address to any grower.)

To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Compound

For Fumigation Only

Its fumes Kill Thrips, Green Fly, Black Fly, White Fly and other Insects

Don't wait—have your To-Bak-Ine ready. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Keep the Thrips in control and save money, time, labor and worry. Paint the heating pipes with To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Compound. After fires are out, vaporize it over alcohol lamps. Spray To-Bak-Ine Liquid. Any of these methods will control Thrips and other greenhouse pests—but it's easier to keep them out than to get them out. Fumigate regularly, before you see the pests—especially just before you open the ventilators, and just after closing them, these warm spring days. Don't fail to have a can of To-Bak-Ine on hand—and use it.

To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Compound is a concentrated solution of pure nicotine and capsicum, adjusted by chemical assay, making it the strongest Fumigating Insecticide known. Directions based on weekly application during growing season.

Vaporizing by means of alcohol lamps.—Use three to four lamps to each 100 running feet of greenhouse and use five to seven teaspoonfuls to each lamp. Let the houses be tightly closed and do not use lamp with too strong a flame, as the compound must be vaporized, not burned.

When the heating system is steam, To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Compound can be applied on the steam pipes with an engineer's ordinary oil can, with the opening of the tip a little larger than a needle; use 20 to 25 teaspoonfuls to each 100 running feet by simply running the spout of the can along the top of the pipe, always walking away from the fumes.

PRICES:—1-pint can, $2.00; ½-gal. can, $7.75; 1-gal. can, $15.00; 5-gal. can, $67.50.

Write for prices on 10-20-40-gallon casks with locked faucet and for other information on fumigating.

BEST INSECTICIDE ON THE MARKET

Here is a sample of the letters we receive:

"We have used your To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Compound and find it to be the best Insecticide on the market. We paint it on our steam pipes just before the steam is turned on. We are also using your To-Bak-Ine Liquid as a spray, diluted with water, and find it does all the work you claim for it."

(This is from one of the largest growers for the Chicago market. Glad to furnish name and address to any grower.)

To-Bak-Ine Powder—50-lb. bag, $1.50; 100-lb. bag, $3.00.

Send for "WORDS OF WISDOM," by leading growers, and "FLOWERS AND PROFIT," both free. They tell all about fumigating.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There are two points that stand out clearly in the cut flower situation for the week ending May 17: Mothers' day and the rose crop. Mothers' day was more generally observed, both in and out of town, than last year. Its observance was shown in the heavy demand for white carnations that forced the price up to 4 cents, 5 cents, 6 cents and, in a few instances, for unusually fine stock, 8 cents, carrying off everything obtainable. Some of the retail stores kept open Sunday, May 14, to meet the demand. Other flowers were affected. Gardenias were taken in place of white carnations at $6 per hundred, making a good substitute. White roses were also used. When white carnations ran short, colored carnations sold well, but not at an advance. The prices realized on colored stock were about half those on white, while the average price was not one-half, indicating slower sales.

The rose crop is now at its height with many of the growers. The supply is so large that, in spite of a good demand for the season, and in spite of extraordinary efforts to dispose of the flowers, they accumulate. Beauties are abundant. They are sold in large numbers at prices that are fair for the season. The better grades of the other varieties are sold; carefully selected roses are sold in small, and occasionally in large, quantities at excellent prices. When open, old, unselected, they are sold at prices that seem low even to those accustomed to low prices.

Taken all in all the market for the current week is fully up to the average of mid-May; probably it is a little ahead of the average. White peonies have made their appearance fresh from the sunny south. Blue cornflowers, bluets they are called, are here, too. Sweet peas of the summer sorts from outdoors, where drought is unknown, lead their jaded winter-blooming rivals, Cattleyas and valley have slipped back to the rear of the stage for the time-being. White lilac has withdrawn altogether, promising to reappear next week when the outdoor crop is harvested. The proud gardenia is content to be understudy for the white carnation, except in rare instances where selected gardenias are wanted by some fastidious flower lover. Callas have had their day. Easter lilies are still a burden to the wholesalers. Snapdragons are cheap indeed, except the fancy pink. Asparagus, smilax and ferns are more active.

Down at Mrs. Smith's.

When J. Otto Thilow, chairman of the essay committee, rose in response to the president's call for his report at the May meeting, everyone turned expectantly. "Mrs. Sarah I. Smith will tell us about violets and carnations at the June meeting," he said; "how to grow them and various other matters of interest relating to them." Here was an event of promise. When Mrs. Damon Y. Kilgore first entered the legal profession the papers were full of it; the matter was discussed pro and con; Mrs. Kilgore was besieged by would-be interviewers, while all the lawyers of distinction were urged to express their opinions on the opening of this new field for the fair sex. Mr. Thilow's words suggested the similarity of the positions occupied by Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Kilgore, the one toward flowers, the other toward law. A visit was immediately planned and promptly carried out.

Mrs. Sarah I. Smith has about 15,000 square feet of glass at Secane, devoted to violets, carnations, sweet peas and, as a summer crop, to asters. She embarked in business as a florist eight years ago. Her first effort, in Atlantic City, N. J., was in a small way. A few frames devoted to violets, cared for by a true lover of the modest little flower, produced an abundance of blooms of such fine quality that Mrs. Smith decided to test their value in the wholesale market, sending them to this city.

The encouragement brought by the sale of those violets from the frames resulted in the purchase of a half dozen acres of ground at Secane. Here Mrs. Smith built a modern residence, for which she drew her own plans, and erected two greenhouses, 10x75; the others have been built since. Violets, her first love, were planted and grown with the knowledge acquired from her experience with the coldframes. Mrs. Smith's single violets, fancy varieties in large bunches, have been a feature in the wholesale market. Carnations have since been added and, to judge by the wealth of bud now on the plants, they have done well. Enchantress, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Winsor, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Alma Ward and Beacon are the principal varieties. Sweet peas are grown as a side crop, many of them in boxes about 6x12 inches, placed next the supports of the house, on which the vines twine. Asters will follow as soon as the crops now in the houses are over.

Mrs. Smith has recently added more ground, strong evidence of prosperity. She attributes the success of her flowers to the excellent soil, but the combination of Mrs. Smith's care and the soil is unquestionably the potent factor. Experience, Mrs. Smith thinks, is the best teacher. She attends to all the practical details, overseeing the greenhouses and working in them all day. She is an enthusiastic lover of flowers, deriving health and pleasure, as well as profit, from her chosen work.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have had a week of warm weather and cut flower business has been at quite a low ebb, the exception being May 13, when the call for flowers for Mothers' day stimulated trade considerably, roses and carnations selling particularly well. With some growers carnations are nearing the end and the really good flowers arriving are not numerous. The quality has held up surprisingly well, but the late heat wave has caused many to become spidery and the general quality is on the decline. Roses are suffering from the hot weather and many are sold only at low rates. Richmond is getting poor. Beauties are still good, but the demand is not strong. Sweet peas are still popular. The short-stemmed ones bring low prices, but all those of good quality and desirable colors are selling well.

Callas and lilies are abundant, with but little call for them. Daffodils and tulips are now all outdoor grown and are in much reduced numbers. The quality also is not up to the average. Gladioli, such as America and Peach Blossom, sell quite well; others slowly. There is no great call for valley, while stocks and snapdragons, even when of pleasing colors, are slow sale. Marguerites are overabundant, especially whites. Bachelor's buttons sell fairly well. Pansies are druggy. There is an overstock of Cattleya Mossiæ and a good supply of other orchids, but the call is limited for them. The demand for asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengeri, continues good.

when there was an attendance of 130 members. The exhibits included Lilium myriophyllum and L. leucanthemum from R. & J. J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, has a superb lot of Cattleya Mossiæ, also some grand Miltonia vexillaria, odontoglossums and other summer orchids, all of which he grows well.

Several Review readers have lately been inquiring about the Godfrey calla. The writer saw a fine batch of this variety growing at William Nicholson's, Framingham, Mass., last winter. It was producing treble the flowers of the old variety, flowers fully as large and color purer. Mr. Nicholson is an enthusiastic admirer of this fine calla and anyone seeing it as he grows it would want to try some.

Edgar Bros., of Waverley, are getting a heavy pick of sweet peas from their houses, including some extra fine Spencers. They follow the peas with chrysanthemums.

According to Prof. C. S. Sargent, the damage done to evergreens last winter was greater than in any single year during the last three decades.

talk up carnations as the only Mothers' day flowers, as a number do. No special flower should be boomed at the expense of others.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., when the writer called upon them, were as usual up to their ears in business and are making great preparations for an immense Memorial day trade. Their dagger ferns are fine. They are featuring lyrata as a substitute for southern smilax.

There are general complaints of the inferior quality of tulips and narcissi outdoors this season. The Hollanders are blamed for selling inferior bulbs, but the fact that varieties which were of splendid quality indoors are inferior outdoors goes to show that it is the long dragging winter, the acute deficiency in rainfall and the arrival of a hot wave which forced flowers out prematurely, and being quite dry at the root they lasted a brief period. Tulips average only half their customary height and narcissi are little over half their usual size.

Thomas Roland has this week commenced work on his big new range of greenhouses at Revere.

The display of malus at the Arnold Arboretum is this week at its height. Many of the lilacs are already in bloom and about May 20 the display should be at its best. All varieties are heavily flowered.

Local nurseries are still shipping some deciduous stock and will continue to send out evergreens the rest of the month. While the volume of business has been heavy, the short and dry season has made it a not altogether satisfactory one.

The W. W. Edgar Co. has a grand lot of Memorial day hydrangeas and a big stock of bedding plants of all sorts, which they are moving rapidly.

E. D. Kaulback & Son, of Malden, are bedding plant specialists who are doing a large and increasing business each year. Of geraniums alone they have over 50,000 in all the leading sorts. They report business as satisfactory. W. N. Craig.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

There is either "a feast or a famine" of carnations in this market. A few weeks ago they were being sold at any price, but even that did not induce the retailers to buy what they could not sell, and a great many were dumped. Then the growers started to throw out their old plants to plant anew, and, consequently, during the last week the carnation market has cleaned up every day.

Mothers' day called for more white than could be supplied. Large shipments were sent out to the surrounding cities and states as early as Wednesday, and by Saturday there was hardly a white carnation to be had for the city trade. It is rather a difficult matter to tell two or three weeks ahead of time just how many carnations there will be on a certain day, and sometimes mistakes are made in accepting orders for so many It is somewhat like a game of chance, and the man whose order is filled completely at a time like this should congratulate himself on his good luck. In previous years, Mothers' day has made but little extra demand in Denver. It has never been pushed by the local florists, and orders from out-of-town points where it is observed more extensively have been gratefully received. But we find that this year was an exception, the demand being greater than was expected, and hereafter the city trade will be better taken care of. The price of fancy white carnations did not go over 3 cents.

ful. The quality is still quite good and the demand steady. Cape jasmine has arrived and is on sale at several of the large grocery stores.

Memorial day is always a trying time for the florists. It is almost impossible to tell what there will be in the way of outdoor stuff, as the weather is so uncertain at this season of the year. It is possible that there may be snow before that time. It has been known to come as late as this. Lilacs are in full bloom now and will be gone in a few days, so they are out of the question. Snowballs look as though they will be in good condition and there will probably be some peonies. Carnations will be scarce, as orders are already booked for about as many as can be supplied.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

ARNOLD RINGIER, secretary of the W. W. Barnard Co., has returned to Chicago after a trip to the Pacific coast.

VISITED CHICAGO: Carlos Jensen, manager of export trade, and Wm. Rehm, American representative of L. Dæhnfeldt, Odense, Denmark. Mr. Jensen was on his way to New York after a trip to the Pacific coast.

F. H. HENRY, of Henry & Lee, New York, passed through Chicago May 15 on his way to the Pacific coast, where he will join Robert Fulton, of his firm, who has been ill since January, of a nervous disorder. Mr. Henry may continue his trip to Japan in case Mr. Fulton is not able to make his annual voyage.

THE W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, has leased the premises at 231 to 235 West Madison street, a five-story building, 45x 183 feet, occupied at present by the Chicago American newspaper, and after thoroughly remodeling same, expects to occupy the new quarters about January 1, 1912. The location is on the main line of travel to the Union Station and the new Northwestern Station, soon to be opened. It is ideal for the counter trade.

ON account of a somewhat backward spring and the absence of rain up to about May 1, little was done before that date in the Michigan pea section. Recently there have been nice showers, which put the soil in fine condition, and caused great activity among the farmers. By May 15 the peas were practically all in the ground. C. B. Pyle, at Jackson, N. Y., said he thought the seed was going in under fair conditions and that, in his opinion, the next forty days would tell the tale regarding the season's crop.

HYACINTH DUTY AND GRAMMAR.

Text of Customs Court Decision.

Through The Review for May 4 the trade received the news of the court decision that the duty on hyacinth bulbs is 50 cents per thousand under the existing tariff act, instead of $2.50 per thousand, as assessed during the two seasons since the act went into effect. The full text of the court's decision is now available and will be of interest, especially as most of those in the trade believed that the intent of congress was to provide for the higher rate. Considering that the evidence in the case shows that hyacinth clumps are hardly an article of international commerce, one knowing the bulb trade and who is not completely enamored of our system of protection is entitled to a smile at the reasoning in the last sentence of the decision, which is, in full, as follows:

BRECK & SON V. UNITED STATES.

1. "Hyacinth" in Paragraph 261, Tariff Act of 1909.

The only assignable reason for the change of "hyacinths" in paragraph 251, tariff act of 1897, to "hyacinth" in paragraph 263, tariff act of 1909, is the word in the last case was employed as an adjective and not a noun, and "hyacinth" in the connection there used must accordingly take its grammatical construction as an adjective; and this more especially as there is nothing to indicate a contrary intent in framing that paragraph.

2. Hyacinth Clumps.

Hyacinth clumps are clusters of roots or bulbs joined together and are within the ordinary meaning of the word "clumps."

3. Hyacinth Bulbs.

A comparison between the former law and the later form of it seems to make it clear the importation was dutiable not as hyacinth, and so taking a higher duty, but as bulbs from which clumps are propagated, at a lesser rate of duty, under paragraph 261, tariff act of 1909.

SEVEN TOP TURNIP

¶ Originally introduced by us from South Carolina in 1850 and annually grown for over sixty years under the zero winter temperature of Bloomsdale Farms, the Landreths' strain of Seven Top has obtained, by this northern culture, a hardiness not approached by southern-grown seed. All inferences would point that way, while thousands of experiments have conclusively proven it beyond a shadow of doubt; consequently, one pound of Landreths' Seven Top will in the dead of winter produce more greens than can be cut from three times the more delicate southern-grown Seven Top.

De Vries, judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

Hyacinth bulbs imported from Holland were assessed for duty by the collector of the port at Boston at the rate of $2.50 per thousand as "hyacinth" under paragraph 263 of the tariff act of 1909.

The paragraph reads:

263. Orchids, palms, azaleas, and all other decorative or greenhouse plants and cut flowers, preserved or fresh, twenty-five per centum ad valorem; lily of the valley pips, tulip, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, one dollar per thousand; hyacinth, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps, two dollars and fifty cents per thousand; lily bulbs and calla bulbs, five dollars per thousand; peony, Iris Kæmpferii or Germanica, canna, dahlia, and amaryllis bulbs, ten dollars per thousand; all other bulbs, bulbous roots or corms which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, fifty cents per thousand.

Mention The Review when you write.

The importer, appellant here, maintains that they are dutiable at 50 cents per thousand under the last provision of the same paragraph, "all other bulbs." The Board of General Appraisers overruled the protest.

The determination of this issue, which is one essentially of construction of law, will be aided by an examination of paragraph 251 of the tariff act of 1897, of which the foregoing paragraph was the successor.

Paragraph 251 of the tariff act of 1897 reads as follows:

> 251. Orchids, palms, dracaenas, crotons and azaleas, tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, jonquils, lilies, lilies of the valley, and all other bulbs, bulbous roots, or corms, which are cultivated for their flowers, and natural flowers of all kinds, preserved or fresh, suitable for decorative purposes, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

The conclusion herein reached is dependent upon whether or not the word "hyacinth," as used in paragraph 263, supra, is used as an adjective modifying the word "clumps," in the same paragraph, or as a noun, embracing therewith all merchandise covered by its import.

The scheme of enactment adopted in the act of 1897 obviously differs from that adopted in the act of 1909. In the act of 1897 plural nouns were used covering the various classes of merchandise intended to be made dutiable, followed by a modifying phrase defining the precise application in which the preceding nouns were employed by congress. The plan of the act of 1909 differs. The subjects of legislation were divided in accordance with the rate to be applied, those assessed at the same rate being included in the same brackets, the brackets being divided by a semicolon. The first bracket followed the scheme of the act of 1897 by using nouns with a general modifying phrase and applying the same ad valorem rate. The remaining brackets adopted the adjectival plan. In the whole scheme, with reference to these brackets, excepting the first, a change from the plural in the act of 1897 to the singular in the act of 1909 was adopted.

A change of legislative method is always deemed a change of meaning.

The natural presumption is that the phraseology of the statute was changed in order to change its meaning. The very fact that the prior act is amended demonstrates the intent to change the preëxisting law, and the presumption must be that it was intended to change the statute in all particulars touching which we find a material change in the language of the act. United States v. Bashaw (50 Fed. Rep., 749) and Rothschild v. United States (179 U. S., 463).

The only conceivable reason for the changing of the word "hyacinths" from the plural in the act of 1897 to the singular in the act of 1909 is to make it an adjective instead of a noun. Strength is added to this conclusion by the fact that if the word is used in the act of 1909 as a noun, it is used differently from the manner in which similar words are customarily used in tariff acts, for when used as a noun descriptive of merchandise eo nomine such words are customarily used in the plural. If the nounal rather than the adjectival sense is to be given the word "hyacinth," as used in paragraph 263, it will differ from the obvious sense in which all such words are used in the framework of that paragraph and will stand alone as the one noun used in the paragraph in the singular rather than in the plural, and the one word used as a noun in several precisely similar texts.

That congress considered "hyacinth" and the corresponding words in the paragraph used in an adjectival sense modifying the words "clumps" and "bulbs" at the end of each of the brackets is shown by the insertion of the word "pips" after the words "lily of the valley" in the second bracket. It would have been unnecessary if the words "lily of the valley" were used in the nounal sense and the word "bulbs" were modified by the word "gloxinia" only. The same inference is gathered from the second enumeration of "lily of the valley clumps" in the third bracket. If these words were used by congress in the nounal sense, as contended by the government, the single use of the words "lily of the valley" in the second bracket, without being followed by the word "pips," would have been sufficient to embrace lily of the valley clumps, pips, or bulbs, if the contention of the government is true.

The grammatical construction of the phrase concedes to the word "hyacinth" an adjectival sense modifying the word "clumps."

It is a well-settled rule of construction that the grammatical sense must be adopted unless there are within the statute cogent reasons indicating a contrary intent upon the part of the lawmakers.

In Endlich on the Interpretation of the Statutes, section 2, it is stated:

> The first and most elementary rule of construction is, * * * and that the phrases and sentences are to be construed according to the rules of grammar; and from this presumption it is not allowable to depart, unless adequate grounds are found, either in the context or in the consequences which would result from the literal interpretation, for concluding that the interpretation does not give the real intention of the legislature.

More definitely applied, the same authority in section 414, after citing and reviewing many adjudged cases in point, states:

> Indeed, in most cases, it will be found, on some ground of this sort, that, where several words are followed by a general qualifying expression which is as much applicable to the first as to the last, that expression is not limited to the last, but applies to all.

In Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction, section 408, the rule is affirmed in this language:

> Statutes as well as other writings are to be read and understood primarily according to their grammatical sense, unless it is apparent that the author intended something different. In other words, it is presumed that the writer intended to be understood according to the grammatical purport of the language he has employed to express his meaning. This presumption gives way when it appears from a perusal of the context or the whole statute that the legislature did not grammatically express its intention.

There is nothing in the context of this paragraph or act which to our minds indicates that the word "hyacinth" was to be used other than in its grammatical sense, and as such sentences are construed by the courts, to-wit, as an adjective modifying the word "clumps." On the contrary, for the reasons stated before, we think the context and history of the paragraph indicates the intention upon the part of congress to use the word in an adjectival sense.

We are of the opinion, therefore, that by the proper provision of paragraph 263 congress intended to and did levy a duty of $2.50 per thousand upon "hyacinth clumps," and that the only

If Lily Bulbs could be manufactured we would make them so well that they would practically be perfect. Since this is impossible, however, we do the next best thing by importing only the very best produced. Bulbs are a product of the earth, and the most mortal man can do is to cultivate them properly and increase their flowering capacity. There is no firm in existence today paying more attention to quality than we are, and the grand majority pay no attention to any particulars except the price. Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are today giving the best average of any brand known. They cost no more per flower than any other brand and you can depend on them. provision in that paragraph or the act for hyacinth bulbs is the provision for "all other bulbs."

The government further answers this appeal by the statement that that construction should not be adopted for the reason that there is no such thing known as "hyacinth clumps."

It is conceded by all parties to the record that the particular importation is a "hyacinth bulb." It was shown clearly by the record, which is replete with all obtainable information upon the subject, that a "clump" from a horticultural standpoint is a "cluster of thickly grown plants and the roots intermingled together. It always takes two or more plants to make a cluster or clump"; and, further, quoting the testimony of another witness, it is "a mass of crowns or underground buds shooting from no common center, having several different germinating follicles in this mass."

"Bulb," as the word signifies, is defined as a germinating follicle, "emitting from its center within its flower shoots and foliage, and all from one common center."

These descriptive definitions, of which there are many in the record, are in accord with and in nowise differ from the common understanding and acceptation of those terms as applied to the subject matter.

It is shown by the record that the propagation of the hyacinth is one covering an extended period of time, and of peculiar development. Briefly stated, and there is no controversy in the record upon this point, to effect that purpose hyacinth bulbs peculiarly fitted

Cambridge, Mass.—Edmund Reardon, the Cambridgeport florist, was one of the founders of the John Reardon & Sons Co., soap manufacturers, and still retains an interest in the business. He was formerly president of the Citizens' Trade Association and still takes an active part in that society's work for the promotion of the city's business interests. His greenhouses were originally conducted as a private enterprise connected with his home estate, but he gradually drifted into commercial lines and is now doing a prosperous general florists' business.

PACIFIC COAST.

The fifth annual rose festival at Portland, Ore., will be held June 5 to 10.

Pasadena, Cal.—H. F. Prentice, of Long Beach, has secured a 3-acre tract of ground in the southeast part of town, and will erect greenhouses there. He expects to grow flowers for the Los Angeles market. He has but recently come from the east, where he conducted a nursery and greenhouses near New York city.

THE SAN JOSE MEETING.

Fifty members of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association will leave Seattle in June to attend the annual meeting at San Jose, Cal., which will be opened June 21 and continue for two or three days. The representatives from the northwest will leave by the same boat as a large party of eastern delegates to the Sunday school convention in San Francisco.

The nurserymen will represent the states of Washington, Montana, Idaho and Oregon, which hold the leading position in the association, organized about five years ago. The organization was largely due to the efforts of C. A. Tonneson, of Tacoma, who was elected secretary, which position he since has filled. The meetings up to the present have been held in the northwest, this being the first session to be held in California.

A full account of the arrangements for this convention was published in The Review of April 20, page 58.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has turned warm again, after quite a spell of cool days and nights. Flowers of all seasonable kinds are plentiful and of excellent quality. Business, however, is chiefly noticeable by its absence. The closing of the schools and an occasional wedding decoration are all that loom on the horizon at present, but Memorial day is not far off, and that will help to gladden the heart of the retailer.

Outside stock is beginning to be quite a factor in the trade. Sweet peas, which were rather scarce for a couple of months, have suddenly made quite a showing and are among the most popular flowers at this time. Peonies are in full sway. The Bride and other early gladioli are rather plentiful. Spanish iris, anemones and half a dozen varieties of wild flowers are in full swing and everything looks like springtime. Violets are over. Lilium longiflorum, valley and late tulips are much scarcer and in a few days the last named will be gone for the season.

Various Notes.

The Market.

Business is about the same as previously reported; the counter trade is steady, but the sales are mostly small, with funeral work to break the monotony. The variety of flowers is limited, carnations having the principal demand, while roses are in firm form, with a daily clean-up.

The lateness of the season has delayed all outside stock, but that is a good thing for the florists with Decoration day approaching.

Advance orders at the time of writing indicated that business for Mothers' day would be of greater proportion than in former years. The governor issued a proclamation and flowers were to be given away by all the churches.

H. Biescar, of Los Angeles, Cal., is spending a few days in the city. He is engaged in the wire design business.

Preparations for the rose festival to be held June 5 to 10 are well under way.

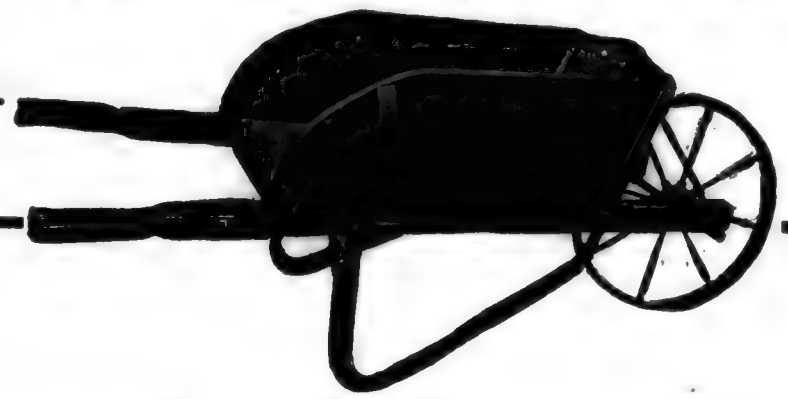
Now is the time to order your supply of Fischer's grand Freesia Purity. Be sure to ask your dealer for Fischer's guaranteed stock, grown by him and supplied to you in his original package; for this stock is never sold in bulk, but is always packed by him in 100, 250 and 500 bulb muslin bags, stamped and indorsed by his signature. Insist upon getting his guaranteed stock, for then you are sure you are getting the pure stock that is grown in the open field in the pure air and sunshine; is thoroughly ripened and absolutely free from culls, and not stock that has been raised from its own seed, which never comes true, or lathhouse grown, which is likely to rot in your benches, instead of growing, owing to the very green, unripe state in which it is dug to get it ready for market in time, or stock that is grown on contract and therefore with the least trouble to the grower, which will very soon evolve itself into a mixture little removed from refracta alba. Eternal vigilance is absolutely necessary to keep it pure. Do not run any risk when you order your Freesia Purity, for it is up to you whether you get the pure stock or a mixture.

To protect both you and himself, his stock this year is sold under guarantee in any sized package to suit dealers, not exceeding 500 in any one package. A certificate of guarantee is enclosed in each package, and Rudolph Fischer's signature is on the outside of package. If you want to get the true stock, insist upon getting it packed as above.



Your dealer will get it for you; if not, write to me and I will tell you who will.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June 14 to 16, 1911.

J. Dykhuis, of the firm of Felix & Dykhuis, Boskoop, Holland, has arrived at New York for his annual business trip through the United States and Canada.

The question, "What is an evergreen seedling?" has not yet been settled in the minds of the customs authorities; no two collectors make the same classifications.

Wm. Pitkin, chairman of the A. A. N. committee on legislation, is advised that no action will be taken on the Simmons bill at the extra session of Congress.

An order was issued May 11 by the State Railroad & Warehouse Commission of Minnesota, canceling the half rates on nursery stock heretofore made by the railroads of that state and authorizing the railroads to increase the rates, effective June 1.

J. H. Hale has just returned home to Glastonbury, Conn., after a trip to his orchards, and others, in Georgia. He estimates the Georgia crop this season as between 1,000 and 1,200 carloads. It will begin to move the last of this month. The season is ten days earlier than usual, but all the peach prospects north of Macon and Atlanta were frozen out at blooming time. Compared with the customary Georgia crop of 3,000 carloads, or last year's bumper crop of 6,200, this year's is small, but the fruit promises to be of extra quality and size.

THE QUARANTINE BILL.

The so-called Simmons bill, giving the Secretary of Agriculture authority to establish quarantine against nursery stock from insect infested districts, was referred to the committee on agriculture, which will give the trade a hearing before the bill is reported out. The text of the bill is:

H. R. 8611.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

A BILL

To regulate the importation and interstate transportation of nursery stock, to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to establish and maintain quarantine districts for plant diseases and insect pests, to permit and regulate the movement of fruits, plants, and vegetables therefrom, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That from and after ....., nineteen hundred and ....., it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to import or offer for entry into the United States from any foreign country any nursery stock un-therefor are chosen; the bulb is then scooped out or T crosses made on the exterior and bottom with a knife; it is then stored in a dry, warm place until little bulblets, so-called, are started; these little bulblets germinate upon the wounds of the bulb made by the scooping or cutting; it is maintained in a particular temperature for about three months, whereupon these little bulblets are formed; the result is then planted like an ordinary bulb, and the little bulblets grown in the mother bulb and form little sprouts, and while in the ground gradually consume the mother bulb, whereupon they are taken up to be dried and planted again, which process is repeated until they become a matured hyacinth.

HYACINTH DUTY AND GRAMMAR.

Pictures were introduced showing the cluster of little bulblets on a mother bulb, and it is claimed by the importer, appellant, and was testified by the witnesses that this is what could be properly characterized as a "hyacinth clump." It is undoubtedly a cluster of roots or bulbs joined together, and within the ordinary understanding of the word "clumps." That such clumps exist in Holland in great numbers, are interchanged among the growers there, and occasionally, though in rare instances, are imported into this country, is made clear by the record. As shown by the record, successful importation must be attended with very great care. For experimental propagation of these, the record shows, importations have been made by the government, a plant has been established in the state of Washington, and their cultivation made a matter of governmental attention and effort.

In the light of these facts this court does not feel warranted in disturbing the grammatical construction and apparent intent of the congress in the enactment of paragraph 263 as affecting hyacinth clumps. Indeed, the act being a protective one for the purpose of not alone maintaining existing industries, but particularly for the purpose of developing new industries, these facts appear to be in perfect harmony with the purposes of the act and argue an intention of the congress to levy a duty upon hyacinth clumps, and in furtherance of the propagation thereof a lesser duty upon the hyacinth bulb from which the clump is propagated.

Reversed.

Montgomery, presiding judge, and Smith and Barber, judges, concur.

MERIDEN, CONN.

The Market.

Mothers' day business was good. In the early part of the week, however, trade was not so brisk. At the end of the week much funeral work took up all roses, carnations, lilies and a lot of bulbous stock and lily of the valley. The general quality of the roses has never been better for this season of the year. Beauties, Killarneys and Richmonds deserve special mention. Pink roses have been in special demand. Carnations were never better than last week.

Mothers' day business started on Saturday morning and continued briskly until midnight. Everyone reports business much bigger and better than last year. Cut flowers of all kinds sold well in the larger downtown stores, but in the outskirts the demand was not so great. This was offset, however, by the number of flowering plants sold. The demand for these was much larger than in the past, and azaleas seemed to be the favorites. Ferns were sold in big numbers. Carnations were in great demand; naturally pink and white were the most sought after colors. Roses were also sold in large numbers.

This is really the first time Mothers' day has been observed here to any great extent. The florists seem to have been well repaid for all efforts put forth to make the day successful.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Greenbacker are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl, born May 9. We extend our hearty congratulations.

The Blatchley Co. reports a fine sale of carnations on Saturday, May 13, white and pink being the favorite colors.

Joseph Greenbacker had a special sale last week, and the stock offered constituted one of the best displays of spring plants and flowers that he has ever shown, including pansies in every available color and a large variety of potted plants, all in bloom. Many people took advantage of this sale and purchased flowers and plants for their gardens.

John Bonell reports a fine trade for last week, the business being double that for the same week last year. B.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—This city has a new retail store, making four, and they all seem to be doing a fair business.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Mothers' day was the feature of the cut flower market during the week ending May 13. The success of this anniversary was remarkable. Last year it made a pronounced hit, but this year the popular observance so far exceeded last year that there was no comparison. The demand was so great that the supply was entirely inadequate, despite the special preparation by our wholesale florists.

The demand for white carnations was greater than at Christmas or at Easter, and of course this greatly helped the cut flower market in other lines, by bringing flower buyers to the stores at a time when they were badly needed.

The rose crops are extremely heavy just now, and it requires a good deal of exertion on the part of the growers to keep the stock moving. Sweet peas are less abundant, but some extra fine ones are to be had in limited quantities. Good Darwin and other late tulips are still seen and outdoor valley is now at its best and, as its quality is much ahead of the forced article, it is in good demand. Good gladioli can now be obtained.

The bedding plant trade has taken on new life and growers are kept on the jump. Geraniums are still the leaders and promise to be none too plentiful, because of the scarcity of stock last fall in this locality.

Various Notes.

Chas. Seybold is busy planting several large private estates and finds good stock exceedingly scarce. Mr. Seybold is interested in the vacant lot gardens. School children will be instructed as to the care and treatment of all kinds of flowering plants and each one will be given a chance to win one of the numerous prizes offered for the best appearing vacant lot gardens. Q.

Belfast, Me.—Willis E. Hamilton began business here twenty-six years ago and has built up a substantial, prosperous trade in cut flowers, plants and vegetables. In the management of the business he is ably assisted by Mrs. Hamilton and their son, Everett. He has two greenhouses at Cedar and Franklin streets, and five greenhouses, with two and one-half acres of land, on Congress street.

The grandest Fern of the age

NEPHROLEPIS ROOSEVELT

IMPORTANT SPECIAL NOTICE--PRICE ADVANCE

THE heavy demand from those who have seen Nephrolepis Roosevelt growing on our place and scarcity of stock compels us to advance the price on all orders dated after June 1st to the following:

2¼-in. pots, 50c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100; $300.00 per 1000.

It is our belief the price of Nephrolepis Roosevelt for 1911 will be maintained during the season of 1912.

Nephrolepis Roosevelt is a sport from Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, but a wonderful improvement over the parent variety. The fronds of Roosevelt are from a third to one-half wider than Boston and beautifully tapered from base to tip. Each of the pinnæ is distinctly undulated, giving the whole plant a decidedly wavy effect which attracts the eye instantly. Nephrolepis Roosevelt will make more young plants, produce a third more fronds, has more graceful, drooping habit and will finish to a larger and finer plant in small pots than any other fern on the market. Our stock is positively free from that vicious little white scale which is causing fern growers so much trouble.

Orders received to June 1st will be booked at the following prices: 2¼-inch pots, 40c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000. 25 plants at 100 rate; 250 plants at 1000 rate.

Good & Reese Co., Largest Rose Growers in the World Springfield, Ohio

WATERBURY, CONN.

The Market.

Mothers' day should be recorded as a red letter day in the florists' business. All the local florists report a fine trade. It seems that an effort should be made to have the public understand the meaning of the colors, and that white flowers of any sort will do as well as carnations. Naturally, the divine flower should come in for its due share of popularity on that day, but not to the exclusion of other flowers.

The market certainly had a week of excellent business. The warm weather brought out the flowers in profusion. Carnations were plentiful, especially white, but more of them could have been handled easily if it had been possible to get them. Sweet peas, lilies and roses are in ample supply.

Wedding bells are ringing constantly. Every retailer seems to have his share of the good things, and some of the decorations run up into large sums. It has been a good month.

Various Notes.

Alex. Dallas is busy getting ready to go to his new place, at Mill End. At his stores a fine trade is reported for last week.

Mr. Young, of East Main street, has purchased a new automobile for delivery purposes.

Saxe & Floto, who run a first-class store at 60 South Main street, report a prosperous winter. They had a fine business for Mothers' day.

The Flower Shop, 144 Bank street, had an unusually artistic window display last week. They report a brisk business. B.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Things are moving along nicely. There is no special rush, but design work continues plentiful. Stock is coming on the market in good condition and everything is abundant, with the exception of carnations. It is not likely, however, that this will last long. Lilies are still coming on the market heavily and the price is low. A large number are being used in funeral work. Hydrangeas are coming in quite plentifully and are good. Roses are in good supply and show excellent condition. The hot weather, however, is beginning to show on Bride and Maid. Beauties are of exceptionally good quality. Gladioli are coming on the market in fairly large supply and are eagerly bought. Peach Blossom is especially plentiful. Blushing Bride is in big demand, but there are few of this variety on the market. It does not seem to be grown here. Good orchids are coming in. Some fine Cattleya Mossiæ are seen. Iris is plentiful, particularly the Spanish variety.

The trade in bedding plants has started with a rush. A visit to the market, to Mrs. Endean, the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., or J. A. Simmers, shows people buying freely. Several of the up-town florists handle plants and report a big business. On Saturdays an enormous business is done in this line at St. Lawrence market.

Various Notes.

The spring meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club opens May 20. This means a lot of extra work, as this is the society event of the year. J. H. Dunlop has the order for all the official work.

From present indications, June will be a busy month in weddings. Many large orders are booked.

S. A. Frost has just received a large importation of bay trees from Belgium. He is pushing the sale of these and reports a large number of orders. This last shipment is fine. Boxwood also is having a big sale.

J. J. Higgins, C. A. Lewis and the F. Simpson Co. all report a good trade, particularly in bedding plants.

Sunday was Mothers' day and the demand for white flowers was brisk. This day is always commented on in the press beforehand and, as a result, many button-holes of roses and carnations are sold. S. A. Frost had several display cards in his window calling the attention of the public to the day and did a fine trade. E. A. F.

CARNATIONS—HARDY.

THE NEW HARDY EVER-BLOOMING CARNATION "CRIMSON KING."

Everybody has asked for a carnation that would live out in the garden during the winter. We have pleasure in offering this new plant, as it will fill the bill. It is absolutely hardy, standing even the Canadian winters in the yard. It blooms all summer long, never a day that you cannot cut blossoms. By potting up in the fall you can have flowers in the house all winter. The color is a rich crimson, the fragrance is delicious. We know of no plant that the florists can offer to their patrons that will give as much satisfaction as this hardy carnation. Crimson King, 2¼-in. pots, $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. 25 plants sold at 100 rate; 250 plants at 1000 rate. ...NEWS NOTES...

Harrisburg, Pa.—J. E. Miller will open a flower store at 19 North street.

Belfast, Me.—W. E. Hamilton had an extra fine and large display of Easter flowers. His stock of blooming plants was nearly double that of any previous year.

Forks, N. Y.—Albert J. Wakemann was slightly injured recently when a horse that he was driving ran away, bringing the vehicle into collision with a telegraph pole.

Exeter, N. H.—A. H. Craig & Son, formerly at Stratham, N. H., are at present in business here. Their property at Stratham was completely destroyed by fire, with a loss of about $6,000.

Freeport, Ill.—The Easter business was excellent with the Freeport Floral Co., according to Louis Bauscher, secretary and manager; the increase was fifty per cent compared with last year. There was a fine sale for potted plants; cut flowers also sold well. Many customers bought for gifts, just as at Christmas.

Rutherford, N. J.—The greenhouses of the Julius Roehrs Co., in accordance with a custom which the firm introduced a few years ago, were thrown open to the public on Saturday, April 8, and on the following day, Palm Sunday. A small admission fee was charged and the proceeds were turned over to the Town Improvement Association.

Greenhouse Heating.

IN EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS.

Will you please tell me how many lines of 2-inch pipe, for hot water, are needed to heat a house 11x40 feet and seven feet to the eaves, with forty-two inches of glass, the rest of the walls being wood? I want a temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. The house runs east and west and is between two larger houses. There will be one 6-foot bench. E. G. W.

For a house 11x40 feet, with forty-two inches of glass in each side wall, two 2½-inch flow pipes and eight 2-inch returns will be ample to secure a temperature of 60 degrees, when the mercury does not drop more than 10 degrees below zero.

A RANGE IN SWEDEN.

Kindly give me some information in regard to the arrangement of my heating system. I have about 30,000 square feet of glass, which I intend to heat with hot water. The houses are separate, each 220 feet long, and run east and west. They vary in width from twenty to thirty feet and the required temperatures vary from 50 to 60 degrees. Through the middle of the range, crosswise of the houses, extends a passage, where I intend to put the main and return pipes, with pipes running east and west from these to a distance of about 100 feet. The boiler-room, with a pit six feet deep, is at the north side of the houses and contains space enough for three large boilers, in battery, to heat all the houses.

I should like to know which would be the better way—to install one large main, running all through the middle passage and branching off into 2½-inch flows in each house, and also a large return to take all the return water from all the houses, or to use a 3-inch flow and 3-inch return as main pipes in each house. If the latter plan is followed, the greatest distance that the water will travel will be about 250 feet. How large should the foundation be for a square brick chimney sixty feet high, in heavy clay-ground? B. & C.

It will probably be best to run one flow pipe on each side of the passage-way, making these pipes sufficiently large to supply all of the houses, except perhaps the first house on each

at the National Flower Show, Boston, Mass.; and also received the universal approval of all the visitors who examined its merits, the expression of the majority being

"THAT IS THE BOILER I HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR"

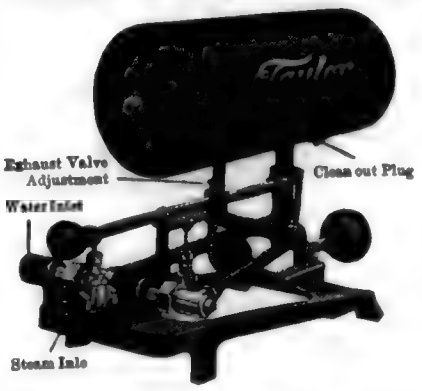
The points of merit that appealed to the judges and the critical visitors were that the fire-box is entirely surrounded by water, there being no brick work to require constant repair; every part of the boiler is easily accessible for cleaning and oiling, which is the most important feature to be considered in purchasing a boiler that is idle during the summer months; all the castings, doors, grates, etc., are made double extra heavy.

¶Made in 23 sizes for steam and hot water.

¶In use during the past five years by well-known florists in all parts of the country.

¶Have shown a saving in coal consumption of from 25 to 40 per cent over other types of boilers.

¶All parts of the boiler subject to wear are made standard.



¶The grates are of the shaking and dumping type, with openings for egg, pea or soft coal.

¶Tested at the factory to 150 pounds pressure.

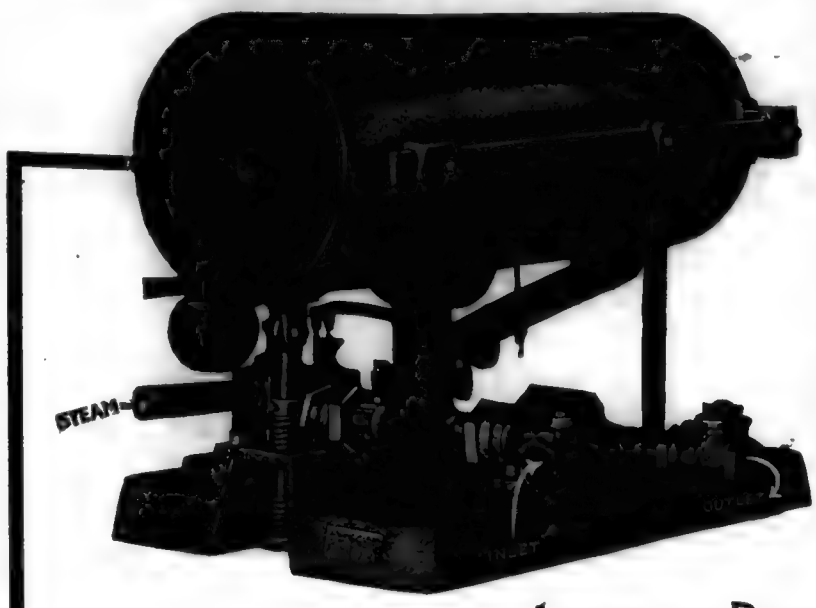
The base of the chimney should be eight feet square and deep enough to extend below the frost line.

ONE DETACHED HOUSE.

Will you kindly inform me what is the best method of piping, for hot water, one detached house, 17x42 feet, running north and south? It measures ten feet to the ridge and the side walls are four feet two inches high, with three feet of glass. The south gable is glass; the north gable is joined to a shed. The house is slightly protected by buildings. The boiler will be two feet below the level of the greenhouse. What rating of boiler will be required? The climate here, in southeastern Kansas, is generally mild. I should prefer to place all pipes on the side walls, if practicable. W. C. L.

To heat the house described to 60 degrees, when the mercury outside is 10 degrees below zero, two 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns should be used. The flows and returns can be upon the side walls, if preferred. A boiler rated for 600 square feet of radiating surface will give a good margin.

REBUILDING GREENHOUSES.



I should like to get some information in regard to moving greenhouses. We have about 10,000 square feet of glass. Most of the houses are 15x100, cypress throughout and from four to eight years old. Some of the gutters are somewhat warped. Would it pay to use these? If not, would it be better to substitute iron or wooden gutters? We intend to saw an inch or two off the ends of the sashbars and wish to rebuild as economically as possible.

We have two boilers, yoked, which are just about right for the present glass area. How many feet of glass can we add if we install a motor-driven circulator? About what saving in the cost of the heating pipe would result from the use of a circulator, as compared with an open gravity system?

Would posts of 4x4 pecky cypress outlast locust posts? How about a better grade of cypress for posts? What is the best wood preservative to use on the lower ends? Would it be better, and would it add to the life of the posts, to set them in concrete?

What is the best way to handle 3-inch and 4-inch pipe which can not be uncoupled on account of rust or white lead? Must the casting be broken? Would it be cheaper and more practical to cut the pipe and then join it again with Stuttle's patent pipe clamp?

F. G.

Whether it will be advisable to use the old gutters when rebuilding a greenhouse will depend upon the condition of the wood and the care it has received. Ordinarily it is not good policy to use gutters that have been in a house as long as eight years, and yet if they have been kept painted and are in good condition it might be well to use them again. If you cut off the ends of the sashbars they should last nearly as long as new bars.

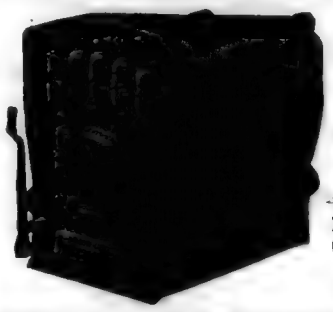
WHAT THE USERS SAY

"Fires twice during night in coldest weather: Kroeschell Boiler far better than cast iron boilers."



With your No. 14 Boiler I am heating 27,000 sq. ft. of glass, but have no doubt this boiler would take care of 37,000 sq. ft. We have not had the least bit of trouble to maintain proper temperatures. In very cold weather I fire twice during the night. I had two cast iron boilers before, but yours are far better. Last winter I heated 17,000 sq. ft. of glass with my small boiler, your No. 7 maintaining a temperature of 50° when outside temperature was 6° above zero (the regular rating of No. 7 Boiler, without Generator, is 15,000 sq. ft. of glass), with the Kroeschell piping system in connection with the Kroeschell Generator. This piping system and the Generator are entirely satisfactory. I take pleasure in recommending the system and boilers to anyone.

While the use of a circulator does not add to the efficiency of a boiler, it may by improving the circulation bring about that result, and at the same time make it possible to use smaller pipes in the mains and coils, or to use a smaller number of pipes in the coils. Just how much difference it would make depends entirely upon the efficiency of the present system, but it would probably add from ten to twenty-five per cent.

Either locust or a good grade of cypress or red cedar should be used for posts, unless gas pipe posts are preferred. If the concrete is brought up well above the surface, so that the posts will be kept dry, it will add to their durability, but otherwise it may hasten their decay. Some of the creosote compounds make good wood preservatives, but care should be taken about using them too freely in greenhouses.

If the joints can not be started by means of heat, the pipes can be cut and united by means of pipe clamps.

The Market.

Many carnations were sold for Mothers' day. Colored flowers moved almost as rapidly as white ones. The Memorial day rush is on and local florists are looking for a heavy trade, as usual. Stock is in fine shape for outdoor planting. Cut flowers are plentiful and of good quality. Harrisii lilies are in great evidence and form a large part of the florists' store decorations.

Various Notes.

Robert L. Birnie and Louise L. Osterberg were quietly married March 30. Mr. Birnie is a valued employee of the Baur Floral Co.

Artstone Flower Vases

These Artstone Flower Vases do not, like iron vases, become so hot in midsummer as to burn the plants. Artstone is indestructible from exposure to the elements, while iron, angular and grim, soon rusts, and marble gradually discolors and decays. To display flowers in unsightly wooden pails, tin tubs, or the like, is an incongruous spectacle, which, except in case of inability to procure suitable receptacles for them, betrays the utter absence of artistic taste. Flowers, like gems, require appropriate settings. The superb artistic beauty of these creations attracts universal admiration and lends a touch of quiet elegance, of distinction, of refinement and culture to the surroundings They serve to enhance the beauty of the lawn, the porch, the hall or the garden wonderfully. Popular also for cemetery decoration.

A Rain Machine

Send postal for these books

You can have rainfall at your command—IN any quantity—at any time—with the Skinner System of Irrigation.

The special nozzles, set in the overhead pipes, spray the water in a fine mist uniformly all over the plants and ground, just like a steady, gentle rain.

The most delicate foliage cannot be injured; the ground does not cake and crack, but keeps soft and porous, letting in the air, so essential to rapid plant growth.

The Skinner System of Irrigation will save enough in labor in one season to pay for itself. The area that one man can water is limited only by the extent of the installation. Write today for our interesting illustrated booklets on indoor and outdoor irrigation.

The Market.

The sale of cut flowers for the week has been remarkable. Carnations have been just about equal to the demand, although more white could have been used. American Beauties and other roses are in good supply and the demand is good.

Mothers' day created an extraordinary demand for all kinds of flowers, surpassing McKinley day. I think that in the future Mothers' day will be looked forward to as one of our banner market days.

Green goods are plentiful.

The Sixth street flower market is booming. Bedding stock is selling about as fast as the florists can bring it in.

The supply houses report extra good sales on wire hanging baskets.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Society is working tooth and toenail, as the saying is, for the flower show this fall. Geo. S. Bartlett, 131 East Third street, is distributing the preliminary schedule. The bowling club is making preparations for an outing in the near future.

J. Chas. Murphy, one of our progressive young florists, is building an additional 250-foot house. About July 1 he will take his brother, Frederick, into partnership, when we will see a hustling firm.

Wm. Murphy is handling large quantities of bedding plants for J. A. Peterson.

This year's sales of white carnations for Mothers' day were away ahead of expectations. While the wholesalers cleaned up on them as far back as the previous Wednesday, for shipping orders, it was on Saturday and Sunday that the local demand for them became apparent. The observance of the day has taken hold far more than was expected, and we trust that the future will see it as popular here as in any other city, for it is and will remain a day well worth our special attention.

The Market.

Business was highly satisfactory last week. The good report comes from all sides. People who waited until the last minute to get flowers for Mothers' day were much disappointed. Though carnations were abundant, the prices on them held up and many more could have been handled to good advantage. The rose crop was also heavy, but the trade did not seem to call for roses as readily as for other stock. Nevertheless, when the supply of other stock was exhausted, they were glad to take what they could get. Considerable quantities of double narcissi and jasmines were shipped into the city markets and all were disposed of. Besides, there was a great deal of funeral work, which kept the local florists on the jump from early morning until late at night.

Mothers' day here proved to be more successful than it did a year ago and the florists are in hopes that next year's business will more than double this year's.

Various Notes.

Olson & Lunden report a fine week. The many funerals last week helped to make business brisk. This firm has given up rose growing and devoted their houses to carnations and bulbous stock. They intend buying their roses of the wholesale growers in the future.

R. C. Blatchley, of Meriden, was a visitor at Milldale last week, making the trip in his new automobile.

Curtis the Florist reports a fine spring trade, with a good increase in business during the last few weeks.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Flowers are not scarce in this city; everything both inside and out is in bloom.

Mothers' day was all that could be expected of it, as it took all the white carnations and almost everything else. If this day is kept up it will be one of the big days in the year, as, in fact, it was this year.

The continued warm weather is causing many to take a chance and bedding plants are going out in many places, which will help the plantsmen a little.

The wholesalers say that until a lot of these outside flowers are gone it will be an act of charity not to ask too many questions about business.

T. P. Langhans has moved to his summer home at Allison Park.

Hoo-Hoo.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Trade was rather dull last week, although funeral work has been fairly plentiful. The carnation supply has shortened up somewhat and they are bringing from 50 to 60 cents per dozen, while roses go for $1.50, with a few at $1 per dozen. Snapdragons in pink and white are good at 75 cents per dozen, and sweet peas sell at $1 per hundred. Indoor bulb stock is nearly all gone; what is left retails at 50 cents per dozen.

Pansies, daisies and forget-me-nots are in full bloom and the prices vary from 25 to 50 cents per dozen. We are having quite warm weather and all the growers expect to have their ten weeks' stocks ready for Memorial day.

There will be a good supply of geraniums and other bedding plants, and orders are now coming in large numbers. Sweet alyssum helps out, as garden work is in full swing.

Great interest is being shown in tree planting and the home garden contest, and results should show a big improvement over last year.

All the uptown stores have nice window displays. W. L.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The particular feature of last week was the heat. It was certainly a case of "good old summer time." Everything outdoors took a start that was marvelous and stock shot ahead so rapidly that you could almost see it grow. Business was normal, with some funeral work. Arbor day, May 12, gave a slight impetus for flowers, but not sufficient to cause any special flurry. Everything and everybody is ready for Memorial day and it is evident from early orders that the demand for small and medium pots of plants will be in excess of any previous year.

Mothers' day received more attention than it has ever done before and the wearing of carnations was quite general. Many of the retail florists, who as a rule are slow to take advantage of special days and accelerate trade by advertising, had cards in their windows and special decorations calling attention to the event, with the result that much stock was moved.

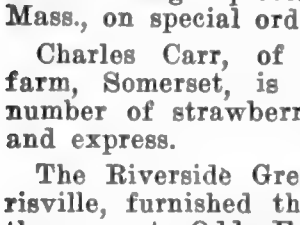
One of the largest department stores purchased 10,000 carnations for free distribution on Saturday and this added to the attention drawn to the day.

Various Notes.

John F. Wood had a narrow escape from fire a few days ago. A blaze in the basement smoked his place considerably, but fortunately did little damage.

Joseph Kopelman was a visitor to Boston several times last week.

S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., of Westerly, have purchased a Thomas touring car.



The Burke Rose Co. recently shipped several large pieces to Springfield, Mass., on special orders.

Charles Carr, of the Cedar Park farm, Somerset, is shipping a large number of strawberry plants by mail and express.

The Riverside Greenhouses, of Harrisville, furnished the decorations for the recent Odd Fellow anniversary services at the Universalist church in that village.

John Cirwein, who has been with Conrad Schultz, of Elm street, Westerly, for the last three years, has severed his connection with that firm and is about to enter into business for himself at Wakefield, where he will build a range of modern greenhouses that will cover 10,000 square feet of land and will be in running order by October 1. He will grow for both the retail and wholesale trade.

The several firms of this city who are engaged in the seed business report an unusually active demand last week, largely from small buyers. One concern states that more than 1,000 purchasers were waited on Saturday afternoon. W. H. M.

His Neighbor Had a U-Bar House, so He Built This One

AND that's the way it goes! Of course, it would be laying it on pretty thick to say a U-Bar house sells itself, but it is a fact that a goodly lot of our business each year comes through U-Bar owners tooting our horns for us. As one man put it: "Why, just look at the house and you can see how 'way ahead of other curved-eave houses it is!" And the beauty of it is, you can see it. It's self-explanatory.

Send for a U-Bar catalogue, which shows things more than it tells things.

Read these letters from a florist. They contain a plain moral:

THE STANDARD PUMP & ENGINE CO., Cleveland, Ohio.

Gentlemen: Last fall I put in a pump and engine and your man was here and told me that I wouldn't be satisfied with it. I wish I had taken his advice, as it is all worn out now and I have always had trouble with it. Now I wish to put in one of yours.

THEN WE GOT HIS ORDER FOR A STANDARD

Part of a second letter, six months later:

I think that you have the best machine on the market. It has never given us a minute's trouble since we have had it, and never refused to run.

J. J. BECK, New Castle, Pa.

If he had bought a Standard in the first place, he would have saved the cost of the cheap machine, saved the money and the time he spent in having that machine tinkered, and would have had better stock that year, because of better watering. You who read this should profit by his experience and buy a Standard now.

Ask the "Standard" to recommend a suitable pumping engine for your use.

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Manchester, Mass.—Harry Menken has entered the employ of H. Magnuson, the Bridge street florist.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

CO-OPERATIVE PUBLICITY.

Does advertising pay? Ask any florist in Cleveland and the answer will be in the affirmative. The plan of co-operative advertising had its first tryout recently in preparation for Mothers' day and it is the consensus of opinion that it was a howling success.

Signs and placards were printed advertising Mothers' day and these were spread broadcast throughout the city. Delivery wagons of every description bore one of the cloth signs reading: "Remember Mothers' day, May 14. Wear a flower in her honor." In many of the store windows, other than those of florists, were cards inscribed with the words: "Mothers' day, Sunday, May 14. As a token of love for her, wear some flower on this national day." Other cards read: "Flowers for mother. Don't fail to send some floral remembrance to mother for Mothers' day, Sunday, May 14."

Needless to say, there were not half enough white carnations and other stock was also short of the demand. Every store in town was completely cleared of stock by Sunday noon and everybody was satisfied. In the third year of its existence, Mothers' day is already one of the big days of the year.

Does it pay to advertise?

CARDS IN THE CARS.

Street car cards are a means of general publicity; it is not reasonable to expect from them the direct response that one gets from an advertisement in the leading daily paper, but cards in the cars nevertheless have place in any plan for the exploitation of a retail store. They are as useful to the local florists as to the national advertisers, though the latter are the ones who use most of this kind of space.

At Kansas City the Alpha Floral Co. uses the street cars to bring out the phone number, emphasizing the fact that although Kansas City is one of the towns that is so unfortunate as to have two telephone systems, Alpha's number in both systems is the same, 1806. The accompanying illustration shows how it is done: Of course, in a town of such size each telephone system is operated through a number of exchanges. Therefore, while the subscriber can get the same number in each system, he has two different exchange prefixes. By having one number in two different exchanges the confusion is reduced only one-half, so the Alpha Floral Co., instead of trying to teach the public to call for Grand 1-8-0-6 when using the Bell phone, and Main 1-8-0-6 when using the Home system, simply has dropped the exchange names in these street car cards, trusting to the operator at central to get the right exchange for the party calling.

Mr. Elberfield thinks the card reproduced is one of the best he has used.

The sketch was made up for three colors, but only two colors were used. The cost of a space 11x22 inches is 50 cents per month for each car. "We have been advertising in street cars for five years," says he, "and it is like all other advertising; it does not pay to get in for a few months, but every year adds greater value to it. It has in time its accumulative effect. In street cars I would advise change of copy at least four times a year."

Referring to the preparation of the copy. "The come-back orders are what count, and duplicate orders. Note that the first paragraph speaks about duplicating the order, and that the recipient was pleased and delighted. We carry out our name by a regular standard of type that is used in every adv.; also a few words regarding floral designs, which are always a florist's mainstay, or should be. A line or two is used on immediate delivery service, which is essential to success."

PLANNING THE DECORATION.

Making the Right Start.

While perfectly at home with any kind of store work and proficient in funeral designing, many persons hesitate to undertake decorative work, dreading that they may find themselves in an unknown country without a guide. The necessity of completing the work on time, the self-consciousness that comes from having an audience, as one usually has, the fear that results may not be altogether satisfactory, the want of adaptation to new surroundings—all these considerations combine to keep many shy of these jobs. Yet, if they will plunge in they will eventually conclude that it is the most delightful and fascinating branch of the floral art.

Somebody will remark about this time, "But I don't know how to go about it, how to figure on it, how to plan, etc." Well, in the first place you must look over the home thoroughly. Suppose it is an informal home wedding. "Size up" the rooms, their relation to the ceremony room, their general dimensions; height of ceiling; color of walls and woodwork; the number of doorways and their size; whether it is a light or dark house, generally speaking; figured or plain walls; amount of window space; kind of window draperies; the hall and stairway, whether opposite the entrance; whether the stairway presents a broadside or upstair view; style of balustrade; width of stairs; special features of each room and their location, as mantels, mirrors, seats, etc.; the view from one room to another, whether extended or obstructed; size and shape of dining table to be used; distance between table and chandelier; whether chandelier is in the center of the room, etc.

Then there are questions which you must ask, as to where the ceremony is to be performed, the number of guests, the path of the bridal party, style and time of ceremony, the kind of dining service, whether a color scheme has been chosen, and whether there is to be a musicians' corner.

The Decoration as a Whole.

The reason for all these observations and questions may not appear at first thought, so we may as well take them in order, with some remarks. First, then, the relation of the rooms. Could one decorative design, such as a wall festoon, be extended from one room to another? This depends upon their relative size and arrangement, similarity of color, whether partitions are half or entire, etc. If the rooms are rather small, do not recommend palms, for they would occupy too much space. Where the rooms are to be quite well filled with guests, doorway draperies are usually removed. If the ceilings are low, plan for straight lines up and down, such as posts or columns, whose decoration does not touch the ceiling. If the walls and woodwork are light, you may use plenty of green with dark flowers. If they are dark, you may know that the green used will be largely lost and that light flowers should prevail.

The number of doorways has much to do with any wall festooning which you may have in mind. If the room is much cut into in this way, do not attempt this plan, but use up and down panel effects. Double doorways or arches of about the same width take from one-half dozen to one dozen strings of smilax for both sides.

If the general look of the whole interior is dark, it might be well to introduce new backgrounds, such as light screens or silk draperies in places. Walls which are decorated with bold figures are as good as prohibitory for your plans for decorations. Keep away from them or cover them with new backgrounds.

Often you find a living-room in which one whole side or end consists of windows and is consequently a wide expanse of lace or silk drapery. Here is a place for smilax strings separated into their finest vines, hanging in straight festoons apparently from the ceiling down, but in reality from a light framework erected over the top of the windows like a false ceiling. Let this be several feet deep, according to the size of the room.

The Hall and Stairway.

Is the stairway opposite or in sight from the front entrance? If so, seize as a center and festooning the balustrade more or less elaborately. If the stairway and hall are dark, garlands of light flowers may carry out the same design. Many times these may be a light latticework of green made from the space above the balustrade to the landing above. A broadside view of the staircase will afford a better foundation for a decorative plan than an upstair view. A massive newel post is also a good starting point for a group of decorative lines.

The style of balustrade determines whether or not it will serve as a fastening place for decorative material. If open, well and good; if solid, of carved wood or other material, do not deface it by tacks or nails. Always leave the hand rail untouched. The width of the stairs determines whether you shall venture with any potted plants to mark its ascent. As a rule, they are better off than on.

The Mantel.

The special features of each room and their position with reference to each other should be accurately noted. Observe the mantel; its style, size, number of shelves; what is above it on the wall, whether mirror, picture or carved panels; length and width of shelf inside of columns or carvings. In case a large picture is over the mantel, you cannot plan for any elaborate upon that as one of the most important points. Plan for a hanging feature which has connecting lines with the balustrade above and below. You could suggest a number of plans, such as a hanging basket with draperies of smilax or asparagus starting from the basket decorative piece that would hide the picture. See whether a doorway is close enough to the mantel to connect the two in one set of lines.

The dining room is one of the important places. Here you must depend upon your questions as to time and manner of serving, the style of service, the size of the table or tables; the bride's table, its distinction from the others; favors or no favors, etc. If it is to be a reception table, then a high centerpiece of long, spreading lines will be needed, with your decorative accents centered above the table. If it is to be a wedding breakfast or dinner, your centerpiece must be confined to delicate, creeping lines and your grouping must be such as will be pleasant to look down upon rather than through and under, as in the case of the reception table.

A PLEA FOR FATHERS' DAY.

We have just celebrated Mothers' day—the second Sunday in May—and a grand success it was in every respect—except, of course, where some growers sent in pickled stock and caused disappointments. Mothers' day has come to remain with us forever and grow in public favor all the time. That is right, but how about Fathers' day? It was casually mentioned last year in the columns of The Review, but there it ended.

Now, as no one else has designated a date and a flower for Fathers' day, let me suggest both and give my reasons for so doing. Then, if any one else has a better idea, let it be adopted. Many of us hold the memory of father even dearer than that of mother, and most of us remember him with equal love and reverence, so why have a Mothers' day and not a Fathers' day?

The flower I would suggest is the chrysanthemum, because it is a strong, lasting flower. It is beautiful and most people love its fragrance. It reminds one of the strong, hardy, enduring qualities of a father; frosty, perhaps, but sturdy and true. And, last but by no means least, it can be grown anywhere, by anyone; every child can be independent and grow his own flowers for Fathers' day. Those who want the fine greenhouse kinds can buy them, but if they will satisfy themselves with a smaller specimen, they can buy a few plants and grow them for themselves, either in the garden or in pots.

The day I would suggest is the second Sunday in November. The early varieties of chrysanthemums would be in flower by that time and that is the proper kind for people to grow who have no greenhouses. The celebration would occur just six months from Mothers' day, giving the grown-up children another nice excuse to come tumbling home, and to eat the good things bought by that dear father and prepared by that dear mother. They would bring great bunches of father's flowers with them, with which to deck the rooms and table. After supper the men would sit by the fire and smoke till train time, when they would assist the wife and children into their wraps. Then, each one wearing a chrysanthemum, they would leave for home, conscious of having given and received great enjoyment.

Yes, let us have Fathers' day, by all means. Will some other reader or readers second my nominations or make other suggestions?

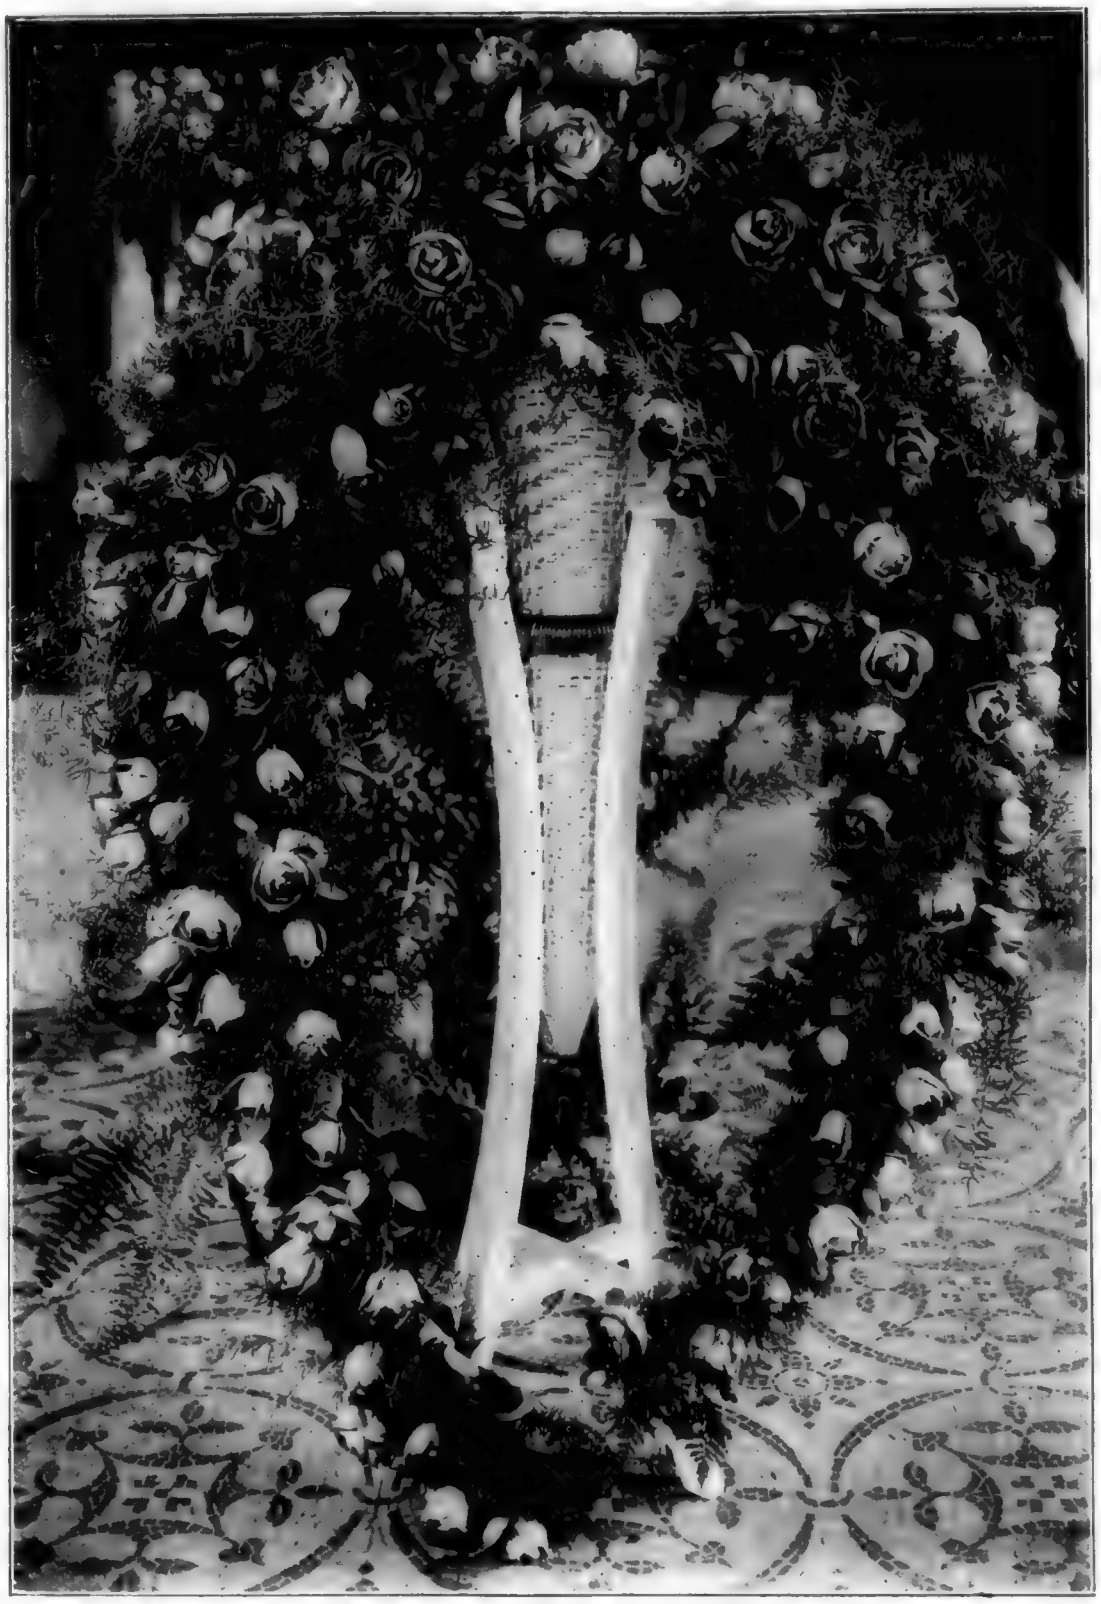
BEDDING OUT.

It Monopolizes Attention.

At present the sale of bedding plants and bedding out will occupy a good deal of the time of the average country florist. There are many who want their beds planted before Memorial day, also cemetery lots, vases and window boxes filled. All this means a lot of labor and it is often necessary to hire some extra help to tide over the rush season. Experienced help cannot usually be had for a few days and weeks, and we must perforce make the best of what is obtainable. With unusually warm weather, the greenhouses need much attention, and necessary work, such as syringing and watering, cannot be neglected, so be sure to leave one responsible person in charge.

Much bedding out is already done, but in the more northerly states, where killing frosts often occur in late May and early June, it is unwise to rush it. Some subjects, such as geraniums, if well hardened do not mind a light freezing, but it is quite otherwise with coleus, alternantheras, acalyphas, crotons and other plants, from which the leaves will be taken by a light freeze, and even if actual freezing is not reached, the plants get a chilling, from which they are slow in recovering. Set out the hardier subjects first and leave sub-tropical plants until the last.



Watering the Beds.

The rainfall over a large area of the country has been deficient for many months and soil will, in too many cases, be found dry. There is the greater need, then, to be sure that the balls of all plants are really moist when set out, and if the beds are to be watered, do it thoroughly, stirring the surface soil well on the following day. Do not advise your customers to play the hose on the beds every evening. It usually moistens and bakes the surface soil. One good watering a week, followed by a tickling of the surface soil, will do vastly more good than a week's dribblings, such as are generally meted out to bedding plants. Geraniums especially do not need a lot of water when in beds, any more than they require a lot of manure in the soil. Each tends to create a rank, soft growth at the expense of flowers. Probably you have noticed how geraniums flower late in the summer, when rainfall is light and the plants have used up most of the manurial agency in the soil. Young plants do not want to be grown dust-dry, but they should not be treated like semi-aquatics. If water must be given, let it be to such subjects as cannas, which will quite appreciate it.

Retain Good Stock Plants.

It is easy when a rush of bedding-out orders comes in to forget one's self, and it is a good plan to reserve a sufficient number of plants of each geranium for stock. Plant these out in beds or nursery rows and then they will not be sold. Be sure to label all correctly. It always pays to make the entrance to any commercial place attractive. Nice flowering shrubs, a few choice evergreens and a bed or border or two of cannas, geraniums, verbenas, petunias or any other bedding plants give a charm to a place, and their cost is always repaid many times over by the purchases of customers, who, but for your nice approach, would, in all probability, go elsewhere. The florist's place is too often anything but a thing of beauty, and photos of establishments in The Review, showing work accomplished along this line, should prove stimulating and act as a lever to many who are still content to travel along in the same old way.

As inroads on the plants increase, spend a little time in getting those remaining stood together in batches. It economizes on the watering, and the place looks the better for it. Then, again, do not throw the empty pots here, there and everywhere, but when you have a few spare moments have them carried to your pot racks and stored away in correct sizes.

CARRYING OVER PLANTS.

We have left on hand a number of azaleas and Spiræa Gladstone. Would you kindly tell us how to treat them so as to carry them over another year? Or is it worth while to do so? C.

Notes on the carrying over of azaleas may be found in The Review of May 11, page 12. Spiræa Gladstone, if it can be planted out in well enriched ground, moderately moist, will make strong clumps outside in two years, vastly superior to any you can import. In fact, so large have I had these clumps that I have found it necessary to cut them in two or three pieces with a sharp spade, in order to make them fit 7-inch pots. If you have good soil, where water does not stand in winter, by all means plant out your unsold spiræas, but do not force them until the season of 1912-13. C. W.

We have left on hand a number of azaleas and Spiræa Gladstone. Would you kindly tell us how to treat them so as to carry them over another year? Or is it worth while to do so? C.

Notes on the carrying over of azaleas may be found in The Review of May 11, page 12. Spiræa Gladstone, if it can be planted out in well enriched ground, moderately moist, will make strong clumps outside in two years, vastly superior to any you can import. In fact, so large have I had these clumps that I have found it necessary to cut them in two or three pieces with a sharp spade, in order to make them fit 7-inch pots. If you have good soil, where water does not stand in winter, by all means plant out your unsold spiræas, but do not force them until the season of 1912-13. C. W.

KILLARNEY SPORTS.

I have Killarney rose plants three years old on their own roots. They always have had the usual type of bloom until this winter, when on one plant a long shoot came out from the main stalk about two inches from the ground and had three heavy buds. These opened into full, double and large pink roses and now it is in bloom again. The roses on that shoot are large, pointed buds and the roses on the rest of the plant are the common straight buds, half-single Killarney. Is that what you call a sport? Is it the double Killarney now on the market? How can I get a large stock of the double rose? The shoot is about three feet high. I do my own rooting from cuttings, also graft. E. E. P.

This is undoubtedly a sport. There are several double pink Killarneys of varying shades of color. The double pink being offered is identical in color with the old Killarney, the type which yours probably is. Propagation of sports is not always a complete success, as these have a tendency to revert. You can root cuttings, but grafting would be an excellent way to increase your stock. The present, however, is not the best season for this work.

GROWER AND COMMISSION MAN.

Pretty nearly everyone who attends the conventions of the trade societies knows William J. Badgley, shown in the accompanying illustration as standing in one of his houses of Killarney at Madison, N. J. Mr. Badgley is one of the men who makes acquaintances easily, for he is the soul of good fellowship. In addition to being a rose grower at Madison, Mr. Badgley is interested in the wholesale business in New York city, his firm being Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, Inc.

PANSIES FOR CHRISTMAS.

At what time should pansy seed be planted to have flowers as early as possible, say by Christmas, in greenhouses? I live in Pennsylvania. H. K. H.

Sow the seed the first week in July. If outdoors, it will require watering, and a lath shade raised over it a foot or so will give necessary shade. A coldframe is also a suitable place in which to sow the seed. As the weather is intensely hot, as a rule, early in July, do not neglect the shade and watering. A month later in your latitude would answer for plants needed for spring sales. C. W.

CUT WORMS AND SOW BUGS.

The average cut flower grower knows the good things of this world—none of the simple life for him; he sets his table with all of the season's delicacies. Why, then, should he expect cut worms to accept a diet of bran in preference to succulent young growths? As a matter of fact, bran is a failure as a lure for any pest one seeks to poison.

Corn meal is what should be used to entice the cut worms, according to the experience of Frank Felke, whose place at Wilmette, Ill., now is free from this pest. It was not always so; while Mr. Felke used bran in his poison mash his stock was devastated. Carnations, mums, pansies—indeed, about everything he grew—seemed to appeal to the palate of the destroyer more potently than did the prepared food. Watching his colony of unwelcome boarders steadily increase, Mr. Felke concluded to set a better table for them, so he tried poisoning corn meal. The destruction was wonderful. Never since then has he had a visitation of cut worms but that he promptly got the upper hand.

"Use corn meal, mix with it Paris green, just enough to color; at nightfall scatter among the infested plants; don't water for six or eight hours before or after and you will have no further trouble from cut worms," he says.

Rye flour is a delicacy much relished by sow bugs, sometimes called wood lice; according to Mr. Felke, the little pigs will gorge themselves with it, if it has been sweetened to their taste, and roll up and die of the poison also included. He uses two parts rye flour, two parts sugar and one part Paris green, mixing only so much as is to be used at one time, as it deteriorates if it stands any length of time. The mixture is scattered along the top of the edge-board of the bench in the evening, being careful to see that the board is dry, else the mixture will become lumpy and unpalatable to even the most voracious of piggy bugs. "Try it," says Mr. Felke, "and you will be surprised to find how many it will kill; you wouldn't have believed there were that many on your place."

THE WATER GARDEN.

Interest Is Increasing.

The hardier nymphæas are now growing quite a little, and as the water in tanks, ponds and lakes has become quite warm, any of the more tender aquatics can now be set out.

Water lilies are a beautiful feature on any place and it is pleasing to note the increased interest being taken in them. There is something fascinating, refreshing and satisfying about even small pools of water in the warm months and these are full of interest when planted with suitable aquatics. All aquatics want full sunshine and meadow muck two-thirds and cow manure one-third, or good pasture loam and cow manure makes an excellent compost. Deep water is not advisable for successful nymphæa culture. Even the vigorous nelumbiums do better when they have not over a foot of water above their crowns while in active growth.

Providing the Place.

For those who have no ponds, a common plan is to use half barrels sunk in the ground. These answer well for the smaller nymphæas, such as lucida, Marliacea, chromatella, pygmæa, Aurora and some of the Zanzibariensis varieties, also for such aquatics as Eichhornia crassipes major, Limnanthemum Indicum, sagittarias, scirpus and Acorus Japonicus variegatus.

If ponds are at command containing a good natural bed of muck, no further compost is necessary. In places, however, without it, boxes three to four feet square and eighteen inches deep can be used. Dormant bulbs must not be planted deep. At first it is best to place them in pots, merely covering with water until they have made a leaf or two. Then gradually increase the depth, but never to exceed twelve inches. All locations for aquatics, especially nymphæas, should be still. Even playing fountains, pretty as they are, agitate the water too much for them. Nelumbiums like a greater depth of mud than nymphæas and a shallower covering of water. They do not look well planted together, as the nelumbiums will soon overrun everything, being so much more vigorous in growth.

Some Good Varieties.

The following list includes some of the best hardy nymphæas: Marliaceas carnea, chromatella, rosea and albida, Laydekeri purpurata, odorata, odorata rosea, known as the Cape Cod pink pond lily; odorata sulphurea, tuberosa and tuberosa rosea. A select list of tender varieties should include the following day bloomers: Zanzibariensis azurea and rosea, Capensis, Capensis cærulea, pulcherrima, Pennsylvania and William Stone. Among night bloomers in the tender section are: Dentata and its varieties, magnifica and superba; rubra, Sturtevantii, Frank Trelease, Deaniana, rubra rosea and O'Marana. Among the nelumbiums the following half-dozen will be found distinct and fine: Luteum, Pekinensis rubrum, speciosum, Kermesinum, album striatum and the superb Shiroman.

In the way of miscellaneous aquatics there are a large number at command, of which these are a few of the best: Limnanthemum Indicum, the water snowflake; Cyperus Papyrus, Aponogeton distachyum, Acorus Japonicus variegatus, Sagittaria Montevidensis, the giant arrowhead; Scirpus Tabernæmontani Zebrina, Zizania aquatica, the wild rice; Typha latifolia, the cat tail; Pistia Stratiotes, the water lettuce, and Limnocharis Humboldtii, the water poppy.

FREESIA PURITY.

Purity is unquestionably the finest of all freesias and is eagerly bought in the flower markets in all parts of the country. The plants illustrated were grown by William Nicholson, Framingham, Mass., well known as a leading carnationist, and are in 10-inch pans. A 24-inch rule is seen standing alongside one pan, the plants in which are twenty-eight inches in height from the top of the pan. Freesias such as these have commanded a fancy price in the Boston market, the first being cut the week before Christmas. Unlike some growers, Mr. Nicholson believes in planting the bulbs quite thickly and finds he gets excellent results from growing fifty bulbs in a 10-inch pan, the spikes being just as good as when half that number are grown.

The bulbs, after planting, are stood in coldframes and left there until early mums or other crops are out of the way. They are then given shelves well up to the light. In a cool house, kept around 45 degrees, the flowers are finer and possess greater substance than when grown warmer. A great mistake is still made by many in freesia culture in placing the bulbs in heat at once after planting. They should be grown as cool as possible in the earlier stages. Freesias with stems such as Mr. Nicholson's can be arranged magnificently in vases, being preferred by many critical buyers to both roses and carnations. The bulbs from which these fine freesias were grown came from William M. Matthews, Great Neck, L. I., a grower for Stumpp & Walter Co.

STEM-ROT OF CENTAUREAS.

Will you kindly state what is the cause of stem-rot of centaureas and what is the best treatment for it?

—— C. E. Y.

The greatest remedy for all these stem-rots and other fungous diseases is lime and the various lime preparations. Apply dry-slaked lime to the soil by dusting it around the plants and scratch the surface of the soil slightly. Spraying the plants with Bordeaux mixture will also help to destroy the fungus.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Allamanda Williamsii.

Allamanda Williamsii is one of the most valuable of summer-flowering pot plants. With the rush of the bedding-out season and Memorial day they are liable to be neglected. If they have been somewhat crowded, now that space is more abundant, spread them out and, where necessary, give them one or two short stakes.

If you are short of allamandas, they are easily propagated from soft-wood cuttings at this season. Given a close, moist house and necessary shade and water, they will root within a month. The climbing varieties usually grown, such as grandiflora and Hendersoni, are valuable in summer also. The flowers are fine for table decoration. Old plants which were rested, pruned back and are now growing vigorously may need a little tying in. They are gross feeders and a mulch of good cow manure and liquid stimulants twice a week will materially improve them.

Poinsettias.

The old stock plants of poinsettias started two or three weeks ago are now giving an abundance of cuttings. These root most easily when rubbed off with a heel. Do not allow them to lie around and wilt before placing them in sand. It has been found an excellent plan to throw them into a tank of cold water for a few hours before putting them in the sand. Keep them well watered and never let the sun shine on them until they are rooted; also, trim off the leaves quite closely before they go into the cutting bench.

Gardenias.

How about the young stock of gardenias? Have you propagated a sufficient number? It is not too late to root a good batch. Requirements are a warm, stuffy house and lots of moisture. A small frame placed in one of the houses, which can be kept shaded and quite close for a few days, except for a little tilt to prevent excessive condensation, will answer well for rooting gardenias in. You can hardly run them too hot if they have shade and lots of moisture. The leaves should be kept constantly damp and given a high temperature. About every cutting should be rooted within a month and these can be grown along and will make nice stock in 5-inch pots for winter flowering.

Early in June is a good time to plant out gardenias. They do not need a great depth of soil; four and one-half to five inches will suffice. Do not on any consideration use fine compost. Shake out all the finer particles and let it be somewhat rough, so that water will pass through it rather quickly. Any compost inclined to be pasty, on which water will stand or pass through sluggishly, is not suitable for gardenia culture. It will speedily produce the yellows. Fibrous loam three parts, old well decayed cow manure one part, with the addition of a little soot and some lump charcoal, has been found excellent for gardenia culture. A suitable distance for early planted stock is 18 x 24 inches. If set out in July, 12 x 18 will answer well. Make a little saucer around each plant for water and do not soak the whole bed in the early stages of growth. Syringe once or twice a day, using a spray nozzle, and mealy bug, scale and aphis will not trouble at all.

It pays to carry over any unsold plants of azaleas, as they usually flower earlier and more heavily the following season if given rational treatment. They can be kept in pots and well plunged or planted directly out in the open ground. Shade is not necessary; in fact, the plants grow better and set more flower buds when given the full sun. Be sure the balls are moist when planting out and tramp the soil firmly about the roots. Soil to which some old manure and a good quantity of leaf-mold have been added, is ideal for azaleas, but they will grow well in any ordinary loam, provided they can be kept well syringed all summer, and to prevent excessive drying out a mulch of old hotbed manure, mushroom manure, or any other well decayed manure can be given. In addition to azaleas, such plants as camellias, ericas, Daphne Indica and epacris can be similarly treated. Do not, however, plant them where you cannot reach them with the hose.

THE MURPHY BUILDING.

The business of William Murphy, of Cincinnati, has grown so satisfactorily that a few weeks ago he was able to move into a building of four floors and basement, which he occupies exclusively. There are a great many features of the flower business that make it a decided advantage to have one's own building. There are no instances of complaint because of the fragrance of the flowers, but many a florist's fellow tenants have failed to approve of the proximity of the fertilizers. Also, strange as it may seem, the tenants on the floor below do not seem to like to have the wholesaler upset his buckets of water. These are among the little vexations that are escaped when the florist has the property to himself. Mr. Murphy has installed a cut flower department on the street floor. The offices and florists' supply department are on the second floor. The third floor is used for sphagnum and green moss, with other articles of similar nature. The fourth floor is occupied by the wire work department. In the basement are the fertilizers, bulbs, and other heavy articles.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Fred Folden has purchased the business of H. Barsch, at 1501 Sixth avenue north.

Alvin, Tex.—T. C. Edwards, manager of the Edwards Fruit Co., shipper of jasmine buds, says the crop this season was the shortest in several years and there have been more orders than could be filled.

Toronto, Ont.—Geo. M. Geraghty, of John H. Dunlop's, has purchased an island of seventeen acres in Georgian Bay. Mr. Geraghty was formerly connected with the trade in Denver and later in New York city. Let none of his wide circle of friends envy him, though his new property is said to be an ideal place for restful outings.

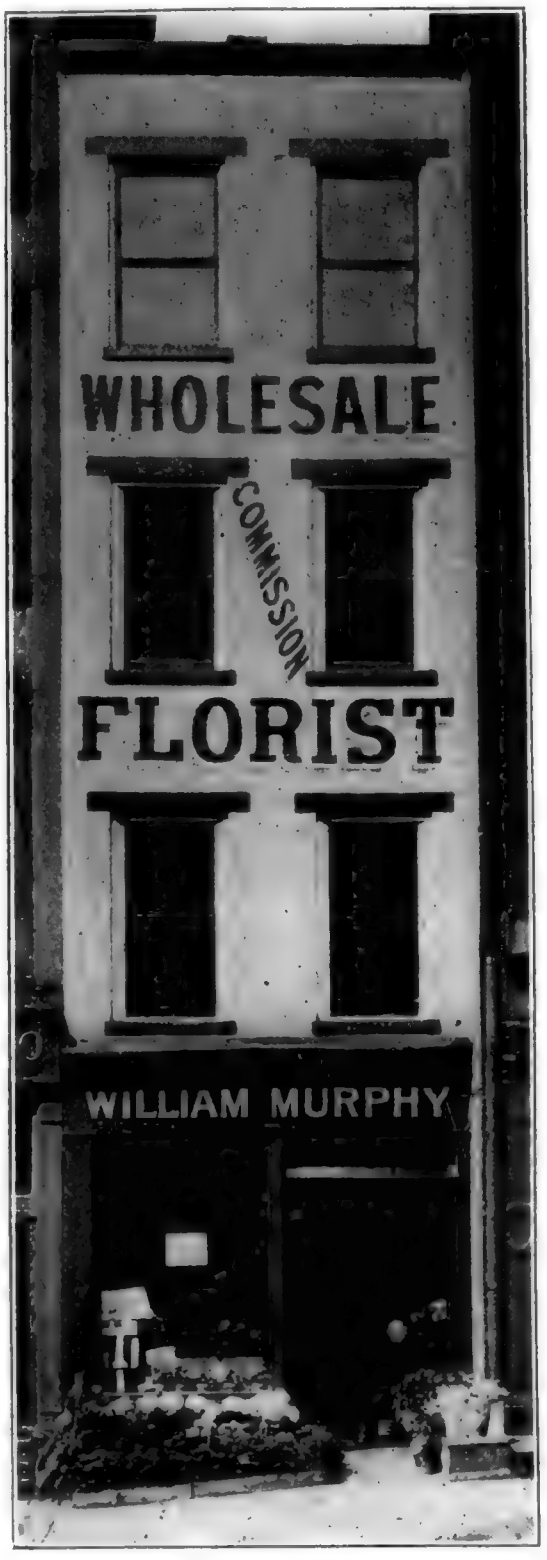
THE USE OF OLD SOIL.

According to N. Greivelding's method of handling his carnation soil, as described in The Review of May 4, page 15, he uses the same soil for as long a period as five years. Would you advise similar treatment of soil in benches six inches in depth? We have heretofore changed our soil every year, but should like to know whether others have successfully followed Mr. Greivelding's plan. C. D. D.



It would perhaps be better to ask the opinion of persons who have used soil two years successfully, as they could probably give advice as to the best way of handling the soil. We have tried out the idea of using soil two years on beds where only four inches of depth was used to plant in, and I am sure that it did not produce as good stock as new soil would have given us. Perhaps we did not handle it right, and I would hesitate to say that it could not be done. You will perhaps remember that a few years ago, when I first advocated the use of semi-solid beds for growing carnations, in my cultural notes in The Review, several prominent growers argued against it, claiming to have tried it and found that kind of beds inferior for growing carnations during midwinter. But we were using them right along with splendid success, and many growers, after seeing our stock, declared that they would at least give them a trial.

This theorizing on a subject reminds one of the story of the man who was thrown into jail on a trivial charge. His attorney, after hearing his story, declared, "Why, man, they can't put you in jail for a little thing like that!" But his argument gave little comfort to the prisoner, who said, "Confound it all! They've got me in jail, haven't they?" So it is with these propositions. Our theories, as to what will work and what will not, are all knocked into a cocked hat when someone comes along and tells you that he has done just what your theory is supposed to prove impossible.

One thing I have noticed, however, and that is: In every case where soil was used continuously for several years with success, the beds were solid, so that, when the soil was worked over, it was possible to spade it a foot or more in depth. There is no doubt that when the roots of the plants are able to go down into the soil as far as they please, the soil will not be exhausted as much as where the roots are confined to a depth of four inches. We are inclined to think that therein lies the secret of using soil continuously for more than one season.

Those who visited William Sim's place during the big show last March marveled at the fact that soil which had never been changed could produce such growth as was seen there. But when the method of working over the soil was explained, one ceased to marvel. It is needless to say that there were no raised benches there.

So, from what experience we have had personally with reference to this subject, and what we have seen elsewhere, I would advise against using soil on raised benches more than one season—at least until someone demonstrates by actual test that it can be done successfully. A. F. J. B.

CULTURAL NOTES.

General Treatment.

Under the head of general treatment are to be classed the most important details in growing carnations. There is, first, the temperature, which should be kept as even as possible, near the 50-degree mark at night, letting it run up to about 56 or 58 degrees on cloudy days and 65 degrees on sunny days. Those varieties with naturally stiffer stems will stand 2 degrees more—the Lawson family and Beacon, for example.

The most important of all operations is the watering, which must be attended to with the utmost care. Keeping the soil constantly wet will surely make it sour in the course of time, when it will be useless to plant growth and will even rot the roots, or at least retard their action. I generally judge whether watering is necessary by looking at the soil, noting if there are any active roots to be seen on top. Or I determine whether there is any moisture in the soil by taking a little between two fingers and squeezing it; if it flattens, then there is no hurry about watering, but if it crumbles up it is time to give them a fairly good soaking.

The air is another important factor in producing a good quality of stock. Do not be too stingy about your coal pile. We all know that plant life, as well as human life, needs oxygen for its existence. Without it there would be no life. This shows that the more air we can give the plants, the better will their constitution develop. I open the vents on all possible occasions, especially on close, cloudy days. These are the days that are most liable to produce rust and other fungous diseases.

Diseases and Pests.

In running up against diseases, I can not help using the old, common expression, "An ounce of prevention is better

It pays to carry over any unsold plants of azaleas, as they usually flower earlier and more heavily the following season if given rational treatment. They can be kept in pots and well plunged or planted directly out in the open ground. Shade is not necessary; in fact, the plants grow better and set more flower buds when given the full sun. Be sure the balls are moist when planting out and tramp the soil firmly about the roots. Soil to which some old manure and a good quantity of leaf-mold have been added, is ideal for azaleas, but they will grow well in any ordinary loam, provided they can be kept well syringed all summer, and to prevent excessive drying out a mulch of old hotbed manure, mushroom manure, or any other well decayed manure can be given. In addition to azaleas, such plants as camellias, ericas, Daphne Indica and epacris can be similarly treated. Do not, however, plant them where you cannot reach them with the hose.

THE MURPHY BUILDING.

The business of William Murphy, of Cincinnati, has grown so satisfactorily that a few weeks ago he was able to move into a building of four floors and basement, which he occupies exclusively. There are a great many features of the flower business that make it a decided advantage to have one's own building. There are no instances of complaint because of the fragrance of the flowers, but many a florist's fellow tenants have failed to approve of the proximity of the fertilizers. Also, strange as it may seem, the tenants on the floor below do not seem to like to have the wholesaler upset his buckets of water. These are among the little vexations that are escaped when the florist has the property to himself. Mr. Murphy has installed a cut flower department on the street floor. The offices and florists' supply department are on the second floor. The third floor is used for sphagnum and green moss, with other articles of similar nature. The fourth floor is occupied by the wire work department. In the basement are the fertilizers, bulbs, and other heavy articles.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Fred Folden has purchased the business of H. Barsch, at 1501 Sixth avenue north.

Alvin, Tex.—T. C. Edwards, manager of the Edwards Fruit Co., shipper of jasmine buds, says the crop this season was the shortest in several years and there have been more orders than could be filled.

Toronto, Ont.—Geo. M. Geraghty, of John H. Dunlop's, has purchased an island of seventeen acres in Georgian Bay. Mr. Geraghty was formerly connected with the trade in Denver and later in New York city. Let none of his wide circle of friends envy him, though his new property is said to be an ideal place for restful outings.

THE USE OF OLD SOIL.

According to N. Greivelding's method of handling his carnation soil, as described in The Review of May 4, page 15, he uses the same soil for as long a period as five years. Would you advise similar treatment of soil in benches six inches in depth? We have heretofore changed our soil every year, but should like to know whether others have successfully followed Mr. Greivelding's plan. C. D. D.

It would perhaps be better to ask the opinion of persons who have used soil two years successfully, as they could probably give advice as to the best way of handling the soil. We have tried out the idea of using soil two years on beds where only four inches of depth was used to plant in, and I am sure that it did not produce as good stock as new soil would have given us. Perhaps we did not handle it right, and I would hesitate to say that it could not be done. You will perhaps remember that a few years ago, when I first advocated the use of semi-solid beds for growing carnations, in my cultural notes in The Review, several prominent growers argued against it, claiming to have tried it and found that kind of beds inferior for growing carnations during midwinter. But we were using them right along with splendid success, and many growers, after seeing our stock, declared that they would at least give them a trial.

This theorizing on a subject reminds one of the story of the man who was thrown into jail on a trivial charge. His attorney, after hearing his story, declared, "Why, man, they can't put you in jail for a little thing like that!" But his argument gave little comfort to the prisoner, who said, "Confound it all! They've got me in jail, haven't they?" So it is with these propositions. Our theories, as to what will work and what will not, are all knocked into a cocked hat when someone comes along and tells you that he has done just what your theory is supposed to prove impossible.

One thing I have noticed, however, and that is: In every case where soil was used continuously for several years with success, the beds were solid, so that, when the soil was worked over, it was possible to spade it a foot or more in depth. There is no doubt that when the roots of the plants are able to go down into the soil as far as they please, the soil will not be exhausted as much as where the roots are confined to a depth of four inches. We are inclined to think that therein lies the secret of using soil continuously for more than one season.

Those who visited William Sim's place during the big show last March marveled at the fact that soil which had never been changed could produce such growth as was seen there. But when the method of working over the soil was explained, one ceased to marvel. It is needless to say that there were no raised benches there.

So, from what experience we have had personally with reference to this subject, and what we have seen elsewhere, I would advise against using soil on raised benches more than one season—at least until someone demonstrates by actual test that it can be done successfully. A. F. J. B.

CULTURAL NOTES.

General Treatment.

Under the head of general treatment are to be classed the most important details in growing carnations. There is, first, the temperature, which should be kept as even as possible, near the 50-degree mark at night, letting it run up to about 56 or 58 degrees on cloudy days and 65 degrees on sunny days. Those varieties with naturally stiffer stems will stand 2 degrees more—the Lawson family and Beacon, for example.

The most important of all operations is the watering, which must be attended to with the utmost care. Keeping the soil constantly wet will surely make it sour in the course of time, when it will be useless to plant growth and will even rot the roots, or at least retard their action. I generally judge whether watering is necessary by looking at the soil, noting if there are any active roots to be seen on top. Or I determine whether there is any moisture in the soil by taking a little between two fingers and squeezing it; if it flattens, then there is no hurry about watering, but if it crumbles up it is time to give them a fairly good soaking.

The air is another important factor in producing a good quality of stock. Do not be too stingy about your coal pile. We all know that plant life, as well as human life, needs oxygen for its existence. Without it there would be no life. This shows that the more air we can give the plants, the better will their constitution develop. I open the vents on all possible occasions, especially on close, cloudy days. These are the days that are most liable to produce rust and other fungous diseases.

Diseases and Pests.

In running up against diseases, I can not help using the old, common expression, "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure.'' The natural preventive for all these different spots, fairy ring, etc., is nothing but fresh, dry air and careful watering. This should convince us that syringing is to be discontinued as soon as the weather prevents us, in early winter, from giving sufficient fresh air to keep the atmosphere pure.

But now, while we are trying to prevent fungous diseases, we cultivate red spider. This is quite a problem, as the only real preventive for this obnoxious little animal is cold water, with thirty pounds of pressure behind it. I fight it in fall, when the days are still bright and sunny, and give it a rest until the days get longer and warmer, so I can open the ventilators to dry the plants after a good soaking. In fact, I would rather have a little rust than a dose of spider. I must not forget our other living friend, the green fly. I call it friend. It is a friend as compared with the other fellows we have to put up with. There is no excuse for its being in the greenhouses, as only a little smudge every week will keep it out entirely. Of course, if it gets its own way it will spoil the foliage and may even take enough substance out of the buds to cause them to split. Here I must say, however, that this is not the only cause of splitting. I think uneven temperature is what chiefly does the work. Of course, some varieties are more subject to it than others, so it can not be prevented entirely. As to chemical remedies for all these different troubles, I have little to say. I have tried a few of them, but with rather poor results. So I prefer to stick to prevention; let others take to cure, if they choose.

Benches or Solid Beds?

Which are best for carnations, solid beds or raised benches? To this question I must give the same answer as I have given many times before. In solid beds I can grow good stock if I am half asleep, but when I grew them in raised benches I found it necessary to be wide awake all the time. This difference lies in the watering. If you can keep away from the hose long enough to giye them a chance to dry out once in a while, solid beds are all right.

As to the varieties to grow, I leave that to each grower himself. He knows best which are the most profitable for him to grow and which bring him the most money, or which his trade demands.

As to new kinds, I will say it is nice to have something new every year, for the pleasure you get out of it, but I do not think it profitable for the smaller grower to invest much in things that he does not know, because every dollar spent has to be made again. It is up to the larger grower to try everything that is promising, and he, if he strikes something good, has the room to make all he can out of it.

Timing the Crops.

In order to regulate our crops to advantage, we should try to have the heaviest cut in midwinter, be off crop in Lent and come in again heavier for Decoration time, when flowers as a rule are not too plentiful. To accomplish this, a little pruning is essential. During winter, while taking cuttings, I trim out all weak growth which is likely to come in bloom at a wrong time. This helps to strengthen the remaining shoots for a good spring crop. At this time of the year it is far better to have a slightly smaller number of flowers and to have them good. This will also help to keep the faker from the streets; 25-cent sales will not be necessary, and yet we will realize more money for our goods in the end. If all the growers work toward this end, a great deal can be accomplished. I know the retailer will appreciate it. It is pretty hard to ask 75 cents or even 50 cents a dozen for carnations if on the other side of the street they are sold for 25 cents.

IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

By G. Prickett, Tottenham, England.

On reaching New York, American friends piloted us around the wholesale florists' stores in the city. All doors were thrown open to us and we were interested in the methods explained to us. Our eyes were opened to the large quantities of roses and carnations handled. Cold chambers at all the establishments are useful for holding over unsold stock until the following day. In all the cities we visited the florists were most cordial in their welcomes. Their nurseries and seed stores exceeded my expectations, not only in the quantities of flowers grown but in the methods that prevailed. The greenhouses and heating arrangements are far ahead of anything I have seen in the old country. At Chicago, an uninterrupted view of five acres of carnations under glass, planted out on raised beds, was a sight never to be forgotten. I think their methods of greenhouse building are in advance of ours; with them money seems to be no object.

The Boston show was a grand affair, but in my opinion the old country can go one better, excepting, perhaps, on roses and carnations. In the nurseries the plants for market are not so good as grown around London for Covent Garden market. Cut roses, carnations and sweet peas were grand for the time of the year.

By John S. Gunn, Birmingham.

In giving my impressions of America, the one which stands out the most prominent and which gave me the most pleasure, was the hearty welcome extended to us by all the florists and growers we met there, and the genial and good fellowship that they had for each other.

I should think that the cut flower trade has grown very rapidly during the last ten years, on account of the immense glass structures that have been erected during that time, especially for roses and carnations, which are grown to the highest perfection, although some of the varieties of roses would be unsuitable for our British cut flower trade. All plants seem to be looked upon from a cut flower standpoint only. Any varieties that do not give a good and continuous crop are discarded by the grower, which leaves the florist with little variety.

Our visit to Boston show was of great interest, as it gave us a more general idea of what is grown in this country. As we expected, the roses and carnations were very fine, as also were the sweet peas. Plenty of the latter, shown on the first prize table of Mr. Sim, had stems eighteen inches and over, carrying large flowers, all winter flowering varieties. They were very good indeed. Two other very fine exhibits were those of Mr. Roland's; one a group of acacias, well flowered, including some choice varieties; the other rambler roses, well grown and of a good color.

The plant trade of America, generally, seems to be in the hands of the various seedsmen, who import large quantities of roses and flowering shrubs from Holland. Plants used for bedding seem to be coleus, fuchsias, heliotropes, geraniums, etc. These are grown in large quantities by one or two growers, who supply the seedsmen direct as required. There is also a large quantity of dahlias in the best varieties grown for this trade. Cannas and gladioli are planted very largely, these are grown for the retail trade in California. No attempt seems to be made at villa gardening beyond leveling the turf and planting one or two rambler roses and clematis to grow over the verandas. This gives the suburbs of the large cities a very bare and impoverished appearance. There is much food for thought at the way things are done in the United States and the quickness with which they seem to clinch on to an idea and carry it through.

By J. Brown, Stamford, England.

At Philadelphia we were the guests of W. Atlee Burpee, who took us for a motor drive around the city and parks. An inspection of his seed establishment followed. We were surprised to find such a large, well-ordered establishment, from which enormous quantities of seeds are distributed to all parts. We also visited the nurseries of Henry Dreer, a well-managed place, with many acres of glass, where palms, ferns, roses and stove and greenhouse plants generally are represented in tens of thousands. Our visit to Vincents' nurseries at White Marsh we looked forward to with pleasure, and we were not disappointed. Enormous quantities of geraniums are sent out, also dahlias, cannas, etc., and celery and other vegetable plants. Messrs. Vincent must distribute millions of plants in a year. The sons are all good business men. Yes, altogether a smart business place. While at Washington, a fine city, with magnificent buildings, we visited the nurseries of the Gude brothers. American Beauty roses are a great feature, also carnations, liliums, hydrangeas, etc. I have very pleasant memories of all I saw in Washington.

Richmond, Ind., was our next call, to see the nurseries of E. G. Hill Co., a very good establishment. Roses and carnations are done well. A new carnation, Bonfire, bright scarlet, is a fine thing, also several new roses. Mr. Hill has found the lost scent of the rose and we shall soon have his new varieties.

From there we went to Chicago. This is a pushing place, all hustle. It seems to me this will yet be the greatest city in America. We visited the wholesale florists, also the great cut flower growing establishment of the Poehlmann brothers: 62,000 plants of American Beauty rose, also Richmond, My Maryland, Killarney, White Killarney, Melody, etc., altogether 275,000 roses under glass, most of them struck from cuttings; 250,000 carnations all planted out on raised beds.

The Boston show was well laid out. Groups of acacias and ericas, and a garden of roses from T. Roland, were features, also the Dutch garden of Messrs. Farquhar. Mr. Walsh put up a splendid group of rambler roses in which Mrs. M. H. Walsh, a new double white was very fine, also Lucille. A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, staged a new sport from Killarney, named Scarlet Killarney; I should say it has a good future. Mr. Scott exhibited Double Pink Killarney, with twelve or more petals than in the old Killarney; it looked a good rose. Carnations were a great feature—we expected this. It seems to me our American friends have much to learn as regards the staging of flowers. We took tram to see Mr. Sim's sweet peas, a marvelous sight, one house 400 feet long and forty-three feet wide, with nine rows of sweet peas, six feet high in the pink of health covered with blooms. Thousands of Princess of Wales violets are grown under glass; then comes tomatoes. Mr. Sim is a clever grower.

New York was the beginning of our trip, and in New York we finished. We were obliged to decline several invitations to visit nurseries, but on our last day there we were the guests of Arthur T. Boddington at lunch. Yes, a most wonderful time we had in America from first to last, and a thousand thanks to the American florists who welcomed us, not as strangers but as brothers. A great wave is coming over America to beautify the cities and towns with trees and shrubs. With the exception of Washington and a few towns this has been neglected. America does big things when she starts and American nurserymen are on the lookout for stock. I am surprised that English nurserymen do not push for American trade; any quantity of stock can be sold and American nurserymen are eager to buy. But it is all left to the Dutchmen, who do a roaring trade, as the field is left to them.

WHITE FLY.

There are many white flies in my greenhouse. Will you please tell me of something I can use that will destroy them? K. L. F.

Such safe fumigants as To-bak-ine will clear out white fly, but the most effective means is hydrocyanic acid gas, directions for the use of which have often been given in the pages of The Review. A cool evening is necessary for the operation. Do not trust the work to any assistant; do it yourself. This is a deadly gas and it is unwise to leave the fumigation to careless persons. Some plants are much more easily injured than others. Tomatoes, cucumbers and antirrhinums, for instance, are easily scorched. If the fumigation can be given with the temperature in the house below 60 degrees, the chances of injury are greatly reduced. To get the cubic contents of your house, multiply the length by the breadth and this by the average height. Give two fumigations, at intervals of three nights, and you will give the white fly its quietus. This is now a common form of fumigation, not only for white fly, but for other pests, but must be used with great care.

I have found the following a safe dose for use, giving an all-night exposure: One pint water and one pint sulphuric acid in a stone jar. Add to this two and one-half ounces cyanide of potassium. Place the jars fifty feet apart in the house. I prefer to use jars with sufficient mixture for at least 2,000 cubic feet of space. Having placed the jars in position, see that the ventilators are closed tightly. Drop the cyanide, wrapped in oil paper, in each jar. Walk along briskly. Make a speedy exit. Lock the door and allow no one to enter until morning. To breathe the gas is fatal. C. W.

Bluedorn's Azalea.

Latrobe, Pa.—Edward Leitzman says that the business of the florists in the Latrobe and Irwin district is at the lowest ebb in years, because of the miners' strike, which has now been in force thirteen months.

BLUEDORN'S AZALEA.

The illustration on this page is reproduced from a photograph received from Herman Bluedorn, Eau Claire, Wis., who writes: "The plant stands five feet four inches high and measures four feet six inches across the head. I have no name for the variety. Twelve years ago I received a number of azaleas and about two years later noted that a branch of one of the plants still on hand made an exceptionally rapid growth. I took enough interest in it to grow it on into a tree [standard(?)] form and when it bloomed it was a different color from the rest of the plant, being a bright, dark pink, with a still darker blotch in the throat of the flower. I have raised cuttings of many different kinds of azaleas, but never have seen one like this. All the cuttings from this plant go naturally to the tree form and when blooming they are all covered with flowers, like the one in the photograph, with hardly a leaf to be seen."

Cambridge, Mass.—Herman A. Jordan, proprietor of the Harvard Conservatories, at 22 Baldwin street, carries on a successful business as a gardener as well as a florist.

He says there has lately been a heavy demand for carnations. Owing to unfavorable weather, the field planting of carnations was not begun till a later date than usual.

Bluedorn's Azalea.

BLUEDORN'S AZALEA.

The illustration on this page is reproduced from a photograph received from Herman Bluedorn, Eau Claire, Wis., who writes: "The plant stands five feet four inches high and measures four feet six inches across the head. I have no name for the variety. Twelve years ago I received a number of azaleas and about two years later noted that a branch of one of the plants still on hand made an exceptionally rapid growth. I took enough interest in it to grow it on into a tree [standard(?)] form and when it bloomed it was a different color from the rest of the plant, being a bright, dark pink, with a still darker blotch in the throat of the flower. I have raised cuttings of many different kinds of azaleas, but never have seen one like this. All the cuttings from this plant go naturally to the tree form and when blooming they are all covered with flowers, like the one in the photograph, with hardly a leaf to be seen."

Latrobe, Pa.—Edward Leitzman says that the business of the florists in the Latrobe and Irwin district is at the lowest ebb in years, because of the miners' strike, which has now been in force thirteen months.

Cambridge, Mass.—Herman A. Jordan, proprietor of the Harvard Conservatories, at 22 Baldwin street, carries on a successful business as a gardener as well as a florist.

Missoula, Mont.—J. H. Smith, who until recently was foreman at the greenhouses of the Missoula Nursery Co., is now store manager for the same firm. He says there has lately been a heavy demand for carnations. Owing to unfavorable weather, the field planting of carnations was not begun till a later date than usual.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is little change to note in the condition of the wholesale cut flower market, and one may honestly duplicate last week's observations. The week end, as usual, was utilized to clear out the surplus and clean up the bulging ice boxes. Price was the last consideration. Midsummer conditions prevail. The expected decrease in shipments still is unrealized and the business in general is at its lowest May ebb in a generation.

An enormous plant Memorial day trade is assured, but the increase in the demand for cut flowers, apart from white roses, carnations and lilies, will not be noticeable. Roses show the effect of the warm spell, the temperature now hugging 80 degrees, with great humidity. Killarney is still demonstrating its value as an all-the-year rose, and its immense productiveness shows no decrease. Richmond is about over for the season. The supply of Bride and Maid is limited. Carnations also show the effect of the hot weather. Many are already thrown out, but the lessened supply has not boosted the price, and 2 cents is the top for the best of them. Orchids are abundant and lower, but they have not reached the humiliation of the street, where gardenias and roses seem to find their safest outlet. Lilies still sell for $4 per hundred and only the best of the sweet peas are salable. Gladioli, irises and peonies are here in large supply and lilac is so abundant that every groceryman sells it, and most of them have added pansies and geraniums to their vegetable counters.

The green goods men ship lilac from the country in vanloads. This week ought to see the end of it. Iris and peony stock is perfect, and the shipments of each unexpectedly large. Decoration day is near and its success is always assured.

The first part of June will see the summer market established and its three months of recuperation begun.

Various Notes.

S. S. Butterfield has left the hospital and is convalescing at his Brooklyn residence. Mrs. Butterfield came from Oklahoma to assist in his recovery.

Doubleday, Page & Co., of Garden City, have sent out invitations for a reception at their new establishment, May 23.

B. Rosens leaves next month for a European trip and will purchase novelties for the supply market while away.

J. Lichtenberger, another of the supply men, reports a successful season, and a growing demand for his gold letters specialty.

The Johnston Heating Co. reports a splendid season. The exhibit at the Boston show brought many orders, and the company has decided to make a fine display at Baltimore.

The veteran wholesaler, J. K. Allen, has been fighting the grip for some days.

F. H. Mitchell, of Waterville, Me., was a recent visitor.

Frederick V. Colville will lecture May 27 at the Museum building, Bronx park, on "The Influence of Soil Acidity on Plant Distribution."

The Pennock-Meehan Co. has leased the four-story building at 117 West Twenty-eighth street for a term of years, commencing May 1, 1912. The firm will remain in its present location in the meantime. The new store is next door to the Kervan Co.

Several of the wholesalers are doing duty as jurors, the engagement covering several weeks. Jos. A. Fenrich is on the grand jury, but finds time, as chairman of the outing committee of the Florists' Club, to boom the annual festival.

W. P. Ford is enjoying his leisure days at his farm in Pennsylvania.

Jonathan Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, was one of the grip victims. He was back at his desk May 20. The contemplated trip to Europe with Mrs. Nash will fit him for the strenuous autumn season.

Loechner & Haase have chosen 11 Warren street for their office, an excellent location. They will do an importing business in trees, bulbs and horticultural specialties. Mr. Loechner was long connected with the Yokohama Nursery Co.

Several local nurserymen will attend the nurserymen's convention, at St. Louis, June 14 to 16. The nurserymen in this vicinity have had one of the most profitable and long-extended seasons in their experience.

Andrew Wilson has been away, in the interests of the Wilson Plant Oil & Fertilizer Co., in Pittsburg and the west.

Wm. H. Kuebler was at Binghamton with sixty of his fellow Shriners last week.

Charles Millang has been adding to his force of salesmen, and has made some large plant sales lately from his branch on the second floor of the Coogan building.

Maurice L. Glass, of A. Moltz & Co., is away on his honeymoon in the Adirondacks. The church and dining-room at the wedding were beautifully decorated by a Brooklyn artist.

Bowling.

The match between Madison and the New York seedsmen, which was announced for May 20, was postponed because of the illness of the club's anchor, William Duckham. Madison will therefore take its medicine a little later. The match between Tuxedo and New York will take place at Thumm's alleys, Thirty-first street and Broadway, Saturday evening, May 27. Greater interest is shown in the New York club since the contest for membership in the team at Baltimore began. Chadwick made 227 and 230 May 19 and several of the club went well over 180. The members present also included Messrs. Fenrich, Nugent, Holt, W. Rickards, Kakuda, Scott, Shaw and Manda. There will be bowling every Friday evening until August.

J. Austin Shaw.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.

After a long dry spell, which was a cause of great anxiety to the farmers in this vicinity, we have had two refreshing rains, and vegetation is once more on the bright side. This is the one serious drawback to this section of the south; the extremes are too great, and it keeps one guessing and on the anxious seat all the time. When it is dry it is very, very dry, and when it rains it just pours, pounding the soil so that more water runs off than is absorbed. Planting, which was halted by reason of the drought, will now be resumed. Roses in the open ground are growing finely, and bulbous stock as well. Sweet peas are in their prime and immense quantities are used at good prices.

Carnations are now grown entirely in pots, the uncertain conditions of the weather preventing their planting in the field. Planting in the houses has commenced. Roses, which are rotated in the houses, are all planted except those carried over, which are in good crop.

Some varieties of herbaceous plants succeed admirably, but many of the finer sorts are a total failure, either being drowned out or burned up. They succeed better in some soils than others.

Business still is fine. Mothers' day was over double last year, with prices good, the out-of-town trade being especially heavy. Orders came in early in the week and continued until the morning of Saturday, when the home rush commenced. Carnations seemed to have the call, although toward the last everything in the flower line was bought up. Paterson says he could have sold more home-grown stock if he had it, having to turn down orders from the trade in surrounding territory.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

With the aid of a few showers and warm sunshine, blooming shrubs will all be over by Decoration day, so that will be one thing less that the florists will have to contend with. With the same favorable weather conditions, peonies will come in just right. Some of the early reds are having their day now. Orders for cut flowers of all kinds for Memorial day are coming in fast, and while stock along some lines will be scarce, there will be other stock to substitute. The exceedingly warm weather has greatly diminished the size of roses, but is producing big cuts, and though the demand at present is dull, they will not come amiss for the coming big day. Carnations, while more abundant, are also smaller, besides being a little sunburnt and faded — quite in keeping with the season of the year. There will be a good supply of gladioli, which readily find purchasers. Lilies, too, will add to the variety, while peonies will not be far behind.

The warm weather has also helped the bedding plant business along, as it has been favorable to planting out. Thus the florist is expecting that he will have all his plant orders out before the cut flower demand comes on.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Young have just received word of the approaching marriage of their youngest son, Frank Young, to Miss Pexton, Vicksburg, Miss., which will take place June 7, at the Trinity church in Vicksburg.

The home of George Bartholomew was the scene of a gay time on the evening of May 19, when a large crowd of friends came in to help him celebrate his birthday. Mr. Bartholomew, who intends to sail for England in July, was the recipient of many handsome gifts, which will be of great use to him on his trip. Fred Lembke, of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, who had been traveling through Kentucky, arrived in time to be among the guests.

The Dayton Floral Co. is exceptionally busy, filling vases, porch boxes and flower beds. They find the demand for geraniums unusually brisk this year, and these seem to be scarcest. An unusual order came to them by telegram from Minneapolis, Minn., in which they were instructed to fill a vase, regardless of expense, twenty-five miles out of the city. Mr. Matthews, the proprietor, secured a taxi and sent his manager and a choice line of bedding plants to fill the order.

"Outside planting is enough for us just now," is H. H. Ritter's report. He says that while only an occasional wedding order comes in, with now and then some funeral work, the outdoor work keeps them on the jump.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs, who has been in ill health for several weeks, is staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew, where she is enjoying the fresh country air.

It has been necessary for John Boehner to increase his working force, in order to take care of his vase and bedding orders.

Mrs. Jos. Schaeffer was taken to the Miami Valley hospital, May 20, where she has undergone a serious operation. It is reported that she has rallied from the operation and that there are hopes for her recovery. R. A. B.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There has been a generally good demand for cut flowers and plants during the last week; nothing specially brisk, but simply good, healthy business. In design work there has been an unusual demand, the number of funeral pieces made up during the last week or ten days being far in excess of the average season. The sale of carnations on Mothers' day told more eloquently than words how the sentiment is growing hereabouts.

The Memorial day rush will begin in a day or so and the local dealers and florists are ready for whatever demand is made. There is a plentiful stock of everything and prices are seasonably low.

Various Notes.

There was a good attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, held in the rooms of the association, 98 Westminster street, Monday evening, May 15. In the absence of the president, Robert Johnston, first Vice-President Eugene Appleton presided. Reports of committees were rendered and the subject of establishment of a market was discussed at considerable length. The question of holding a summer outing was also discussed, but action was deferred until the meeting in June. Mr. Appleton distributed cigars in honor of the advent of a daughter into his family circle.

Timothy O'Connor, one of the oldest florists in this city, and his wife celebrated their golden wedding at their home on Barnes street Monday evening, May 15, in the presence of a large number of relatives and a few intimate friends. They received many handsome presents, and the evening was made thoroughly enjoyable by an impromptu program of entertainment, which was followed by the serving of refreshments.

James Barclay concluded his services as manager of the greenhouses of Joseph Kopelman, at Oaklawn, May 15, and has taken a range near New London, Conn. He is succeeded by Michael Walsh, who was with William Hay and the Burke Rose Co. for several years.

Noonan Bros. are sending in some handsome baskets of pansies and verbenas, and pots of geraniums.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, again has the grounds of the Agawam Club and Hunt's mills to look after this year. He is just bedding out nearly 1,000 geranium plants at the latter place.

W. S. Pino is furnishing all the seed for the educational department of the school gardens at Roger Williams park, the Thayer street grammar school, State normal school and other institutions of the city.

Marsden J. Perry expects soon to build a greenhouse on Atlantic avenue, Newport, to cost $30,000.

The Park Greenhouses are supplying the local market with some fine baskets of myosotis.

Charles H. Hunt is looking for a piece of land to lease on which to erect a carnation house. He has been busy on funeral work, having six large pieces on one day, including two gates ajar. He has an order to furnish one of the Grand Army posts with 250 6-inch pots of geraniums for Memorial day.

Joshua Vose, of the Mayfield Dahlia Gardens, Pontiac, was in the city last week making deliveries of dahlia orders. His catalogue this season contains about 250 varieties.

Walter Eglinston, for several years orchid grower with C. Oscar Schultz, of Newport, left recently, having secured a position as foreman of a large commercial establishment at San Francisco.

Samuel Kinder, forester of Bristol, has begun the spraying of trees in that town.

The committee which has in charge the matter of establishing a market in this city held a meeting May 15, at which some progress was made. It is expected that tangible developments will result in a short time.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, is sending in good consignments of summer American Beauties.

Herbert West, formerly at William Hay's greenhouses at Oaklawn, has taken the management of Mr. Hay's downtown store on Clements street.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday not far from the store. He was driving a young horse that the firm recently purchased, when the animal became frightened and started to run, throwing Mr. Johnston out. Being a heavy man, he was badly shaken up and bruised, but fortunately not seriously hurt.

Joseph Kopelman is preparing to erect another greenhouse on his farm at Oaklawn.

W. S. Pino and family have opened their summer home at Wickford for the season.

William Hay has some fine roses coming in right after Memorial day. His houses are off crop just at present, but he has been cutting an average of more than 5,000 daily up to this week.

Frank L. Budlong, of Cranston, head of the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., and Mrs. Irene Delford Wilton, of New York city, were married in this city Wednesday evening, May 17, and left at once on an automobile trip to New York.

Johnston Bros. have been having some attractive windows recently, one of the latest being a miniature house with the surrounding grounds laid out prettily.

Thomas F. Sears, landscape gardener, left Monday, May 15, for Philadelphia to attend the first national conference on city planning.

Walter S. Nichols is confined to his house at Hampden Meadows by a severe attack of malaria.

Thomas Cottello, who is in the employ of the Burke Rose Co., has been promoted to the position of foreman to fill the place vacated by Michael Walsh. Mr. Cottello is succeeded by H. Wilkinson, formerly with the J. A. Budlong & Son Co.

E. J. Fancourt, representing the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, was in the city last week.

Thirty-one new members were added to the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at its meeting Wednesday evening, May 17. W. H. M.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While we were spared the hot wave last week which struck Chicago, Washington and other cities, the present week opens with the warmest weather of the season and business remains at a rather low ebb. Everyone is now anticipating Memorial day trade hopefully and, unless all signs fail, the supply of flowers will be no more than sufficient for the demand. Roses have been selling cheaply. Fakers now get a bountiful supply of them, and for several weeks a prominent Bromfield street store has been offering assorted boxes of twenty-five nice roses for 50 cents. Carnations are off crop with many growers and are nearing the end. It looks now as though Memorial day prices on these would average about double those secured at Easter.

Good sweet peas are not overplentiful. Spencers are selling much the best. A great many short-stemmed flowers are seen, the windup of the indoor crops, but those having late houses will find them profitable, as outdoor crops are poor, owing to the long drought. Callas and lilies are abundant and have sold poorly of late. Tulips and narcissi are nearing the end. Some good Darwin tulips are now arriving, but the present week will finish them. Some fine gladioli, such as Mrs. Francis King and Shakespeare, are arriving, with quantities of Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride among the small-flowered class. Spanish iris is abundant and popular for window arrangements. Cut lilac is having quite a sale this week.

Valley is overabundant. Cattleya Mossiæ is in heavy supply, but the demand is not brisk. There is a continued good sale for asparagus and adiantum.

Bedding plant trade is brisk. Geraniums are selling particularly well and show a tendency to advance in price.

The May Exhibition.

The show at Horticultural hall, May 20 and 21, was not a large one, but contained some interesting exhibits. The severe drought greatly reduced the displays of bulbous and other hardy flowers, which are this season of poorer quality than usual. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had an extensive named collection of Darwin and other late tulips, also fine cut spikes of Lilium Brownii leucanthemum, the new Buddleia magnifica, the hardy border carnation, Comtesse Knuth, with apricot-colored flowers, and narcissi. The Blue Hill Nurseries had a fine collection of named lilacs, thirty-three varieties. Mrs. Frederick Ayer, George Page gardener, also had a fine lot of lilacs and Iris Germanica Florentina. Mrs. A. W. Preston, J. L. Smith gardener, received a silver medal for a fine specimen of Hydrangea hortensis. Mrs. E. M. Gill had a fine assortment of seasonable hardy and greenhouse flowers.

In the class for six show pelargoniums there were four entries, William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, being first and third, and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, second.

For six zonal pelargoniums Daniel Whyte, gardener to Winthrop Ames, won with some fine specimens, Prince Olaf being specially good. E. A. Clark, Alex. McKay gardener, had the best six herbaceous calceolarias. The same exhibitor had a fine vase of American Beauty roses. Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, had a fine hybrid Lælio-cattleya, L. C. Hyeana x L. C. Canhamiana, a decided advance on each of the parents, also Calceolaria Stewarti, golden yellow in color. Mrs. Cornelia Warren, Henry Stewart gardener, had a fine Cattleya citrina and George Page a good specimen of Oncidium sphacelatum.

Mrs. J. L. Gardner had a nice group of cattleyas and other orchids. Dr. C. G. Weld's new Lælio-cattleya received a first-class certificate. Miss Cornelia Warren received cultural certificate for Cattleya citrina.

From the Arnold Arboretum came a large and interesting collection of cut flowering shrubs, including lilacs in great variety, cornus, forsythias, genistas, Azalea Kæmpferi, loniceras, exochordas, cercis, spiræas, cerasus, malus, etc. We hope to see further exhibits of this character during the season.

Various Notes.

The Boston Flower Exchange has formed a baseball team composed of the following: A. E. Walsh, M. F. Ruane, Fred Solari, James Murray, William McAlpine, Frank Edgar, James Fileson, Frank Sim and John Cure. Their first game will be played June 3 with W. H. Elliott's, Madbury, N. H., team.

Hospital tag day at Lynn, May 19, used up large quantities of carnations. The Halifax Garden Co. sold 15,000 alone, to go there. These tag and hospital days are good things for the flower market, coming, as they usually do, at a season when flowers are abundant and demand not at all good.

William Sim is picking some 15,000 sweet peas daily. The Spencer varieties with him promise to have a shorter blooming season than usual. He has set out 8,000 pots of early sweet corn and has also a large acreage planted directly outdoors. He has most of his houses now filled with tomatoes and will commence picking in a day or two. The tomatoes follow the single violets.

N. Ireland, at one time in charge of the bedding plant department of Dobbie & Co., Rothesay, Scotland, and lately with Forest Hills cemetery, left this week to be foreman for A. Cowee, Meadowvale Farm, Berlin, N. Y.

Gustave Olson, of Woburn, has one of the finest sweet peas now arriving in the market, something in the way of Christmas Pink, but much larger flowers. It is a seedling of Mr. Olson's own raising.

Sidney Hoffman was unfortunate enough to have his right arm broken while cranking up his machine near the Park Street Flower Market May 16.

Penn's, on Bromfield street, is pushing ahead the alterations on the store one door nearer Washington street, which will be occupied in addition to the present store. Constantly increasing business demands more space.

Perry Green, of Quincy, grows the small-flowered gladioli, such as Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride, well, the stems being splendid. They sell readily at the Boston Co-operative Market.

Charles Evans, of Watertown, has a fine new Peerless delivery car in which he is bringing in loads of well-grown hydrangeas and Baby Rambler roses just now.

Spraying operations against the elm beetle, gypsy moth and brown-tail moth started in earnest this week hereabouts and several hundreds of tons of arsenate of lead will be used in the effort to keep them under control.

The Boston Sunday Herald, May 21, had an appreciative two-column illustrated article on E. H. Wilson and his several trips to China during the last eleven years.

A. A. Pembroke is bringing in some splendid Mrs. Francis King and Shakespeare gladioli to the Boston Flower Exchange. His carnations are still of excellent quality.

The announcement made in this column in the issue of May 11 relative to Messrs. Griffin and Head is stated by Mr. Griffin to be incorrect. Mr. Griffin intends to run his business alone, as he is well qualified to do.

The devastation caused to growing crops by cutworms is serious in this section at present. Several growers find Paris green and sweetened shorts the best bait for the pests. Market growers have suffered severely from their attacks. W. N. Craig.

HYDRANGEAS DID NOT FLOWER.

Early in the winter I bought 100 Hydrangea Otaksa plants and treated them as usual, but every one of them came without buds, while plants from another firm came fine. Will these plants be of any use next year, or is there danger of their again coming blind? What caused this in the first place? How should they be handled until next winter? I believe it is too hot to plant them out in the field here, in northern Kansas. J. M. K.

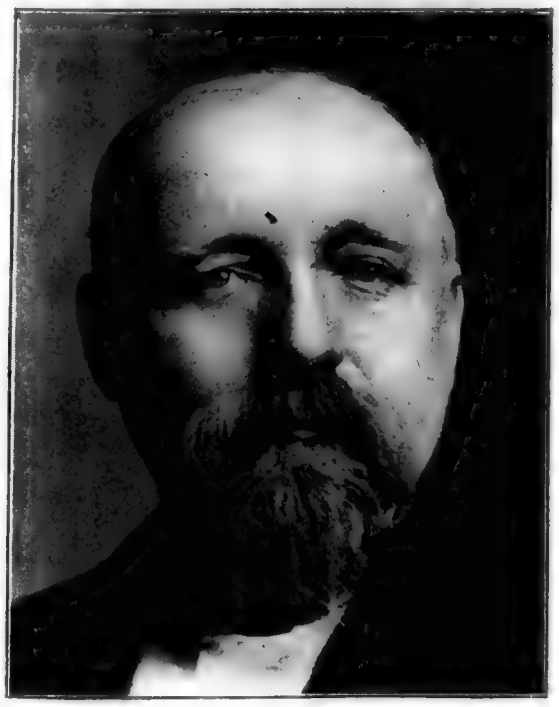
The plants will carry over all right if they can be planted out where they can receive the necessary moisture. In your climate field culture would not do for them, but if you can plant them out where they can get an occasional soaking with the hose, they will make large-sized plants to dig in the fall. Of course, they can be carried over in pots plunged in earth or cinders, but this entails a lot of labor in watering. If they can have a light shade, such as is provided by laths, all the better. If you can plant them in a slightly sunken frame, where they can be watered, syringed and shaded during the hottest hours of the day, they will do well. Expose to full sun after August. Pot up about the end of October, and keep cool and a little on the dry side until needed for forcing. It is difficult to tell the cause of the plants failing to flower without knowing something of their condition when received and their later treatment. C. W.

OBITUARY.

Fred R. Mathison.

Fred R. Mathison, one of the pioneer florists of New England and widely known in the trade, died Sunday, May 21, at his home at Waltham, Mass., after a short illness. Mr. Mathison was of British birth, but he came to this country many years ago and became one of the leading rose growers around Boston. For a long term of years his establishment was one of the best known places in Massachusetts. A few years ago he retired from business and rented his establishment for some time, but later started in on his own account once more and quickly took his place again as one of the most successful men of the craft in his vicinity. He was a first-class grower, liked by everyone. Mr. Mathison was a member of long standing in the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club and in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He was an active worker for each of these organizations, though he never had cared to hold office in either; he was at one time a member of the executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, and always one of the willing workers. He was a member of the American Rose Society and quite active at the recent National Flower Show. He joined the S. A. F. in 1887 and was a life member.

The funeral was held at Waltham, May 23, and was attended by a large delegation of members of the trade. The wealth of floral tributes included one from the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club and another from the Flower Market. Mr. Mathison had been twice married. The second wife survives.



Lloyd G. Blick.

Lloyd G. Blick died May 18 at his home at Norfolk, Va., after a lingering illness. Mr. Blick was one of the leading florists of his section of the country and was widely known in the trade. He had been a member of the Society of American Florists for the last eleven years and was a regular attendant at its conventions when held in eastern territory. The funeral took place May 21 and was largely attended, there being floral tokens of esteem.

Eggert Nagel.

Eggert Nagel, proprietor of the Nagel greenhouses, in Minneapolis, Minn., and well known in the trade, was struck by a street car at the corner of Emerson avenue and Lake street, in that city, on the evening of May 16, and almost instantly killed. Witnesses of the accident say that at the same moment an automobile came down Lake street at a terrific speed and turned to the left side to pass the car, giving Mr. Nagel no chance for escape except the possibility of getting across the street ahead of the street car. This he was unable to do and was struck by the car and hurled almost fifty feet.

He was 69 years of age, a native of Hamburg, Germany, and came directly to Minneapolis from that country forty-six years ago. For sixteen years he was manager of the Mendenhall greenhouses, the first of the kind in Minneapolis. Later he entered into business for himself and some time afterward took his son into partnership. He is survived by the son, Theodore W. Nagel, a daughter, Mrs. D. G. Miner, and a brother living in Davenport, Ia.

E. Nagel.

Mr. Nagel was a member of Masonic lodge 224 and prominent in the work of the order. He was also a member of the West Side Commercial Club and was on his way to attend a meeting of that organization when the fatal accident occurred. The club passed the following resolution as soon as word of the accident was received:

"Whereas, The board of directors of the West Side Commercial Club have just learned of the sudden death by a regrettable accident of our worthy member, E. Nagel, who was on his way to attend a meeting of the Civic Celebration decoration committee of the West Side Commercial Club; be it

"Resolved, That we express our deep sympathy and condolence to the family in their bereavement. The West Side Commercial Club has lost a valuable and energetic member, who will long be remembered for his sterling qualities. A. E. Woollan, George H. Filbert, John Towell, committee."

Arthur W. Lemke.

Arthur W. Lemke, of Milwaukee, Wis., committed suicide May 15 at the home of his parents, 1000 Twenty-fifth avenue, by drinking carbolic acid. He was 23 years old. Business troubles are said to have caused the act.

John Wolf.

John Wolf, an expert gardener in the employ of the Elm City Nursery Co., at New Haven, Conn., committed suicide in Washington park, Bridgeport, May 11, by drinking carbolic acid. He was 48 years old and had been in the service of the nursery firm for eleven years. He is survived by his wife, one son, Harry, and two daughters, Genett and Frederica Wolf, all of whom reside at the family home, 24 Auburn street, New Haven.

Utica, N. Y.—It is said that Wm. A. Treen, at 8 Leeds street, has in one of his greenhouses a lemon tree on which hangs a lemon that weighs twenty-eight ounces. The tree is less than three feet tall.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Memorial Day, a legal holiday, this year falls on Tuesday, the busiest day of the week in The Review office, and the day on which advertising forms close.

Advertisers and correspondents are urged to mail matter for next week

ONE DAY EARLIER THAN USUAL

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Again last week the classified plant advertisements in The Review broke all previous records—almost thirty-six columns of them. This business comes to The Review practically without solicitation, simply because many hundreds of florists who have tried it have found it pays, usually out of all proportion to the small cost.

The hot weather, which was general last week over the northern part of the United States, from the Rockies to the Atlantic, did the cut flower industry a vast amount of damage. But in the wholesale cut flower business there frequently are compensations—the destruction of stock gives additional value to that which is left.

A good many shrewd observers are accustomed to judge newspapers by the amount of Help and Situation Wanted and For Sale advertising carried. The paper that carries the bulk of this class of business invariably is the best in its field. Incidentally, take a look at this department in The Review. It is growing fully as fast as any other section of the paper.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

The next meeting of the American Peony Society will be held at Horticultural hall, Broad street, Philadelphia, Wednesday and Thursday, June 14 and 15, 1911. A. H. Fewkes, Sec'y.

Unofficial advices from Philadelphia are to the effect that the hot weather has necessitated a change of date to Thursday and Friday, June 8 and 9.

NAME OF SHRUB.

A tree and shrub agent has been selling what he calls "gustifolia" in my neighborhood. I do not find it catalogued by any of the firms with which I deal. What is it and where can it be purchased? W. C.

Most of the tree and shrub salesmen who canvass from house to house know little about the names of plants. They usually carry a goodly number of cheap colored chromos to advertise their goods by, but my experience has been that not one in twenty makes any pretense to horticultural training, and when they try to sell "gustifolias" we must be charitable and assume that they mean angustifolia, which is a secondary name to quite a number of plants. I do not know of any gustifolia and doubt whether it exists outside the imagination of your salesman. I do not like to be hard on these salesmen, as we know they sell large quantities of goods which would otherwise be destroyed, and induce many a householder to buy goods which in not a few cases improve their home surroundings. I do wish, however, that the average salesman were more of a horticulturist, both for the purchaser's sake and for the credit of the profession. C. W.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

—When things are not going well, it is quite the custom to characterize conditions as "the worst ever." There is, however, general agreement that the week of May 14 to 20 was at least as bad as this market ever has experienced. The temperature for several days ran from 90 to 92 degrees, something entirely unprecedented for the middle of May. The result was to bring in an enormous quantity of flowers, to deprive the greater part of the receipts of the quality necessary to salability, while at the same time the legitimate demand was reduced. The result was that it became impossible to sell the receipts at any price; the waste was enormous, and it included almost every variety of flower. The situation was particularly unpleasant because a great deal of sorting was necessary to get out the stock that would stand shipping, and prices on the selected flowers were out of proportion to what could be obtained for the remainder. The farther apart the prices are, for the best grade and the lowest grade, the more difficulties there are for both wholesaler and retailer.

While all flowers suffered in quality, nothing felt the extreme heat as did the sweet peas. These had been fine and readily salable, but the heat cooked them to the point where the greater part of the receipts in some houses went into the waste, simply too poor to be usable at any price. The worst feature is that the growers say the vines have been irreparably injured. Beauties also had been of extra good quality, but quickly took on the midsummer hue and size. Other roses stood the heat better, but thrips reveled in it and many of the flowers show the marks. Of course, the greater part of the receipts were soft and open. Carnations became soft and sleepy, and there were more complaints from customers than have been received in months. The heat wave about finished off the iris and it also brought the last of the outdoor bulb stock and lilac, except perhaps for some small lots yet to come from the north. Cattleyas, valley, lilies and, indeed, everything else shared in the general condition.

This week, with several days of rain and cooler temperature, finds the market on the upgrade. Beauties have become good property once more, the supply having been reduced to the point where buyers are not critical of quality. Killarney and Richmond, if good, are again selling fairly well, though the greater part of the flowers still are poor. Strictly fancy carnations are again looking up, though Boston Market and its class are tabooed. Antirrhinum of fine quality fails to sell. Lilies are doing a little better. There is no special demand for peonies, and all which are of the necessary quality are going into storage for a few days' stay.

Memorial Day.

Advance orders assure an enormous volume of business for Memorial day. The bulk of the business booked is on peonies and carnations. If there is any shortage it will be on the latter flower, and of low grade carnations there promises to be a plenty. May 28 will be the big shipping day. This is Sunday. Most of the wholesale houses will be open all day and arrangements have been made with the express companies for wagon service to 6 p. m. Out-of-town customers must remember that there is no mail delivery in Chicago on Sunday, unless special delivery stamps are used. Orders to arrive in Chicago Sunday for shipment the same day must come by special delivery mail, by long distance phone, or by telegraph.

The Peony Situation.

The peony accounts for many thousands of dollars in this market the week of May 30. For that reason the situation is one of special interest. The early peonies were of exceptionally good quality, but later receipts showed the effect of dry, warm weather, and the many thousands of dozens that came in during the heat wave last week made a big loss. A large part of the stock was in such condition that the heads fell off almost immediately. The stock, if sold immediately, brought many complaints from retailers, and if kept a few hours by the wholesalers became unsalable. Wagon loads were thrown away. This has materially reduced the expected supply. The general view is that strictly first-class peonies will command good prices for Memorial day, while at the same time the stock not strictly first-class will have little value. No wholesaler will ship a peony unless he has complete confidence in it; it brings nothing but trouble. The loss of a good part of the crop from the central part of the state will be made up for in a measure by the arrival of the early varieties close at home. As early as May 20 peonies were being cut within twenty miles of Chicago, an earlier date than anyone can recall.

Various Notes.

Mrs. John Zech has been in the hospital since May 19, when an operation was performed on one of her feet. At Zech & Mann's it is said she is progressing favorably.

Bruce McGregor, who came from just where his name would lead one to suppose, has been engaged to lay out a Hampton Court garden at the Armour place at Lake Forest. He came to America from the Duke of Argyle and is a brother of William McGregor, who laid out the English garden at the St. Louis world's fair.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., has returned from a trip of nearly four weeks south and west. He was in a territory where the season is much farther advanced than it is here, but says he found everyone satisfied with trade conditions.

The Chicago Florists' Club will go to Milwaukee on the afternoon of June 1 by electric car, leaving Evanston at about 2:30. If forty respond to the notices now being prepared by Secretary A. T. Pyfer, of the Chicago Carnation Co., a special car will be engaged.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., says he feels sure last week's heat brought in as much stock as would be cut in three weeks of ordinary weather.

Martin Peterson says he grew $600 worth of bedding stock in frames back of his retail store at 2550 West Division street.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is steadily adding to the facilities at its new branch at 56 East Randolph street. A new phone, Randolph 1988, gives close touch with the main store.

Oscar Metz, at 5525 Jefferson avenue, is having a busy season in spring planting.

L. Baumann is making his annual European trip in search of supplies for florists. He is not expected to return before August 1.

Electric light is to be one of the early improvements at the Edgebrook greenhouses of the Geo. Wittbold Co. The feed wires, however, must be brought through from Niles, and it may be some time before the work is completed.

Kyle & Foerster say that Klehm's Nurseries, Arlington Heights, cut Old Red peonies May 23, the earliest date within their recollection.

C. W. McKellar and Mrs. McKellar returned May 24 from their stay at Hot Springs, Ark.

D. J. Murphy is again in town. He recently has been with the Stuppy Floral Co. at St. Joseph.

Wietor Bros. report a big demand for cuttings of Golden Eagle chrysanthemum. They were cleaned out of stock within one week of issuing their list in The Review.

O. W. Frese, who has charge of the shipping for Poehlmann Bros. Co., now makes his home at Western Springs.

Faber Bros., at Kankakee, sent the E. F. Winterson Co. white peonies May 20. Last year they were not in until long after Decoration day.

August Koeble will sell his place on North Fortieth avenue, to give his time to his mother's retail store.

Tim Matchen, sales manager for Peter Reinberg, says that Decoration day orders are much heavier for carnations than for roses.

George Fisher, who is local buyer for H. A. Fisher Co., Kalamazoo and Battle Creek, will be married at Kalamazoo June 6. The bride is Miss Dora Shapiro.

C. M. Dickinson says that E. H. Hunt has had, in the last week, an unprecedented demand for To-bak-ine. Rush orders have come from all directions, for thrips have been active.

Harry Manheim, of Hoerber Bros., believes the next few days will be the busiest his house ever has seen.

Bassett & Washburn report a first-class shipping demand for fancy carnations.

Phil Schupp says that the injury to sweet peas has already stimulated the demand for valley.

Vaughan & Sperry last week marketed a big crop of peonies cut near Quincy. They were ten days to two weeks earlier than expected and opened so fast the grower could not cut many of them tight enough to store for Memorial day.

The W. E. Lynch Co. was incorporated May 20, at Springfield. The capital stock is $20,000. The incorporators are Andrew J. Ryan, Edward J. Prebis and Irvin I. Livingston, with Mr. Lynch. The company's charter gives it the right to do everything connected in any way with the flower business.

Lucien Le Clere, formerly in business with his father at Lexington, Ky., is now employed in the greenhouses of Poehlmann Bros. Co.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale markets were again crowded every day during the last week with stock of poor quality, especially roses, which are coming in soft and wide open. Prices are greatly reduced on all grades. Judging by the amount of stock that is left over each morning and by reports from the leading retailers, trade passed through a mighty dull week. The month of June—that is, up to the closing of the schools—should be a busy one for the local florists. A number of large June weddings have been booked by the uptown florists.

The hot weather of last week had its effect on cut stock and the business in general. A glance over the markets on Monday, May 22, showed them to be loaded down with carnations, sweet peas, peonies, gladioli and roses, and the trade buying sparingly. Carnations of best quality bring only $10 per thousand and sweet peas are as low as $1.50 per thousand for choice stock. Roses are not over $4 for the best. Peonies are overplentiful, and some were dumped for want of demand. There is also a lot of outdoor stuff that is crowding the market at present.

Various Notes.

Norman J. Coleman celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday May 16, at his home, 5499 Delmar boulevard. Mr. Coleman is well known throughout the country as editor of Coleman's Rural World. He was at one time lieutenant-governor of Missouri and was secretary of agriculture under President Cleveland. He was once president of the American Association of Nurserymen, who meet here next month, when he expects to meet many of his old friends. He was at one time in business here with the late Carew Sanders, the firm being known as Coleman & Sanders. He is still hale and hearty and attends to his duties daily as editor of his paper.

According to some of our leading seedsmen, a large number from here will attend the American Seed Trade Association's meeting, which will take place at Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22. Most of them say that they have had an exceptionally good business this year, so a week or so of recreation in the east will do them a world of good.

W. C. Smith celebrated his birthday last week; so did Frank Windler, of the Smith Wholesale Floral Co., Mr. Smith being 30 years old and Mr. Windler just 21. The celebration took place at the home of Frank Windler, May 17.

Emil Schray, of the firm of William Schray & Sons, says they have never been so busy as this year in the sale of plants. They have a fine house of gloxinias in full bloom, which are selling well to the local store men.

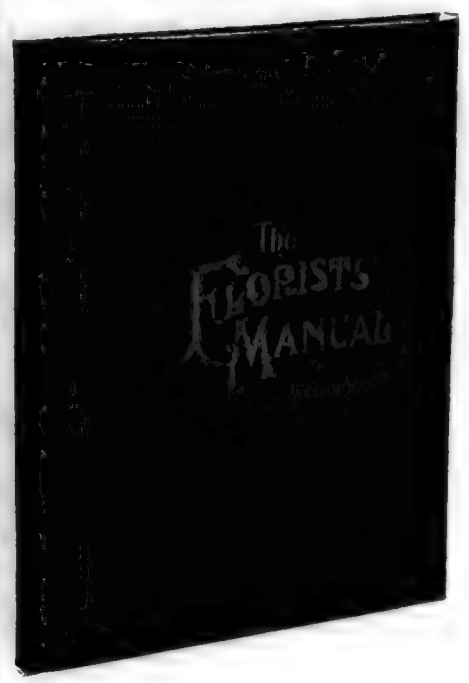
President W. P. Stark, of the American Association of Nurserymen, is expected down from Louisiana the first week in June, to see that everything is in readiness for the opening of the thirty-sixth annual meeting.

George Waldbart, Mrs. M. M. Ayers and the Metropolitan Floral Co., at Grand avenue and Olive street, had exceptionally handsome window displays all last week and had a good run of business.

President Sanders, of the St. Louis Retail Florists' Association, states that an important meeting will be held on Monday, June 5. There is a big lot of business to transact and he wants a large attendance.

C. Young & Sons Co. had an exceptionally busy week with plants and another week will about clean them out. The Sanders Nurseries, Charles Beyer and F. J. Fillmore also say they had a big plant season.

Fred H. Weber, state vice-president of the S. A. F., was out among the local trade to increase Missouri's membership in the S. A. F., which he says has fallen off greatly. He says he was quite successful and will attend the next club meeting ready for more work in this direction.



The mayor's appointment of Dwight Davis as park commissioner was confirmed by the city council. He will take his office at once and will shortly announce who his superintendent will be.

W. E. Robinson has the Chain of Rocks park in fine shape this year. Reservoir park, under Phil Giebel, is also showing new beds and splendid management. These parks come under the supervision of the water commissioner.

The Frank H. Wild Floral Co., of Sarcoxie, Mo., is sending to this market a fine lot of cut peonies. The demand for these has not been as good this season as usual and prices have been lower.

The committee which has the club's twenty-fifth anniversary in hand held a meeting at Smith's and decided that the banquet will be held on the night of June 28, at Pechmann's hotel, 4295 Olive street. Invitations will be sent out June 1 by the secretary of the club.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The real market today is found in the hundreds of greenhouses around the city, where plants are grown for beautifying the homes of the people. These greenhouses see a tremendous business daily, in all kinds of flowering and foliage plants that thrive outdoors in sun or shade. To correctly report the plant business is particularly difficult, owing to the numerous marts. Reports from a number of these plant growers indicate an extremely active demand that is at least equal and in many cases far ahead of previous seasons. Prices vary less than one would suppose from the widely scattered and numerous centers of activity. In a general way these prices are well maintained, though the margin is small, requiring quick sales and small loss to secure profit.

The feature of the cut flower market is the arrival of Pæonia festiva maxima. This means that the finest white peony has come; better still, that there will be peonies for Memorial day. While the weather has been unseasonably hot, it is improbable that the bulk of the peonies will be in by May 30. A number of large growers in and about Philadelphia say that their peonies will not be in time. Outside of the arrival of peonies and of the first and welcome outdoor sweet peas, the market is featureless. The intensely hot weather has brought entirely too many flowers into the city and, what is far worse, the heat has spoiled many of them. Carnations and sweet peas will not keep, excepting those of fine quality. Roses are small and fly open easily, and so on all through the list. This means that the flowers of quality that reach the market in the proper condition of development have an immense advantage; with them the business is done. They bring excellent prices for the season of the year, and are in demand. The rest of the flowers are jobbed off for anything they will bring.

Carnations of quality are about the best flowers on the list; there was an excellent demand for them several days during the week ending May 24, and they have realized better prices than could be expected, season and weather conditions considered.

Outdoor sweet peas, and a late crop of summer varieties grown indoors, have such an advantage over the winter-blooming varieties that the latter are almost unnoticed. The return of hot weather has brought the Beauty into popular favor again as the best rose; Beauties are selling well at fair prices, though of course they must have quality to sell. The other roses sell cheaply and there are entirely too many good pink for the demand, while Richmond is not especially wanted. The shorter grades of white roses and of Kaiserin average better prices than short colored roses. Cattleyas are in strong supply, with no special demand. Easter lilies have shortened and are selling rather better. Callas are about done. Hardy ferns are the most active greens on the list. Outdoor valley is over. Southern peonies are nearly done.

ments, originated and photographed by Charles Henry Fox. These beautiful floral combinations have attracted so much attention when reproduced in The Review that today Mr. Fox has a larger following of friends and admirers than any other florist on the eastern seaboard. When the corner property was sold to the Ritz-Carlton hotel, Mr. Fox sold the old Sign of the Rose and just before Easter, if you will please remember, removed seven doors south on Broad street. It was not generally known that this new location, so like the first Sign of the Rose in many of its chief attractions, was only temporary. This week, however, Mr. Fox has made public his plans.

The home of the new Sign of the Rose will be in an old Philadelphia mansion at 211 South Broad street. Its advantages are many. First, it joins the new Ritz-Carlton hotel. The front will be finished in the same style as the Ritz-Carlton and there will be a communicating door. Next, the position at Broad and Walnut streets is ideal, from the standpoint of the F. F. P. Then the space, light and convenience of approach for supplies are unusually good.

The new Sign of the Rose will have a floor space of 25x130 feet. The present flight of steps leading up to 211 South Broad street will be removed and the floor lowered to the street level. A show-window fourteen feet in width will afford a splendid opportunity for display. Behind the flower shop proper will be a designing room, with light from a glass roof above. Back of this will be another designing room, separated from the first, where heavier work can be done. In the rear of these designing rooms will be the buying room, with splendid

The style of the new Sign of the Rose is to resemble closely the old English style first introduced by Mr. Fox, with its handsome mantels, rich carving, antiques of great interest, and with its lack of commercialism. This last feature Mr. Fox has found it necessary to modify somewhat. Work on the new Sign of the Rose will commence about July 1 and, it is expected, will be finished early in the fall.

The Market.

Cut flowers of all kinds are plentiful, but carnations are showing the effect of the hot weather. Peonies are arriving in quantity, but are soft and will not hold. Roses are in excess of the demand. The trade in the flower market has not been up to the mark for the last few days.

Sunday in May as Mothers' day, and, in order to show interest in the day and its purpose, the wearing of a white carnation or the national colors was recommended. If any florist laid in a large stock of white carnations with the expectation of disposing of them, he was surely disappointed, because hardly any of these or other white flowers or the national colors could be seen worn by either sex, young or old. It seems that the wearing of flowers for such a day did not take the fancy of the population and it is hard to tell whether it ever will.

As in other years, the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic will decorate the graves of their fallen comrades on Memorial day, but the demand for wreaths and cut flowers is by no means as large as in northern cities.

At present we have the hot, dry weather which many florists were wishing for a few weeks ago, and most of the greenhouse plants, especially foliage plants, are placed under cooling lattice frames. It seems that the growing of small sized pot roses for wholesale and retail is taking a strong hold among several of our local florists, and there is no doubt that by fall the northern shippers of these plants will find here a strong competition, with probably a lowering of prices. Several local growers are catering to the shipping trade. There is apparently a great field here for growing plants for that purpose, especially the different varieties of nephrolepis, adiantums, Cocos plumosa and Weddelliana, phœnix, arecas, crotons, pandanus, poinsettias, etc. All these are plants which grow fast here and require no special attention from spring until winter, when the stock is ready for shipment. Our moist, subtropical climate helps the grower a great deal, and robust, clean-grown stock will always find a buyer, no matter where or by whom it is grown.

The extreme dullness of the last two weeks has just now been broken by the funeral of Thomas O'Connor, chief of the New Orleans fire department, which took place May 21. All work had to be done on the rush order, several hundred pieces in all, and most of them were on an elaborate scale. The different flower stores were taxed to the utmost with work and several used up every flower on hand.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting at Kolb's German Tavern, May 18. President Richard Eichling was in the chair and Secretary C. R. Panter was at his desk, but the attendance was exceptionally small and only routine work was disposed of. The last regular meeting of the club year will take place June 15 and a large attendance is expected.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

THE fifth annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association will be held at the Chamberlain hotel, at Des Moines, Tuesday, June 6.

ARTHUR B. CLARK, president of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., of Milford, Conn., was elected president of the Milford Trust Co., May 5.

STOCKHOLDERS of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Hollister, Cal., held their annual meeting May 13. L. W. Wheeler was elected president.

RECENT favorable weather has improved the late crops in the vicinity of Hollister, Cal. Radish, however, is backward. Onion and lettuce are looking well.

WEATHER conditions in Holland since the April freeze have been favorable to the recovery of bulb and seed crops that suffered injury in that unprecedented occurrence.

S. F. LEONARD, of Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, and E. L. Page, of the Page Seed Co., Greene, N. Y., are in California. When last heard from they were at Hollister.

HENRY NUNGESSER & Co., New York, have been sustained in a protest at the assessment of duty on lupine seeds. The Board of General Appraisers held that yellow lupine seeds classified as seeds not specially provided for should be admitted free of duty as grass seeds, under paragraph 668.

THE eccentricities of the season are upsetting the summer crop inspection plans of W. Atlee Burpee. Because of the lateness of the sweet peas in California he abandoned his June trip to the coast and planned to sail June 28 for a look at the European crops, leaving as soon as possible after the sweet pea show in Philadelphia and reaching London before the show there. Although passage has been engaged for himself and his son, David, his plans may be again disarranged should it be necessary to postpone the sweet pea show.

THE SEED SEASON SOUTH.

The Best Yet.

The seed business in the south and southwest is on the boom—wholesale, mail order and counter trade all make new high records each season. This year the seedsmen located in that section were prepared for a good growth, and they were not disappointed. The season opened late and the early months fell behind, as they did for the majority of seedsmen everywhere. But at the height of the season the rush was the heaviest ever known and the demand has continued later than usual. Some individual experiences follow.

Amzi Godden Co., Birmingham, Ala.

We are pleased to say that our mail order business this season has been very satisfactory, that it has been at least thirty-five per cent to forty per cent more than for the past season. Our mail orders are still coming in nicely and the inquiries are heavy for this season of the year. One of the special features is the fact that farmers are showing that they intend to diversify their planting and are ordering more grass and forage crop seeds. Our trucking business has increased very much. At present our retail store trade is very fine, as we have a large plant business.

D. P. Durban.

H. G. Hastings & Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Our season just closing has been very satisfactory indeed. It seemed to open a little slowly at first, but at the height of the season the volume of business was the largest that we have ever handled, and during the latter half of the season trade has been far ahead of anything we have ever had during a similar period in past years. The rapidly growing demand in our section for hay and forage crops is creating a much longer season than has been the case heretofore, and while much of the business is in items with a low margin of profit, nevertheless it is very satisfactory and we consider it an excellent tendency, both from an agricultural point of view and from our own. We have no complaint whatever to make as to our own business for the spring season of 1911. H. W. Brown.

SEVEN TOP TURNIP

¶ Originally introduced by us from South Carolina in 1850 and annually grown for over sixty years under the zero winter temperature of Bloomsdale Farms, the Landreths' strain of Seven Top has obtained, by this northern culture, a hardiness not approached by southern-grown seed. All inferences would point that way, while thousands of experiments have conclusively proven it beyond a shadow of doubt; consequently, one pound of Landreths' Seven Top will in the dead of winter produce more greens than can be cut from three times the more delicate southern-grown Seven Top.

¶ Write us how much you want and we will name you a price.

season we have ever had. Our season commenced very late, due to the continued drought in this section of the country for the last two years. During the latter part of the summer and winter of 1910 it seemed there was no prospect of any more rain. People had absolutely quit making any preparations for planting, and, in fact, had abandoned the idea of using any more seed until rains became more general. Our rains commenced in the early part of February, and from that time trade has been all that could be expected. In fact, we have never had such a rush from all sections of the country, and it still continues. Crops are good. The stands of cotton and corn are complete, and we are having ideal weather at the present time. R. D.

Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas.

We have found our mail order business, which started with the first of January, to be the best we have had since we have been in business. During February and March we were simply snowed under with orders and found it very difficult to keep up. We have also had an exceptionally good season in wholesale lines, especially with our field seed department. We have sold more cotton seed this season than ever before.

We also have a large wholesale packet trade and this line has also been unusually good, as we have had a great many refill orders. We put out what is considered one of the handsomest lines of lithographed packets on the market and in addition to this we loan our customers display cases for them, which of course helps a great deal. This display cabinet is the nicest and most convenient thing of the kind that we know of being sent out in this country.

Just at this time we are having a new warehouse constructed for our wholesale and mail order business. This house will be 100 x 150 feet, consisting of three stories and basement; on one side will have trackage for four or five cars and on the other a wagon loading dock 150 feet long. In this building we will have elevators and recleaning machinery for all kinds of seeds, also a special elevator and cleaning outfit for our poultry food business, as we have quite a large trade in this line, averaging, during the spring season from half to three-fourths of a car a day. We also will have a spiral conveyor to use in sending boxes and packages down from the top floors to the lower one without having to use the elevator. We figure that this will be a considerable saving.

We have had the largest plant trade this season that we have ever experienced and have practically sold out all the stock we had of this kind and have been compelled to order large quantities from different sources to supply our trade. At present we are selling a great many potato slips, shipping from 20,000 to 25,000 every day.

We are pleased to state that the prospects for crops in Texas are very promising indeed and everything looks favorable. R. Nicholson.

A FAIR YEAR.

The Best Ever for Some.

With most of the mail order seedsmen the early months of the season of 1911 proved more or less of a disappointment, but the latter part of April and the first part of May gave a much better volume of orders than usually come so late; the season did not run off nearly so fast as it frequently does after the big day has passed. It was a season largely affected by weather conditions; the weather remained cool later than usual, midsummer following the first few spring days. Here are reports from some of the catalogue houses:

H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.

Business so far this season has been fair, but not up to that of 1910.

Gregory & Son, Marblehead, Mass.

This has not been a bang-up year for the seed trade. The trade during February, March and April was about 20 per cent less than last year; the first part of May was somewhat better than last year, although it did not make up for the loss the early part of the season.

Johnson Seed Co., Philadelphia.

The mail order business has not been up to last year, although it is holding on better than it did then, and as our season here is five or six weeks late, we may be able to bring it up to the previous year. We, of course, are very much rushed with counter and nearby wholesale trade at present.

Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis.

The first half of our mail order season was not quite as heavy as usual, but toward the end trade is very much better, and, on the whole, compares favorably with other seasons.

Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia.

The seed trade with me was unusually good during January, February and up to the middle of March. The unseasonably cold weather at that time gave it a setback, which lasted until the middle of April, and business during that period was very much retarded from what it should have been. Since then we are catching up, but I do not believe the season will show any advance in volume over last year.

W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia.

January and February were both a little ahead of a year ago, but March, of course, was behind March of last year, when we had such abnormally warm weather. April showed considerable gain and now in May the increase in mail orders over a year ago is something phenomenal. Altogether I should say that the volume of business will be practically the same as a year ago. This certainly leaves nothing for any reasonable man to complain of, as last year's business was probably the largest in the seed trade up to date.

Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines.

During January, February and April we received about ten per cent more orders each month than during the corresponding months last year, but they did not amount to quite so much money, as the orders averaged smaller. During March there was a decrease of about ten per cent, both in number of orders and in amount received. This difference in the trade is largely owing to the fact that last season there was an unusually heavy demand for seed corn, there being a great shortage throughout this section. This year the demand is only normal. The local trade, however, has this year far exceeded last season, every month showing a good, healthy growth. The thing particularly noticeable this year in the mail orders is the large increase in the demand for flowering and bedding plants, both in the greenhouse plant line and in herbaceous stock and small roses. The demand for two-year-old dormant roses and shrubbery is somewhat less than last season.

Springfield Seed Co., Springfield, Mo.

We do little mail order retail business; in fact, do not undertake to retail outside of the city of Springfield. Our counter trade business has been satisfactory and our wholesale shipping trade much better than in former seasons.

BULB BUSINESS BOOMING.

J. Keur, of C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, is preparing to sail from New York on the Lusitania, May 31. This has been his seventeenth annual voyage to America and, he says, the most successful he has yet had in the number and size of orders. Mr. Keur avers that the market for Holland bulbs and plants is increasing faster in America than in any other country of the world. He has found that the specific duty of $1 per thousand on tulips is a considerable help to the bulb salesmen; it nets the government about as much revenue as the old twenty-five per cent ad valorem rate would do at current prices for mixtures and leading bedding and florists' sorts, but it relieves the transaction with the custom house of much of its difficulty. As Mr. Keur puts it, "Anyone can count, though not everyone can figure."

It is not generally known, but Mr. Keur is largely responsible for the recent court decision fixing the rate of duty on hyacinths at 50 cents per thousand. Possibly others discovered the loophole afforded by the grammatical construction of the present tariff act, but Mr. Keur was the first to take action. It was because of his initiative that one of his customers in Boston filed a protest there and Mr. Keur personally gave evidence at Boston, before the Board of General Appraisers at New York and later before the Court of Customs Appeals at Washington. He showed that his firm had, in fact, exported hyacinth clumps to this country on the order of the United States government. At the time of the hearing before the Board of General Appraisers in New York, Mr. Keur stood almost

You must have the best of Lily Bulbs to produce good flowers. You can not afford to economize in the price of Lily Bulbs as you could in the price of garden hose, because cheaper garden hose would merely be less valuable; whereas an ugly plant or flower has no value at all. Don't try to economize too much on the first cost of Lily Bulbs, because it does not pay in the end. Most importers, both famous and infamous, buy where they can buy cheapest, with little regard for quality. There are no bulbs produced with more care than Horseshoe Brand Bulbs. Cold storage deliveries at any time.

ADULTERATED SEED REPORT.

Following the instructions of congress in the agricultural appropriation bill, the Secretary of Agriculture this year continued the purchase of seed in the open market to determine whether and how much adulteration was practiced by seed dealers. These samples were analyzed and the names of offending seedsmen have been published as Circular No. 35.

There were 1,214 samples of seed purchased, some of them in bulk and some by mail order. Of these 204 were found to be adulterated. There was some improvement in the line of orchard grass seed examined. There were 317 samples analyzed, and of these twelve were found adulterated, compared with fifty-five adulterated samples the previous year.

Of the 371 samples of Kentucky bluegrass seed examined, sixteen were adulterated, and of these thirteen samples contained only a fraction of one per cent of genuine Kentucky bluegrass, while the remainder was made up of Canadian bluegrass, other seed and dirt.

This was the first year that analysis had been made of redtop seed. It was found that this was badly adulterated with timothy seed. Of 526 samples, 176 were adulterated. The percentage of timothy seed ran as high as ninety-eight per cent, though this sample was worse than the average.

House of Purity Freesia, as grown for the Stumpp & Walter Co.

PURITY

The best and most salable Freesia in the American and European markets. Our stock of this now popular and famous Freesia is the largest in this country. We have bulbs that have been grown under glass (the illustration shows one of our houses), also bulbs grown by the originator, R. Fischer. Both of these stocks are the true Purity stock, from which we receive our bulbs. The very highest quality is guaranteed. The demand for this variety in all the wholesale markets is persistent and universal. Its popularity is undiminished; practically it has no competitor.

The Rockmere hotel has been selected for the headquarters and the following rates have been offered to the membership:

For 75 to 100 persons, the best rooms at $5 per day each person. These rooms have bath or running water.

For 100 persons in smaller rooms, or large rooms in nearby cottages, $4 per day each person.

For thirty persons, in small rooms in cottages, $3 per day each person.

Rates include all meals, and accommodations should be secured in advance if possible.

Marblehead is about sixteen miles from Boston and it is necessary to transfer from the South Terminal to the North Station, which can be made on the Boston elevated. Baggage should be checked through to Marblehead.

On account of the necessary change in the convention city, made since the executive committee met in January, it has been necessary also to change the program. As this is not quite completed, it will follow shortly.

The latest crop reports from the prominent growers will be a feature, and there will be reports of much interest from our state correspondents in regard to legislative action in the various states this past winter.

PACIFIC COAST.

Spokane, Wash.—Fred W. Winters, at First avenue and Lincoln street, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His assets are said to amount to $9,255.18, and his liabilities to $12,928.50.

Lawndale, Cal.—Speakman Bros., the rose growers, are now well equipped for their start in business here. They have finished the erection of their new greenhouse, 27x335 feet, and have completed the planting of 5,500 Killarney roses.

VICTORIA, B. C.

The Trade in Bedding Stock.

The bedding trade locally is now in full swing and is fulfilling expectations. Geraniums are the favorites, single crimson Universe taking the place occupied by S. A. Nutt in the east. The latter variety does not show a good color here. This is thought by many to be due to its dislike of the proximity to the sea, but I am inclined to the belief that much of the stock is not S. A. Nutt at all, but Marvel. Coleus is extensively used, but does not seem to be so great a success as in the east. This is due, no doubt, to the uniformly cool nights. The same may be said of cannas, caladiums, castor oil plants and, in fact, all the semi-tropical plants so largely used for bedding in the east.

As this is an ideal climate for perennials, of course they are largely used as garden plants and are highly satisfactory. Bulbs, also, are so satisfactory that they are largely used. With snowdrops, crocuses and other like bulbs in January and February, and so on to the late varieties of narcissi and tulips in June, the garden can be kept gay at nothing more than the original cost. Asters, which are perfectly free from disease and rarely show the yellow center, are great favorites. Ten weeks' and perennial stocks, salvias, marguerites, herbaceous calceolarias, fuchsias, lobelias and, above all, sweet peas, about cover the lines in demand.

Spring is coming along slowly, and the many visitors who are arriving, expecting to find the broom, gorse, etc., in full glory, are being disappointed.

Club Notes.

The results of the organization of the trade here are evident. Members of the trade have been trying individually for years to right alleged grievances in connection with the Provincial Infectious Diseases Act, but without result. Now, after representation has been made by the trade through the association, A. J. Woodward has been appointed a member of the Provincial Board of Horticulture, especially to represent the florists' interests, and it is confidently expected that many of the objectionable features will be eliminated.

There is an old and influential society here, called the Victoria Horticultural Society, which has for years resisted all so-called reforms by individual members of the trade. The matter was discussed informally and the increased cordiality of intercourse made it possible for a united effort to be made at the annual meeting, with the result that a majority of the board are now members of the trade. Fred Bennett is secretary. Messrs. Manton, Thos. Purdy, R. Peters, H. Callow, J. C. Smith, J. Guyton and R. Attwood constitute the trade members and the majority of the board of directors.

F. B.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been little change since last week along business lines. Flowers are slightly more plentiful and it seems that prices are on the downward grade again. Outside stock of all the seasonable varieties is becoming a greater factor than ever and the continued cool spell is just right to show everything at its best. Sweet peas are at the height of their season and, though among our most popular flowers, they are brought into town in such profusion that only a portion of them are used.

Inside stock, such as carnations and roses, continue at almost the same prices as for the last month, though, as stated before, the tendency is downward. Quite a lot of Easter lilies have been sent to the stores during the last week and they are inclined to move rather slowly. Valley merely holds its own. Spanish iris has not sold as well as in former years. A few late-flowering tulips help to enliven the shop windows, but the public is apparently tired of them.

Business, owing to the closing of the schools and a fair amount of wedding work, is not altogether bad, but in the funeral line, which was one of the chief assets in March and April, there is little doing. From present indications, Memorial day advance orders will be quite up to the mark and, with such an abundance of stock as we are sure to have, there should be no trouble in filling all requirements.

Fischer's Grand Freesia Purity

Now is the time to order your supply of Fischer's grand Freesia Purity. Be sure to ask your dealer for Fischer's guaranteed stock, grown by him and supplied to you in his original package; for this stock is never sold in bulk, but is always packed by him in 100, 250 and 500 bulb muslin bags, stamped and indorsed by his signature. Insist upon getting his guaranteed stock, for then you are sure you are getting the pure stock that is grown in the open field in the pure air and sunshine; is thoroughly ripened and absolutely free from culls, and not stock that has been raised from its own seed, which never comes true, or lathhouse grown, which is likely to rot in your benches, instead of growing, owing to the very green, unripe state in which it is dug to get it ready for market in time, or stock that is grown on contract and therefore with the least trouble to the grower, which will very soon evolve itself into a mixture little removed from refracta alba. Eternal vigilance is absolutely necessary to keep it pure. Do not run any risk when you order your Freesia Purity, for it is up to you whether you get the pure stock or a mixture.

To protect both you and himself, his stock this year is sold under guarantee in any sized package to suit dealers, not exceeding 500 in any one package. A certificate of guarantee is enclosed in each package, and Rudolph Fischer's signature is on the outside of package. If you want to get the true stock, insist upon getting it packed as above.

Your dealer will get it for you; if not, write to me and I will tell you who will.

the San Francisco trade, has been appointed head gardener at the state capitol grounds at Sacramento, in the place of Thomas Reeves, who had been employed in that capacity for many years.

P. H. Eckelmann, of San Rafael, Cal., will grow quantities of Minnie Burgle dahlias for the San Francisco market again this season. He has found this to be the most profitable variety to grow.

A life-size bust of John McLaren, of Golden Gate Park, shown at the Bohemian Club, has attracted considerable attention in art circles.

John Floud has been appointed head gardener to F. M. Smith, known as the Borax King, who has one of the finest estates in the neighborhood of San Francisco.

The Armstrong Floral Co. has discontinued its retail flower store on Telegraph avenue, Oakland.

The ninth meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen will be held at San Jose, Cal., June 21. About fifty members from Washington, Idaho, Utah, British Columbia and Oregon have signified their intention to be present, and these, with as many more from California, will make quite a gathering.

Mothers' day is quite an innovation in California and considerable interest was taken in it by the public, who bought largely of white carnations. Had the event been given a little more publicity by the newspapers, more stir would have been occasioned, but, from appearances, it will be much more observed next year.

Luke's Floral Co. has opened a new store at 210 Powell street. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Mothers' day was an agreeable surprise to the florists in general. Judging from previous years, no special efforts were made to secure additional stock and the supply was practically sold out Saturday afternoon. White carnations had the principal call; it was a hard matter to sell pink and it will take time to educate the general public. Roses moved well after the carnation market was depleted.

Flowers of all descriptions are scarce, several weeks of dark, rainy weather having practically shut off the supply. Carnations are developing slowly and do not nearly fill the demand. Roses are in good quality, but quantity is lacking, and all other flowers are proportionately scarce, especially the garden product. With Decoration day only a few days away, it looks like a dearth in every variety, and, although peonies are coming slowly, it will take several days of sunshine to give the proper development.

There is practically nothing in small potted stock, the unusual demand having used the entire available supply.

Various Notes.

A. Hallett, familiar to the growers of Pittsburg, Pa., is looking over the situation here for a location.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

Chicago, May 23.—Cucumbers, 40c to 50c doz.; lettuce, 8c to 12½c case.

New York, May 22.—Mushrooms firm for fancy fresh stock, with scattering sales higher than quoted. Cucumbers weak. Tomatoes scarce. Cucumbers, 50c to 65c doz.; mushrooms, 50c to $2.50 4 lb. basket; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

CUCUMBERS AND MELONS.

Can cucumbers and melons be successfully and profitably grown on raised benches in greenhouses, if planted to succeed the last crop of lettuce in the spring? What varieties should be used? When should they be planted so as to realize the best prices? Please outline their culture. J. M.

The demand for hothouse melons is light and the profits are not usually altogether satisfactory. They are also a difficult crop to handle so as to produce them in perfection and should be grown only by those who have had some experience. Do not try many at first. There are many varieties which force well. The Rocky Ford types are good. Paul Rose did well last year for me. Milwaukee Market is also good.

Cucumbers are easier to grow and more profitable. If you plant your seed a month previously, you will have nice, strong 4-inch plants to put in the beds, when the last of the lettuce is gone and the soil has been well manured and spaded under. Raised benches are better than solid beds, but more expensive. The selected and forcing strains of White Spine cukes for indoor growing are the kinds to order. All dealers now list forcing strains, and it is hard to say which is the best. They require a temperature of 66 to 68 degrees at night and 85 degrees in the daytime, for the best results. If you can not keep the temperature above 65 degrees at night, do not plant until later. Single plants are placed eighteen to twenty-four inches apart in the rows.

F. A. WARD, manager of the Royal Nursey Co., at Fairmont, Minn., has opened offices in the Sinclair block, in that city, and is planning an extension of his business.

THE Maloney Bros. & Wells Co., the nursery and seed firm of Dansville, N. Y., has become a corporation, with a capital of $60,000. The directors are William J. Maloney, Albert E. Maloney and Frederick W. Wells.

A CHARTER has been issued to the Greenville Nursery Co., of Greenville, S. C. The capital stock is $10,000. The officers are: J. H. O'Neall, president; W. S. Bradley, vice-president; J. J. McSwain, secretary; J. B. Bruce, treasurer.

Select Potted Roses
FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING

The Roses here offered are field grown plants which have been potted into 5 or 6-inch pots (according to the growth of the variety) during the winter months. They have been stored in cold houses and cold frames and are in the best possible condition to turn over to your retail customers for outdoor planting, giving an entirely different result from stock carried over winter in storage. For best results the plants should be shipped in pots; in this shape they will carry safely to reasonable distances by freight.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

If the present hot, dry weather continues much longer, the flower market will hardly be worth visiting. However, there is some nice stock coming in yet, especially in the way of outside stock. The outside valley was exceptionally fine this year, though short-lived, of course, and soon used up. Wedding orders are already beginning to fill up the order hooks and there has been a great deal of funeral work in the last few weeks. Bedding and the filling of porch boxes and baskets have kept a good many of the florists on the jump.

Memorial day is looming up as another big day for the retailer and plans for a general, coöperative advertisement of the day are under way. Every florist who invested in the Mothers' day advertising of this sort is well satisfied with results, and it did a great deal toward increasing the interest in the flower show next November.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a meeting in the club rooms Monday evening, May 22. There was a good attendance, considering the hot weather. It seems that the present quarters are entirely inadequate for the membership and not at all up to the standard of the club.

Providence, R. I.—Thomas Tullie has just completed the erection of an 11-room residence at his place in Edgewood. He has had an excellent spring trade in potted plants. He now has about 12,000 geraniums and 25,000 assorted plants in first-class condition.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

The Market.

Business has kept up steadily since Easter. The good weather has brought along the outdoor stock in fine shape. Bulbous stock and violets are nearing an end. Carnations took a back seat last week. Sweet peas are abundant and as popular as ever. The trade in bedding plants seems now to take the lead. Lilacs are in full bloom. It is almost impossible to get valley.

Funeral work keeps up well. Many weddings last week also brought work to the florist. Many have been kept busy filling window boxes for private homes.

Various Notes.

William Fischer is back at his greenhouses again, at Milldale. He recently underwent an operation at the Meriden hospital. His friends are glad to see him out again.

Olson & Lunden report business fine. Mothers' day was a big success.

B.

Guilford, Conn.—Branford A. Latham is erecting a greenhouse at his residence, on Graves avenue. He is conducting a considerable business in plants and cut flowers.

Ishpeming, Mich.—Trebilcock Bros., who for some time have been looking for a site for a new greenhouse establishment, have now purchased a lot, 50x150 feet, on North Third street, between North and Vine streets. The location is said to be a fine one.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

The extremely hot weather last week had a depressing effect on the sale of flowers. Roses and carnations are not first-class. Sweet peas are on the market by the thousand, and plenty of other outdoor flowers can be bought cheaply. Peonies are opening up fast and it is doubtful whether many will be left for Memorial day. With the possible exception of peonies, however, there will be plenty of flowers of all kinds for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. says that business has been good. This firm is cutting lots of stock and will not have to buy anything for Memorial day.

Ben Kramer has had a good run of trade and looks for a good Memorial day business.

Louis Fritsch has been busy right along. He has some of the best carnations on the market.

Nellie Goodge is busy planting out in the cemetery. E. L. F.

New London, Conn.—Edward W. Clark furnished the palms for the decoration of the dancing academy in Lyric hall, for the Billikin Club's dance.

DETROIT.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. F. Sullivan, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident, is now past the danger point. For some time Mrs. Sullivan's life was despaired of, and it was only her strong constitution and grit that pulled her through.

On Monday, May 29, B. Schroeter will open for business in temporary quarters at 90 Broadway, pending the completion of the new store and conservatory, just opposite the old store at 56 Broadway.

Miss Hattie Holzhauer has acquired the interest of E. Bleil in the Flower Shop and is now the sole proprietor of the flourishing new establishment.

Work was commenced on Breitmeyer's new store, adjoining their present location, last Monday. When completed, this will be one of the finest flower stores in the country. H. S.

PITTSBURG, PA.

With the thermometer ranging around 85 to 95 degrees, the less said about the cut flower business the better, except to mention incidentally that stock is showing the effects of the heat, and the wholesalers are receiving such quantities that the end going to the garbage man is not the small end. The continued hot weather, however, had the opposite effect on the plantsmen, who were never pushed so hard in the middle of May. One prominent florist remarked Saturday night that he wished it would freeze, to teach some people that they might have given him a little more time to make deliveries.

Much of the stock being shipped to the wholesalers at present is worthless when it arrives; some boxes on being opened are so hot that one can scarcely put his hand into them.

Samuel McClements, of Randolph & McClements, has been confined to his home for several days with a severe cold. He has been trying to keep up with the plant rush the last two weeks, but it got the best of him.

Hoo-Hoo.

Belfast, Me.—Last season Willis E. Hamilton, who had built up quite a seed department, turned that branch over to another seed store, to give all his attention to the florists' end, which he found best worth pushing and which this year is going forward faster than ever.

The Market.

Last week the somewhat overdue annual spring glut put in its appearance, and practically all lines of stock became overabundant. Carnations held their own fairly well until toward the end of the week, when prices melted away. The overstock was most serious in roses, and carnations led the procession downward. It is noteworthy that the crops have been fairly heavy and that the quality has deteriorated until only a small part is really first-class.

This week started with carnations at a rather lower level than at any time last week, and with no improvement in the rose situation. Sweet peas also congest the market, but the better grades are selling remarkably well, when the general situation is taken into account. There are large receipts of excellent peas and satisfactory prices are received for them.

Peonies are not in heavy supply at present, but the outlook is promising for Decoration day, which will soon be upon us. The prospects for a rattling good business have never been better, and with anything like good weather there ought to be a good supply of first-class stock of just the kind that the buyers want for that day.

The last few years have taught us that Decoration day business is good business, and that it is wise to be prepared for it just as well as for Easter and Christmas. Each year this business has grown till now it usually cleans out everything that comes into the market. Owing to the extremely dry weather, the peony crop will not be quite as heavy as in previous years, but we hope to have enough to take care of the business. Q.

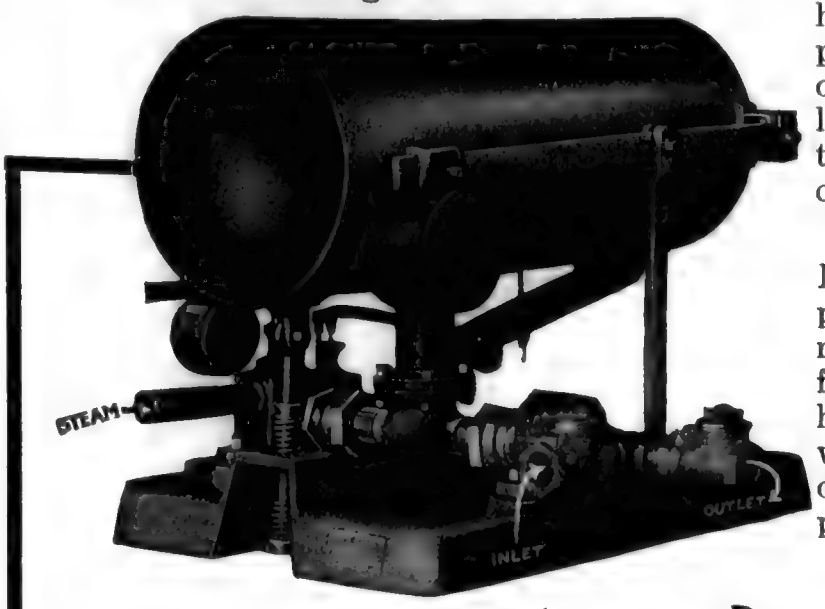
Greenhouse Heating.

If "Old Subscriber," who uses a Mahoney boiler, will send his full name and address an effort will be made to answer his inquiry. Anonymous questions never can be answered.

INSTALLING NEW PIPING.

I have a greenhouse 22x50, full-span, running north and south, four feet high to the eaves and ten feet to the apex. The sides are of stone, pierced to provide for ventilators, 1x3 feet, three on each side. The south end is all glass; the north end is joined to the potting shed. The greenhouse is an old-fashioned one and is heated with the old system of 4-inch pipes under the benches at the sides. The benches extend the whole length at the sides and half the distance in the center.

I wish to install new piping, to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 5 degrees below zero. I am located in southern Rhode Island. I have a hot water boiler, nearly new. I can not state its capacity, but am sure it is adequate. I am planning to use two 3-inch flows, hanging from the purlins over the paths, and each connected to twelve 2-inch returns, six down the front of the side bench and six down the back, three above and three below the surface of the bench. Or should both sets be an equal height from the floor? Would that piping be sufficient to maintain the temperature desired? I expect to clear out the 4-inch pipes altogether and to use the house for carnations. S. W. S.



The radiation suggested in the query more than will be required, as the desired temperature can be obtained by the use of two 2½-inch flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns. It is always advisable to have the coils as nearly at the same level as possible. The flow pipes may be either on the purlins or on the side walls, as preferred.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The report on local conditions for last week is anything but favorable. The unseasonably hot weather brought on an avalanche of stock of all descriptions and it was simply impossible to move it. One would expect that the supply of roses, owing to replanting operations, would be reduced considerably, but that seems to cut no figure at this time. The supply of carnations, which is a perplexing question to all florists EXCEPT those using

MOREHEAD STEAM TRAPS
¶ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.
¶ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.
¶ The majority of florists are using Morehead Traps. If you are one of the exceptions, it will be to your interest to write us—we will make you a liberal trial offer proposition.
¶ By way of getting acquainted, just send your name and address and ask for "Trap Book."

What the Users say

Saved Two Carloads of Coal; Does Not Need to Fire Boiler from 11 p. m. to 6 a. m.

Your No. 9 boiler is heating my entire range of two houses 18x132, one house 6x108, two houses 16x88, one house 20x86 and one house 24x50, and will easily take care of 5000 sq. ft. more. With the thermometer 18° outdoors, fire at 11 p. m. and not again until 6 a. m. The boiler surely is giving me perfect satisfaction. I have used one steam and five hot water boilers. I like your boiler and cannot keep still when I meet a brother florist, but must tell him about your boiler and how much it has saved me in coal bills. With my last boilers I required four to five carloads of coal to heat the same space which is now heated by your boiler with about three carloads of coal. You for another boiler when I have to buy again.

are still of good quality, is away ahead of the demand. Then there is all the outdoor stock, such as lilac and valley, which is in its prime at this time, which undoubtedly replaces greenhouse-grown flowers in many cases, and helps to make matters worse, from a florist's standpoint. Even the peonies which come up from Illinois hang fire most of the time. Every day one can see quite a few good callas make their exit to the dump. Really fine snapdragons are also moving slowly.

Various Notes.

From what we can learn at this time, the joint meeting of the Chicago and Milwaukee Florists' Clubs will be held at the Blatz hotel. In view of the fact that Mr. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, will read a paper on rose growing, the local boys should all be on hand to learn a lesson.

At the C. C. Pollworth plant in Wauwatosa they finished planting carnations into the field May 20.

Outside of tending to the numerous shipping orders in the bedding stock line, the help at the Holton & Hunkel place, at Humboldt avenue, is busy potting up a carload of palms, ficus, boxwood and the like.

Arthur Lemke, aged 23, who for some time conducted a flower store at 581 Downer avenue, took his own life May 15, by taking carbolic acid. Business difficulties, no doubt, were the direct cause. Not being married, he made his home with his parents.

Boone, Ia.—J. Loehrer, of the Boone Greenhouses, reports that this vicinity was visited on the afternoon of May 19 by the worst hail storm he ever experienced. Of his 7,000 square feet of glass, he is doubtful whether 2,000 feet are left unbroken. He carries no insurance. Much damage was also done to the plants in the houses.

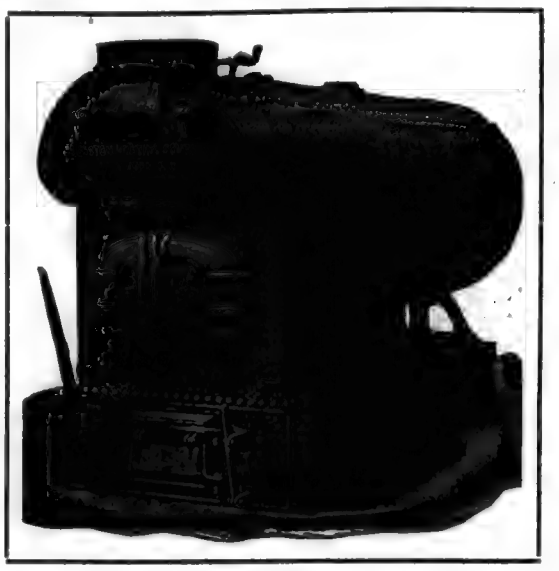
Awarded the Certificate of Merit

at the National Flower Show, Boston, Mass.; and also received the universal approval of all the visitors who examined its merits, the expression of the majority being



"THAT IS THE BOILER I HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR"

The points of merit that appealed to the judges and the critical visitors were that the firebox is entirely surrounded by water, there being no brick work to require constant repair; every part of the boiler is easily accessible for cleaning and oiling, which is the most important feature to be considered in purchasing a boiler that is idle during the summer months; all the castings, doors, grates, etc., are made double extra heavy.

¶ Made in 23 sizes for steam and hot water.

¶ In use during the past five years by well-known florists in all parts of the country.

¶ Have shown a saving in coal consumption of from 25 to 40 per cent over other types of boilers.

¶ All parts of the boiler subject to wear are made standard.

¶ The grates are of the shaking and dumping type, with openings for egg, pea or soft coal.

¶ Tested at the factory to 150 pounds pressure.

MERIDEN, CONN.

The Market.

Business was rather quiet last week. Funeral orders, which were plentiful during the winter and early spring, have dropped off.

The outdoor stock is coming on finely and, owing to the scarcity of other stock, it sells well. The weather has been fine, and planters have been taking advantage of it and hurrying the work along. Lilacs are in full bloom and, if the weather continues warm, we are afraid they will be gone by Memorial day. Carnations seem to be the best selling flower in the market. Geraniums, as usual, are in heavy demand. There is still a great sale of pansies.

Various Notes.

The Blatchley Co. had an unusually fine window display of fancy ferns and cut flowers last week.

John Bonell has been doing great work during the last week with his bedding plants and cut flowers.

Abiram Chamberlain, a former governor of Connecticut, died May 15. The family requested that flowers be omitted at the funeral.

Mothers' day was observed in a number of the churches in this city, some of the clergymen delivering remarks in reference to the event. Many of the gentlemen appeared at church with white carnations in their button holes. The day was also observed at the Y. M. C. A., and writing material was there at the service of those who wished to address a postal to their mothers.

The parks of Meriden are being laid out in their summer robes. Other cities may have larger parks than Meriden, but few of them show a livelier display of flowers in the shape of beds and borders.

R. W. Barrow has a large window full of metallic wreaths. B.

KALISPELL, MONT.

The Review had not a little to do in bringing Mothers' day to the fore in Montana. Governor Norris issued a proclamation couched in beautiful language and the day was reverently observed by the use of white and colored blossoms, carnations predominating, although rosebuds were in free demand. In this city, the Kalispell Gardens had their bushes cleaned and the florists generally feel indebted to The Review for its enterprising boost.

Rain is badly needed in the Flathead regions and a repetition of last summer's drought would mean great loss to agriculturists.

A. Salmon has erected an up-to-date range of houses and the plant is being doubled at the Kalispell Gardens.

BOUNDBROOK, N. J.

This town is fast becoming "a household horticultural word." Ralph M. Ward, the lily man, lives in one of the swell mansions of this junction city, the city where all the trains stop—100 to 200 of them every day. Away over near the mountains are the sweet pea domains of A. C. Zvolanek. The sons of Smith, of Woodside, L. I., make this city their growing headquarters. The immense orchid, gardenia and rose plant of Thomas Young, Jr., is only half a mile from the depot.

Last, but not least, the Wadley Nurseries are doing their share in making the town famous. The firm consists of A. W. Wadley, president; E. W. Wadley, vice-president; A. S. Goodenough, treasurer, and E. P. Bryan, Jr., secretary. They do an immense landscape business, and make a specialty of the moving of large trees. Over 100 acres are under cultivation. The company also has a large retail cut flower store in Plainfield, N. J., under the special care of A. W. Wadley, known familiarly as "Bert" among his New York and New Rochelle friends. Albert Wadley, Sr., of the old firm of Siebrecht & Wadley, New York, has made Plainfield his home for several years.

J. Austin Shaw.

NEW CASTLE, IND.

On Wednesday, May 17, Patrick J. Lynch, head of the Heller Bros. Co., purchased nine acres of the Elliott farm addition, on which he will erect a large range, to care for the greatly increasing business of his company. With the announcement of this deal comes the further statement that work on the plant will begin at once and will be rushed to a hurried completion.

In the beginning Mr. Lynch will build two long greenhouses, each 35x500 feet. He has already ordered 100,000 feet of glass and the other materials for these two houses. He states that it is his plan to make the establishment one of the largest in the middle west. In addition to the greenhouses, he will erect on the south side of the newly acquired tract a number of dwellings for the convenience of employees and for business purposes.

The Heller Bros. Co. is a separate and distinct concern from the South Park Floral Co. The latter is controlled by Myer Heller and is a cut flower company. The two businesses have been under the same roof, which is owned by the South Park company.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

A week of warm weather has had a depressing effect upon the cut flower trade, and made carnations pale and small. Outdoor lilacs are pouring into the market, but there is little demand for them. Most flowers are used for funerals and commencements at present, as there were few weddings of any note this month.

The demand for white carnations for Mothers' day was small this year, compared with other years. Indoor valley is scarce and is selling for $4 per hundred, while outdoor valley has begun to arrive in small quantities. Roses are plentiful and low in price.

Various Notes.

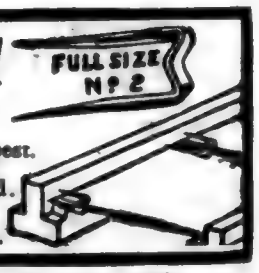
The Wm. Scott Co., of Corfu, N. Y., is shipping some fine large centaureas into this market and they bring a good price.

Few cities can boast of as fine an avenue of magnolias as we have in Oxford street. The trees are so beautiful at this time of year with their gay blossoms that people travel miles to see them.

A unique display was shown in the window of Geo. Boucher's store last week. It was a bit of landscape work laid out by J. H. Werdein and elicited much favorable comment.

Thomann Bros. have gone out of the retail flower business to engage in landscape gardening.

E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, was in town last week.



Miss Lillian Wheeler, of the Rochester Floral Co., is assisting at the branch store for a few weeks.

Ted Ogston, formerly of J. B. Keller's Sons, has entered the employ of Geo. Haring.

F. J. Keller, Walter Salmon, Geo. Boucher and E. P. Wilson have served on the jury for the last two weeks.

Florists' Annual May Party.

To say that the florists' fondest expectations were realized is putting it mildly. On Thursday evening, May 11, they held their annual May party at the Chamber of Industry, 2514 Franklin avenue, and while the weather was not the best, the attendance was large. The committee arranged for seventy-five people, and about 150 came to enjoy themselves. The Chamber rooms are most admirably adapted for an occasion of this kind. The auditorium is spacious enough to accommodate a large gathering, and the floor was as slippery as science could make it. This room was beautifully decorated with palms and huckleberry vines, and also with tall vases of roses, snapdragons and Spanish iris. In the ladies' rest room was a large vase of American Beauty roses, and likewise in the men's room.

In the basement, the billiard tables and the bowling alleys were kept busy by those not wishing to dance. On the second floor a card room was arranged for those seeking that form of pleasure. The orchestra was so arranged that the music could be enjoyed by all in the various parts of the building.

Exactly at 10:30 the floor manager announced that the banquet tables were ready and asked that about one-half be seated at a time, while the balance remained where they pleased, so as to keep everything going constantly.

One of the principal features of the evening was the grand march, which consumed half an hour. The circle two-steps helped materially to put every one at ease and remove any formality. Everyone seemed to feel as if he had been requested to put the lights out, as no one left until the grand finale.

As a climax to the occasion, someone suggested three cheers for the members of the committee, and they humbly accepted a most rousing ovation.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.—Adolph Donart has purchased the lot directly across the street from his greenhouses on Second street and will remove his residence to the new property. He intends, also, to double the capacity of his greenhouses this summer and to make a number of improvements. Business is good, both wholesale and retail.

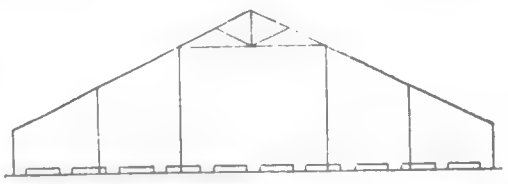
About This House and Another we are Building For John Stephenson's Son, Philadelphia.

BOILING its description right down to a few words, it reads like this: 36 feet wide, 210 feet long, with Guaranteed Wrought Iron Posts imbedded in concrete footings and partly so in the sides—Plate is the L. & B. Patented, Ice-clearing one, bolted to the post by a strong iron fitting—Bars fastened to the plate by Sash Bar clasps, making a strong, dry joint.



Roof supported by Giant Arch, formed by clamping together the pipe columns, purlins and cross ties.

Purlins firmly bolted to gable rafter by a special iron fitting and secured to the roof bars by metal binding straps.

Bars are held at ridge by Wrought Iron Ridge Brackets.

In other words, it is practically an all Iron Frame House. Next to our Sectional Iron Frame Construction it is the best one to build.

From one of our Pipe Frame Houses to an Iron Framer is but the natural thing; the logical thing to do. So now we are building an Iron Frame one for Mr. Stephenson, that is 72 feet wide and 400 feet long. The house will have but four columns. The two center ones carry a compression truss (not a tension one, mind you). This truss is not pulled and stretched into position to draw the house together. It carries a strain only when some extra strain is brought to bear on it. The more the strain then, the tighter and stronger a bracing it becomes.

Just a rough line section to give you an idea of the location of the columns and compression truss in the 72-foot iron framer.

Let us send you a more detailed description of this particular house, along with a blue print of it.

When You Wake Up to the fact that you need a better watering system, the first question that will present itself to you is,

"How Much Will It Cost?"

You have to pay a fair price for anything worth having. If you begin by buying a cheaply made Pumping Engine at $60.00 or $70.00, you are going to pay the difference between it and a reliable machine many times over for repairs. You're going to lose money because your stock has not been thoroughly watered. You're going to lose money by a crop failure, when your machine breaks down in the midst of a busy season. You're going to lose money through having to pay for numerous repairs.

BUT if you get a Standard Pumping Engine you will pay a little more in the first place but you will have a machine which you can depend upon, which will enable you to do the best watering at the least time and running cost, and which will cost you practically nothing for repairs.

The Standard line has a gas or gasoline engine pump or an electric motor pump that just meets your requirements. Catalogue on request.

Criticisms on the Cross.

One of The Review's subscribers recently suggested that it would be a good idea to devote a little space in the paper now and then to the reproduction of photographs of designs, for criticism by other readers. To aid in putting his idea into practice, the subscriber submitted a picture of a standing cross, as the first object of friendly attack. The picture appeared in The Review of May 11 and is republished here, with some criticisms which have been offered.

As a rule I do not like to criticise other people's work, as my own ideas and my own work are so susceptible to criticism, but since you invite your readers to express their opinion about the design reproduced in the issue of May 11, I shall make an attempt at it.

In the first place, I think the design, for its size, is too clumsy in appearance to be called artistic. The designer would have obtained a better result by leaving out the cycas leaves on the upper part of it; just two cycas leaves, one a little shorter than the other, put in the base of the design, would have been sufficient. Undoubtedly too many flowers and also too many different kinds of them were used. For instance, had the designer omitted the lilies—though he might have put some of them in the base, on longer stems—and made the cross up loosely of roses in one color, and hyacinths, it would have been a prettier piece. Another effective way of finishing a cross, in order to get distinctness of shape in the design, is to fill it out solidly with carnations, bordering it with smilax or any other kind of green and arranging a bouquet of roses or any other cluster of flowers loosely in the center of it.

I think it is a good idea to criticise each other's handiwork in this way, if it can be done without causing any one to feel offended, for by doing so we may all be more or less benefited.

M. Z.

"J. E. Jay," the designer of the piece that is under discussion, ought to have a medal voted to him for offering himself as a sacrifice on the altar of improvement. I understand that the manager of the American Screw Works employs a woman at a good salary just to walk around the factories to find fault; the result is perfect work.

"Mr. Jay" has turned out a beautiful cross, but the base is too light; it ought to spread out more. The callas should be stemmed long and placed in the base, to give it a heavier effect. The two long cycas leaves are entirely out of place, as they throw the heavy part of the base up to the arms. The right arm is too short by one-third.

APPLIED PRINCIPLES.

In Decorative Art.

What is the difference in principle between the art of decorating the interior of buildings and the art of floral funeral work, if any? The simplest way to get at this question will be to compare some of the requisites of a good funeral piece with those of some detail of a correct house or church decoration. First, there are color qualifications; there must be harmony in the proposed association of colors. This can certainly be just as positively applied to a mantel decoration as to a casket pillow, with the added provision that the mantel decoration, besides being harmonious within its own color range, must also blend with the colors about it, in wall and woodwork.

Design Offered for Criticism.

Flowers to be used together in a funeral spray need to be approximately the same in size and general appearance, except where a decided contrast is intended; so, also, in a centerpiece; ditto with foliage in both cases.

A star, to be a star, must be well outlined and pointed, distinct and exact; so must a wedding bell. A funeral spray ought to be loose, naturally arranged, yet securely fastened and easily handled; likewise the bride's bouquet.

Essentially Alike.

Perhaps we may fail to find a parallel to a wall festoon, but think a moment—what about a casket garland? One hangs from a picture hook and the other from a casket handle, but the proportions of the drop to the horizontal are the same in either case if they are correctly hung.

A table centerpiece is constructed on the same plan as a casket panel, except for a few minor mechanical differences, and a mantel pan is the same, only more so. A tall handled basket will serve equally well for a funeral offering and a reception table. If you can tell me the difference of principle in the filling of a funeral urn and a tall vase for a music room, I will tell you the difference between a rainbow and its reflection.

Thus we might go on indefinitely and merely discover that the principles and laws are the same, but that the applications are more extended in the case of house decorative work, in about the proportion of a house to a casket. The field is widened and you are more responsible, but you will find satisfaction in the fact that things stay put, while among a collection of funeral pieces you may find your best effort poked into a corner by some incompetent amateur friend of the family.

Decorating a Room.

Some suggestions growing from the subject of design in general, and applied to room decorations, may here be noted. Choose one place in a room in which to center your decorations. Touch other points in the room with less emphasis and connectedly with the central point. Some axioms growing from this are: Do not touch many points in the room; carry a strain of the same color through all the stopping points in the room; avoid points much above the eye line, unless leading lines from the center of the decoration lead to them. A decoration, to be ideal, should be "catchy" as well as correct, and this quality of catchiness is best developed by the witchery of your coloring; most notably is this true of landscape scenery. Avoid points which are located much below the eye line; remember that the room, when filled with people, will have an entirely different appearance from what it has when you alone are gazing at your decoration from a well chosen point of view. All this presupposes that in undertaking the decoration you have a definite picture in mind for each room and have the details well arranged. Then it will not take long to estimate the required amount of material.

With apologies to the title of this article, we will devote a little space to the policy of the subject and a little to a financial phase of the decorative business.

A Question of Policy.

One of the first things to be determined is whether the hostess has any plan or color scheme of her own which she prefers. If so, and if it is practical, it is your business to proceed with it. Whether she asks your opinion or not, if you find it unsuitable or impracticable, do not hesitate to inform her, as tactfully yet decidedly as you can, being prepared with some better scheme. In most cases she will defer to your judgment.

Often the bride has some sentiment which she wishes to convey in the decoration. For instance, at one time I was requested to embody a cross as the center of a wedding altar decoration. Seeing that the failure of her cherished plan might seriously interfere with her satisfaction, I complied. Her thought seemed afterward to be strangely prophetic, as a few weeks after their wedding bride and groom both died of diphtheria!

At another time a bride desired that a large harp, which her father had long used, should be set prominently among the wedding decorations. It was accordingly mounted as the background for the wedding party. A large bowl of roses was placed on the top of the standard. A shower of fine green traces took its source from the rose bowl, falling over and among the strings. With these were thin garlands of rosebuds reaching from the same point on the harp to the windows at either side and ending lightly among the lace draperies. A few ferns grouped about the base of the harp completed the decorations of the ceremony room.

The bride's favorite color or flower is often asked for as a special feature of the decoration and her preferences should be respected if possible.

A Question of Finance.

One of the most intangible and yet necessary elements of decorative work is your estimate of the time which you will need to complete the work. Estimate as accurately as you can by the amount of experience you have had, make some allowance for unexpected delays, and watch the clock as you progress. Any number of incidents and stray guests about the house will break in if you allow them, but you can be courteous and busy, too. Decline volunteer help and whip yourself up if you find that time is getting away too fast.

It may be the estimating that is bothering somebody. Is not your eyesight as accurate in one place as another? You can tell roughly how many carnations will be required for a pillow of a certain size. Why not know how many of the same flowers will grace a buffet properly? A lump price for each room, or, if need be, each feature of the room, with mention of the principal material to be employed, will be found the most satisfactory way in pricing a decoration. This is supposed to include the flowers, the greens, the accessories, the skill and the time.

Competition in the real sense of the word is scarcely possible in decorative work, or funeral work, either. No two would do the work exactly alike. The customer can not be sure in advance which of two competitors will do the better job for the money. Decorating is as indefinite a term as gowning. Other things being equal, the one who seems to be the better informed will land the job. Moral: Be well posted and brimful of ideas. Have plenty of schemes and talk them rather than the quantity of flowers, but do not go too much into detail. Tell enough to inspire interest, but keep the most in reserve till your job is landed. It is often a good plan to submit several different schemes which cover a wide range of prices. G. B.

RETAIL MAIL ORDERS.

Day by day the flower business is broadening; it is no longer the local affair of a few years ago. Nowadays a retail florist reaches to the ends of the earth for his business—not for the bulk of his business, but for some of the extra orders that are so welcome.

In these June days, when the brides' bouquets occupy so large a part of the attention, it is interesting to note the line in the advertisement of a Chicago retailer: "Specially packed for express at no extra charge." Chicago is the home of the mail-order industry, you know. No reason why the Chicago retailers should not share in the mail business. This one is after his share. The advertisement appeared in a Sunday newspaper that circulates for hundreds of miles around Chicago.

THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

This is the time of year when the bride's bouquet is in greatest demand, and the work of leading retailers in this line always is of interest. Here is an illustration showing an excellent shower bouquet which reached The Review some time since, with no marks of identification. The materials used were white orchids and valley, with some tips of asparagus strings. The work is especially commendable because it avoids the flat, bunchy effect which gives an undesirable appearance of weight.

MORE ABOUT FATHERS' DAY.

In The Review of May 25 I read with interest the article by Mrs. L. M. Smith regarding a day to be set apart as Fathers' day, and gladly will I second such a nomination. I have spoken often of it and wished we could have a Fathers' day. Why not? Father is worthy of it. I agree also with Mrs. Smith in thinking that the stately, sturdy chrysanthemum would be the flower and that the second Sunday in November would be a good time.

So let us try to have a day set apart to do honor to dear old father. He may faithfully tread the pathway of life, bearing its burdens ungrudgingly and cheerfully, and yet go down to his grave "unhonored and unsung," but he will be missed and mourned, nevertheless, in the cold, gray days when he can no longer answer the call for his services, and he will receive his reward on the other shore. Mother is worthy of her day; she already has it; but father, though he also is an indispensable factor in the blessedness of home, is too often forgotten, or at least is sometimes not appreciated. In my case, as in that of thousands of others, though father has been dead many, many long years, yet scarcely a day goes by without thoughts of him, and in all sincerity I hope to have a Fathers' day appointed, with the chrysanthemum as the flower.

Mrs. H. L. Phelps.

I was just reading in The Review the item and suggestion of a Fathers' day. I think it is just as fair to have a Fathers' day as a Mothers' day, for the one memory is as dear as the other. And I think the chrysanthemum would be just the flower and November, the second Sunday, just the day. So therefore I second the motion of Mrs. L. M. Smith. Mrs. R. K. Stokesberry.

A male reader sends the following (no claim to originality) in answer to suggestion for response in last issue:

"Sunday, June 18, is Fathers' day.

Bouquet of Orchids and Valley.

You must wear a rose in honor of yourself and will be set upon a pedestal. 'Oh, Mother, Mother, Mother, Pin a Rose——' That'll be about all. Remember the date. You can't dodge it by going fishing because it's Sunday, but you can be very ill. Go out Saturday night and take something—appendicitis or ptomaines perhaps.''

In reply to Mrs. L. A. Smith's article on having a Fathers' day, I heartily agree with her date and flower.

CALOT'S DUCHESSE.

J. H. Humphreys, in charge of the arrangements for the exhibition of the American Peony Society at Philadelphia, June 8 and 9, writes:

''Will you please mention that in Class 14, the Duchesse de Nemours should be Calot's or the white type, and not Guerin's pink Duchesse de Nemours.''

KENTIA BELMOREANA.

A General Favorite.

If one were asked to name the most popular palm at the present day, the subject of this brief sketch would doubtless be the first species mentioned, it being grown and sold more freely than any other by florists in general throughout our country.

It was within the last fifteen to twenty years that the palm business of the United States attained its special prominence, and during that period kentia seeds have been imported by millions from their native country, Lord Howe's Island, an island that appears as a small dot on the map and is located some 600 miles from the northeast coast of Australia.

The seeds of Kentia Belmoreana and also those of the closely allied K. Forsteriana are usually shipped in two main shipments each year, or rather at two seasons in the year, the first arriving in this country in the spring and the second in the autumn. Those of the latter season are preferred by many growers, on the ground that they usually give a higher percentage of germination.

These seeds are quite large, frequently over one inch long, extremely hard, and contain a single germ at one end of the seed. When packed in good condition they are sometimes found to have germinated in the cases, though this condition is by no means general.

Sowing the Seeds.

Large growers of these plants usually sow the seeds broadcast in a bench in a warm greenhouse. The planting is made very thick and the seeds are covered to a depth of nearly one inch with peat or other light soil. The soil is kept moist and the house moderately shaded, and with a bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees some of the seeds will germinate in the course of two months, while others may lie dormant for nearly a year before they will show signs of growth.

The early plants are taken out and potted and the ungerminated seeds resown, from which it will be readily understood that this crop occupies space for a considerable time before any money return may be expected.

The seedlings are potted off into 2-inch pots, the extra deep rose pots being convenient for this purpose, owing to the stiff roots of the seedling kentias. In these pots they are likely to remain for four to six months.

From this size they are shifted to 3-inch pots, and in due season to the 4-inch size. From the 4-inch they are moved to 5-inch and 6-inch pots, according to the vigor of the plants, but each shift signifies at least four months, and frequently longer.

Kentia Belmoreana.

Not a Quick Money-maker.

The 6-inch plants vary in price from $1 to $2 each, according to the size and quality of the stock, these being wholesale rates. It is not a quick-money crop, and therefore many florists are content to allow the palm specialists to raise the seedlings and grow them on to a fair size before purchasing their stock for growing on for a season, or for retailing at once.

The plant of Kentia Belmoreana here pictured is from a photograph of a fair sized specimen in an 8-inch pot, such as usually sells for about $3 at wholesale. When we take into consideration that such a plant is at least three years old, it does not seem like a great return for the space, time and labor involved in the transaction. There is much labor about palm culture in order to produce first-class stock, for the potting, watering, cleaning and general care for a period of years represent a considerable total of expense, even without the final expense of packing for shipment. The latter, of itself, forms no small item, especially when the packing is done for winter shipment.

The Final Returns.

These heavy expenses make the palm business less profitable in proportion to the investment than some other branches of our trade, though it must be admitted that much of the work is of an interesting character.

It should also be taken into consideration that not only is there a considerable percentage of loss from non-germination of seeds in each crop, but that there are always some weak seedlings in every batch, and that the latter will not make fine, salable plants in the same time as the strong seedlings.

These various drawbacks give strength to the contention, on the part of growers, that a good kentia in a 6-inch pot should not be sold for less than $2 at wholesale. A few years' experience in this line of trade would probably bring many to this opinion, an opinion that is not that of a pessimist as to the plant trade.

LILIUM CANDIDUM.

Will you give me some information as to the general culture of Lilium candidum? R. E. P.

Bulbs of L. candidum usually arrive about the end of August. There are two types. The true, broad-petaled north of France variety is the only one worth growing. As the bulbs start to make growth and roots even in transit, unpack and pot at once. While they can be grown singly in 6-inch pots, they do far better if planted three in an 8-inch pot or five in a 10-inch pot. Stand outdoors after potting. Shield from heavy rains, but otherwise give full exposure to the weather until quite sharp frosts occur. This freezing is essential to successful culture of them. If treated like L. longiflorums they will be a failure.

Stand in a coldframe and house the early batch about the middle of December. This would be a suitable date to start them to have flowers for Easter, 1912, the date being April 7. Candidum lilies resent hard forcings; 55 degrees at night should be the absolute maximum for them.

For outdoor culture plant four inches deep in any good soil. Give a light coating of leaves in winter. Spray with Bordeaux mixture once a week after spikes start to push, to ward off or mitigate the disease. Indoor plants are always free from this disease and the quality of flowers on them is vastly superior to outdoor ones. A succession of candidum flowers can be had from April 1 to July 1 by holding plants in cold pits. C. W.

KENTIA BELMOREANA.

A General Favorite.

If one were asked to name the most popular palm at the present day, the subject of this brief sketch would doubtless be the first species mentioned, it being grown and sold more freely than any other by florists in general throughout our country.

It was within the last fifteen to twenty years that the palm business of the United States attained its special prominence, and during that period kentia seeds have been imported by millions from their native country, Lord Howe's Island, an island that appears as a small dot on the map and is located some 600 miles from the northeast coast of Australia.

The seeds of Kentia Belmoreana and also those of the closely allied K. Forsteriana are usually shipped in two main shipments each year, or rather at two seasons in the year, the first arriving in this country in the spring and the second in the autumn. Those of the latter season are preferred by many growers, on the ground that they usually give a higher percentage of germination.

These seeds are quite large, frequently over one inch long, extremely hard, and contain a single germ at one end of the seed. When packed in good condition they are sometimes found to have germinated in the cases, though this condition is by no means general.

Sowing the Seeds.

Large growers of these plants usually sow the seeds broadcast in a bench in a warm greenhouse. The planting is made very thick and the seeds are covered to a depth of nearly one inch with peat or other light soil. The soil is kept moist and the house moderately shaded, and with a bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees some of the seeds will germinate in the course of two months, while others may lie dormant for nearly a year before they will show signs of growth.

The early plants are taken out and potted and the ungerminated seeds resown, from which it will be readily understood that this crop occupies space for a considerable time before any money return may be expected.

The seedlings are potted off into 2-inch pots, the extra deep rose pots being convenient for this purpose, owing to the stiff roots of the seedling kentias. In these pots they are likely to remain for four to six months.

From this size they are shifted to 3-inch pots, and in due season to the 4-inch size. From the 4-inch they are moved to 5-inch and 6-inch pots, according to the vigor of the plants, but each shift signifies at least four months, and frequently longer.

Kentia Belmoreana.

Not a Quick Money-maker.

The 6-inch plants vary in price from $1 to $2 each, according to the size and quality of the stock, these being wholesale rates. It is not a quick-money crop, and therefore many florists are content to allow the palm specialists to raise the seedlings and grow them on to a fair size before purchasing their stock for growing on for a season, or for retailing at once.

The plant of Kentia Belmoreana here pictured is from a photograph of a fair sized specimen in an 8-inch pot, such as usually sells for about $3 at wholesale. When we take into consideration that such a plant is at least three years old, it does not seem like a great return for the space, time and labor involved in the transaction. There is much labor about palm culture in order to produce first-class stock, for the potting, watering, cleaning and general care for a period of years represent a considerable total of expense, even without the final expense of packing for shipment. The latter, of itself, forms no small item, especially when the packing is done for winter shipment.

The Final Returns.

These heavy expenses make the palm business less profitable in proportion to the investment than some other branches of our trade, though it must be admitted that much of the work is of an interesting character.

It should also be taken into consideration that not only is there a considerable percentage of loss from non-germination of seeds in each crop, but that there are always some weak seedlings in every batch, and that the latter will not make fine, salable plants in the same time as the strong seedlings.

These various drawbacks give strength to the contention, on the part of growers, that a good kentia in a 6-inch pot should not be sold for less than $2 at wholesale. A few years' experience in this line of trade would probably bring many to this opinion, an opinion that is not that of a pessimist as to the plant trade.

LILIUM CANDIDUM.

Will you give me some information as to the general culture of Lilium candidum? R. E. P.

Bulbs of L. candidum usually arrive about the end of August. There are two types. The true, broad-petaled north of France variety is the only one worth growing. As the bulbs start to make growth and roots even in transit, unpack and pot at once. While they can be grown singly in 6-inch pots, they do far better if planted three in an 8-inch pot or five in a 10-inch pot. Stand outdoors after potting. Shield from heavy rains, but otherwise give full exposure to the weather until quite sharp frosts occur. This freezing is essential to successful culture of them. If treated like L. longiflorums they will be a failure.

Stand in a coldframe and house the early batch about the middle of December. This would be a suitable date to start them to have flowers for Easter, 1912, the date being April 7. Candidum lilies resent hard forcings; 55 degrees at night should be the absolute maximum for them.

For outdoor culture plant four inches deep in any good soil. Give a light coating of leaves in winter. Spray with Bordeaux mixture once a week after spikes start to push, to ward off or mitigate the disease. Indoor plants are always free from this disease and the quality of flowers on them is vastly superior to outdoor ones. A succession of candidum flowers can be had from April 1 to July 1 by holding plants in cold pits. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamens.

The weather is now unusually warm for the season and cyclamens should be placed, as soon as possible, in coldframes, in which they will grow much better than in the greenhouses. Sashes will not, after this time, be required, except it may be to throw off torrential rains, or on exceptionally cool nights. Build a light wooden framework which will lift the sashes eight or ten inches above the sashbars, to allow of a free circulation of air from all sides. Do not shade the glass with whitewash, but instead use lath shades, which, while admitting the necessary light, also allow a little sunshine to strike the plants and at the same time keeps them much cooler. Stand the plants on a bed of clean coal ashes and if they are partially plunged, so much the better. On hot days play the hose on the shades two or three days to slightly moisten the leaves and assist in lowering the temperature.

Cinerarias.

It is time to sow a batch of cineraria seeds, especially if the plants are wanted in flower early in the winter. The large-flowered type has a dwarfer habit than the stellata or small-bloomed section, although they are not so decorative. Still, they are the best to grow where neat pot plants are wanted. Sow the seeds in pans of light sandy soil, chiefly leaf-mold. Cover them lightly. After watering, cover the pans with a sheet of glass and lay paper over this. If you have not a cool north house, use a coldframe for the seed pans. Watch them carefully, so that the soil is not allowed to dry out; also avoid anything like a close atmosphere, as the little seedlings will easily damp off during hot weather.

Antirrhinums.

Have you remembered to take cuttings from specially good plants of antirrhinums? A careful selection will vastly improve the quality of the spikes, and when extra good strains appear it is well to perpetuate them. Cuttings put in now will root better than they will a month or six weeks hence, when steadily hot weather usually prevails, and when such cool-loving subjects as antirrhinums usually have rather hard cuttings, which never produce so satisfactory plants as do the side shoots rubbed off now.

Some growers prefer to increase their stock from seed and this, if purchased from a reliable source, comes almost absolutely true to color. Mixtures of seed should never be planted, for no one wants mixed bunches of antirrhinums, and about the only time they can be profitably used would be in bouquet work for Memorial day. The best colors are pure white, yellow and bright pink. At the holidays a good scarlet will sell well, but the dark and miscellaneous shades are little wanted. Sow the seed in rows six inches apart in coldframes. Prick off in flats and later pot up if for early planting for flowering in late fall. If not wanted for an early crop, plant outdoors in nursery rows, and take cuttings from the best varieties for later planting. Seed can be sown as late as the early part of August for producing plants to bench after the mums are gone.

Callas.

After Memorial day there is little call for callas, and the pots should be gradually dried off and placed outdoors on their sides. We say gradually drying off advisedly, as we do not believe any bulbous rooted plants in full growth should be thrown on their sides and laid down to bake, as is too often done. Plants in benches should be gradually dried off and, when the foliage has ripened off, the tubers can be lifted and stored in dry sand until planting time again arrives.

If an increase in stock is wanted, plant out young offsets in well manured land and lift in the fall. The new Godfrey calla does particularly well treated in this way and it is the finest variety in commerce today.

Nerines.

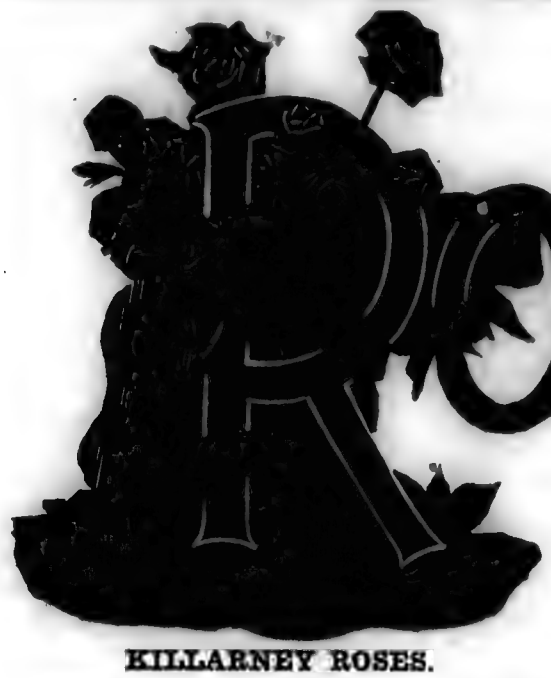
The nerines, or Guernsey lilies, as they are popularly called, will now have completed their growth and as soon as the foliage turns yellow they can be laid on their sides on a hot, sunny bank outdoors, or, as some specialists prefer, use cold sashes tilted top and bottom to cover them. These beautiful and showy fall flowering bulbs will not flower well unless they receive a thorough baking through the summer months. They should have absolutely no moisture whatever until the flower spikes begin to push, which is usually during September.

Show Pelargoniums.

As the plants pass out of flower the show pelargoniums can be stood out of doors in full sunshine. Do not at once start to keep them dry. A gradual ripening is what they need. In two or three weeks, as the growth hardens, lay them on their sides for a rest. Do not, however, keep them too dusty-dry, but play the hose on them occasionally during hot days.

This is not the best time to take cuttings. An abundance will be obtainable at the time the plants are restarted and pruned back. A short selection of desirable varieties is: Countess of Crewe, Crimson King, Mme. Thibaut, Lady Carrington, Alice M. Love, Dr. Masters, Gloriosa and Beauty of Oxton. These pelargoniums are usually in fine flower for Memorial day.

Summer Lilies.



The demand for lilies in summer is light as compared with the colder months. People tire of the omnipresent longiflorums, and speciosum album and rubrum provide a welcome change. The earliest bulbs potted in late November are now coming into flower and should have a cool house, well shaded. Pick the pollen masses away each day to keep the flowers clean. See that later plants are securely staked, as the plants grow much taller under glass than outdoors. Do not omit fumigation. Once green fly gets a good foothold it will deform or ruin a great part of the flowers. Lilium auratum, owing to its pronounced odor, is a less popular market variety than speciosum. When pot grown it is, however, useful for standing on piazzas, the scent being too powerful in rooms.

Geraniums

GERANIUM SEEDLINGS.

The enclosed geranium blooms are from three of our seedlings; numbering from dark to light, they are Nos. 3, 4 and 5. We have grown them for three years and find them well established in color and foliage and profuse bloomers. They are of a dwarf, stocky habit; the flowerets extend well above the foliage; the color is lasting and good. Are there any plants of this kind or color on the market? If so, please let us know the names of them. We feel that these are worthy plants and, should there not be any stock like them on the market, we shall offer them for sale. H. B. B.

The flowers were quite withered when received, nothing damp being tied at the bottoms of the stalks. However, one or two buds have since opened in water, which gives an idea of their color and character. These are each good singles, but I would not like to say that they are distinct from varieties now in commerce, although they are slightly different from any I am acquainted with. There are, however, hundreds of sorts unknown to even geranium specialists. The dark-colored variety, No. 3, closely resembles Hall Caine. It is not so good a shade for bedding as Jacquerie or Paul Crampel. The medium shade, No. 4, is like Scaramouche, a comparatively new French sort, and I admire its color greatly. The light variety comes close to Ian Maclaren and is an attractive shade. Try these out for bedding and, if they stand the test, the two lighter ones, Nos. 4 and 5, should prove valuable. I should like to see a truss of each again, but not until cooler weather comes. C. W.

KILLARNEY ROSES.

Will you give me some information as to the general treatment of Killarney roses in detail, so as to have them in crop from October to June?

R. E. P.

To describe in detail the treatment of Killarneys would require more space than The Review can spare at this season, and information must be well boiled down. Presuming that you have plants in 3½-inch or 4-inch pots, either own root or grafted, they should be planted as soon as possible. Use five inches of soil if on raised benches, being sure to leave ample drainage between the boards or cement slabs. The compost should be heavy rather than light. Three parts of fibrous loam well chopped and one part well decayed cow manure, to which some bone meal has been added, and which has been well mixed before being placed in the house, makes a good compost. If in solid beds, do not use over six inches of soil, and be sure the drainage is ample. Fifteen inches apart each way will answer for the plants. Do not soak the whole bed when watering, but leave a little hollow around each plant to hold water. Keep the surface soil frequently stirred and ply the hose freely to keep down red spider, aphis and other pests.

Ventilate according to the weather. From now onwards it will be necessary to leave air on at night, except it may be exceptionally cool. It pays not to cut fire heat off too early. The larger establishments keep up some steam, even in midsummer, and it pays in keeping the houses sweet, and in fighting mildew fire heat is a necessity. Fumigation must not be neglected, of course, at any time. Aphis will be particularly troublesome in late summer and early fall. Pinch off all flower buds until the end of August if you want a crop early in October. Prices then are not high and it may pay to allow part of the plants to get stronger and bloom later. Always plan to get in a considerable crop for special occasions, like Thanksgiving and Christmas. The time from cutting one crop to getting another depends on the season. It may be five or eight weeks.

An average winter minimum of 56 degrees will be found about right. Avoid feeding during the dark days in winter. Do not attempt it until the days lengthen. Nothing beats liquid cow manure. This is safer and better than any chemicals. A light top-dressing of cow manure can be applied about January 1 and this can be renewed at intervals of six weeks, making the mulch rather heavier as the weather grows warmer. In applying fresh cow manure, however, be sure to leave a crack of air on for a night or two, as there have been many cases of foliage being scorched by the ammonia in a tight atmosphere.

Plants can be carried over a second year, in which case they must be rested about six weeks, starting about the end of June. Then prune back to good eyes and cut away all weak, useless growths. Do not dry so as to cause foliage to fall. Start up again about the middle of August for an October crop. Remove surface soil and give a good top-dressing, or if you prefer, dig up carefully after pruning and replant in new soil. Killarney is a splendid winter and spring rose, but not a good summer variety, being too single. However, the new double variety may prove a better summer sort.

ERICAS.

Will you give me some information as to the general culture of ericas?

R. E. P.

The varieties commonly cultivated in the cooler states of America are Caffra densa, melanthera, persoluta alba, fragrans and Mediterranea. These are propagated somewhat easily in the early winter months by small tips an inch or so in length placed in an ordinary propagating bench, such as is used for carnations. Bell glasses and special cases are not necessary for their propagation. They root rather slowly, but cuttings inserted in sand about Christmas will be rooted in eight to twelve weeks. Use pots of thimble size for the first shift. Grow outdoors after the end of May, plunging the pots to the brim and keeping them well watered and freely syringed. Pot on as required, using a compost of fibrous loam, leaf-mold and sand. Avoid manures and fertilizers in the compost. Plants once they are in 3-inch pots or over will grow faster if planted outdoors in any good soil, but one containing leaf soil in quantity is specially good. They must be kept well watered and hosed over through the summer.

Lift and pot early in October. Shake away all loose soil and chop around the balls of large plants with a sharp spade to make them fit their pots. Spray freely and leave outdoors after potting until frost threatens. Then place in an airy, frost-proof plant pit or a cold greenhouse; 40 degrees at night is sufficiently warm; in fact, a few degrees of frost will not hurt them. Pot-grown plants plunged in soil or ashes will bloom rather earlier than those planted out, and melanthera can be had for Christmas in good shape.

Ericas must never be subjected to anything like forcing, or they will be ruined and, like all hardwooded plants, want careful waterings. The large-flowered, waxy forms of ericas are grown to a limited extent by a few specialists in New York and Massachusetts, but would not succeed where they could not have cool and moist climatic conditions.

IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

By L. M. Graves, Harlington, England.

The first item to attract my notice in New York was the roads. How Americans, who boast of their great country, can tolerate such vile roads as are to be seen everywhere is more than I can fathom. We Londoners are apt to complain about a few ruts, but never again shall I criticise them. But we had a really good time at the banquet of the New York Florists' Club, and some of our party, I am sure, relish the nice things said about us. The New York boys, too, aren't above accepting a bit of blarney. My word, it's a wonder we survived it! Throughout our tour we were feted; every florists' club on the route seemed mad to outdo the previous one, but I will give them credit for not being too pressing. If anything makes me bored it is being pressed to take a cocktail when I don't want it.

The trip to Philadelphia was interesting and I honestly believe that the great building run by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. is the smartest place of its kind to be found either in or out of America. The average seedsman on this side can have no conception of this remarkable place. Machinery and labor-saving devices are everywhere. In the offices I noticed that typists take their dictation from talking machines.

The Americanized English, Scotch, Greek, Germans and so on seem to be a really happy family, and they knock off things wonderfully well. They have the vastness of the country to thank for this, I fancy, coupled with the fact that the number of florists and growers are infinite as compared with over here. They have things in their own hands, and by keeping well together they can control the output and the market generally. Importations of stock from other quarters do not trouble them, so they have reason to be happy and brotherly. We can all be overflowing with kindness when the world is treating us in the same way, but it takes the gloss off to know that the party in the next street is practicing systematic undercutting. As I have said before, the American florists and growers, as I saw them, are a decent lot, and even after allowing that they were on their best behavior, I think the same expression is applicable. Not a few are prepared to do their bit in the way of tall-talk, but I nevertheless believe that the bulk of the Americanized Britishers are ready, if tackled on the square, to admit that the "old country" isn't such a tarnation one-horse show as some would have us believe.

As a grower of both plants and blooms, I was disappointed at the meager show of goods obtainable in the markets. Whether climate has anything to do with it, I cannot say, but I give it to our U. S. A. friends that we can whack 'em all over. Mr. Vincent, who, by the way, proved a good pilot, does a big trade in pot lines, but mostly of the bedding type. At E. G. Hill Co.'s Richmond quarters, things were done well, but I candidly confess that roses and carnations were beginning to pall upon me before I reached there. It seems as if America lives on roses and carnations and I was mortally sick of them after I viewed the great concern of Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Chicago. The stock was indeed wonderfully well done. I give the Yankees credit that they can do these two lines on a vast scale in a very even manner. I don't pretend to know anything about these lines, but all the same I can express an opinion as an outsider, and it is this: "The best American grade carnation or rose is no better than the best home-grown as I've seen them." But the Americans certainly have a long pull when it comes to production in quantity, for the simple reason that in America the firms put down acres to these two crops. Poehlmanns' have forty-five acres given almost entirely to them, and I own that when I finished my survey, I didn't care a red cent whether I saw another rose or carnation during the next two years. Poehlmanns' attracted me more on account of its phenomenal size and the labor-saving methods than the produce did.

The Boston show to American eyes may have been the biggest on earth—the building certainly eclipsed anything of the kind that I know—but I nevertheless think that to best our Temple or Holland House shows the U. S. A. men have a long way to go. Some of the Boston exhibits were good, really good, and I almost went down on my knees when I came across Farquhar's cyclamens. This firm can do these plants in style. The whole Farquhar exhibit was very creditable. The rose exhibits were good, naturally, as were some of the carnations. As a sweet pea grower, I confess that Wm. Sim can lick us into a cocked hat when it comes to early bloom. Sim is a credit to Old England, or rather to Scotland, and his sweet peas made me feel small. The plant exhibits generally were only moderate, but Mr. Roland's were an exception. Taking the plant lines as I saw them in America, it seems to me that the growers there depend largely upon hard-wooded imported stuff.

Just how many times I heard, "Very pleased to meet you," I cannot say, but I used to pity the poor Yankees every time they were introduced to our crowd. By the time each had greeted us, he was out of breath and hugging a sore hand. Most of them said: "Come right along." Our trip was one series of banquets and functions. The florists' clubs of each town vied with each other to give us a good time. It really seemed as if one crowd hung on our heels until the next lot came to meet us. At one place, Washington, if I remember rightly, we had two banquets. Washington, by the way, is a fine place, but Boston more closely resembles London than any place we visited. Taken on the whole, I gained some amusement and a good deal of knowledge from my trip, but leisure I never had. Dog-tired every day, Sundays and all. The club boys never let us rest. They are born pilots, for they took us to all points where things were to be seen; buildings or parks, they knew every crook and cranny, and I venture to say with their help we saw more of America in three weeks than the average tourist would see in three months.

THE BOSKOOP EXHIBITION.

Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., was a member of the international board of judges for the great flower show at Boskoop, Holland, in April. This was the first attempt of the Boskoop nurserymen to give an exhibition of this magnitude and they are more than pleased with the results. Altogether, 60,000 persons visited the show in the fourteen days of its duration, and among these were leading men in the trade from all the countries of Europe. Of the plants shown, rhododendrons and azaleas naturally occupied first place, but there were large and fine displays of lilacs, roses, hydrangeas, Japanese maples, viburnums, magnolias, prunus, cytisus, malus, cratægus, clematis, deutzias, kalmia, robinia, staphylea, spiræa, weigelia, peonies, lilies and all the decorative plants for which Boskoop is known the horticultural world over.

AT THE ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

The lilac display at the Arnold Arboretum, in Boston, was at its height May 20, when these notes were written. A quantity of large sized specimens were moved last fall, many of them being cut down near the ground, and are now breaking nicely. The undisturbed plants are in fine flower.

A few of the best varieties noted were: Aline Mocquery, single dark purplish red, dwarf habit; Mme. Lemoine, still the finest double white; Philemon, single, dark purple, immense panicles, one of the finest lilacs grown; Frau Bertha Dammann, large pure white panicles; Guizot, fine single light lavender; Ville de Troyes, rosy lilac, a splendid grower; Volcan, a grand single dark purple variety, similar to Philemon; Dr. Masters, double blue, erect panicles, good; Louis Henry, much branched panicles, rose with lavender, a good double; Le Printemps, double pink suffused with lavender, large flowers; Prince Imperial, single, airy-looking branched panicles, light blue; Michael Buchner, double, pale lilac, erect; Negro, single, dark purple, a grand variety; Macrostachya, the most beautiful of all the single light pinks, immense erect panicles; Senateur Volland, an excellent double, light pink; Ambrose Verschaffelt, light single pink, large panicles; Souvenir de Ludwig Spæth, single, deep purple red, still one of the best; Doyen Keteleer, double, pale lavender; Lemoinei, fine double blue; Nigricans, a cheery single light pink—Nigricans is something of a misnomer for this variety; Marie Legraye, still the finest single white; cærulea superba, excellent single deep blue; Belle de Nancy, bright satiny rose; Geant des Batailles, fine single, light pink; Croix de Brahy, single pink, small trusses, densely flowered; Jean Bart, double, deep pink; Mme. Abel Chatenay, medium panicles, pure white, double; Princess Alexandra, fine single white; Charles X, still in the front ranks, reddish purple, trusses a little loose. All lilacs grown here are on their own roots.

Among other interesting plants seen here were masses of the brilliant Azalea Kæmpferi and Fothergilla major in fine flower. Twenty thousand seedling Chinese rhododendrons were transplanted and being grown in frames under lath shades. Pans containing tens of thousands of seedling coniferæ were noted, as well as a host of deciduous subjects. A long frame contained a large quantity of the new red Cypripedium Thibeticum and a yellow spotted cypripedium which was collected by E. H. Wilson in China and which successfully withstood the four months' journey. A number are already in flower. Superintendent Dawson has many other interesting things to show the visitor.

In the collection of malus or flowering crab apples the following were noteworthy: M. Halliana, M. Ionensis flore pleno, M. Toringo, M. atrosanguinea, very dark; M. Niedwedzkiana, a fine dark variety; M. floribunda, M. Scheideckeri, M. spectabilis, M. baccata, M. Arnoldiana, a beautiful pure white sort; M. Sargento, low growing, handsome, and M. Ringo. W. N. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Convention Exhibition Rules.

At the mid-lenten meeting of the executive board the following changes were made in the rules governing the trade exhibition:

Rule 3. Exhibition space shall be designated in square feet. The charges for space shall be as follows:

Minimum charge $10.00
Flat rate, per square foot..... .25

Exhibition space shall be limited to six feet six inches above the floor, except for plants, greenhouse structures or other exhibits which necessarily extend to a greater height. Plant and cut flower exhibits may be also built up to any height authorized by the superintendent. All exhibits except as above specified which extend above six feet six inches in height shall be charged ten per cent additional on the entire space for each six inches of additional height of any part of the exhibit. All signs must be kept within the space limits. Where tables are against the walls, wall space up to six feet six inches above the floor and of the length of the table will be furnished the exhibitor without extra charge. Wall exhibits projecting above this height will be charged for the additional space, at wall space rates. Signs on the wall or elsewhere shall not extend higher than six feet six inches above the floor in any exhibit.

Wall space, without floor or table space, or when exceeding in dimensions the amount allowed with the exhibition space, shall be charged as follows:

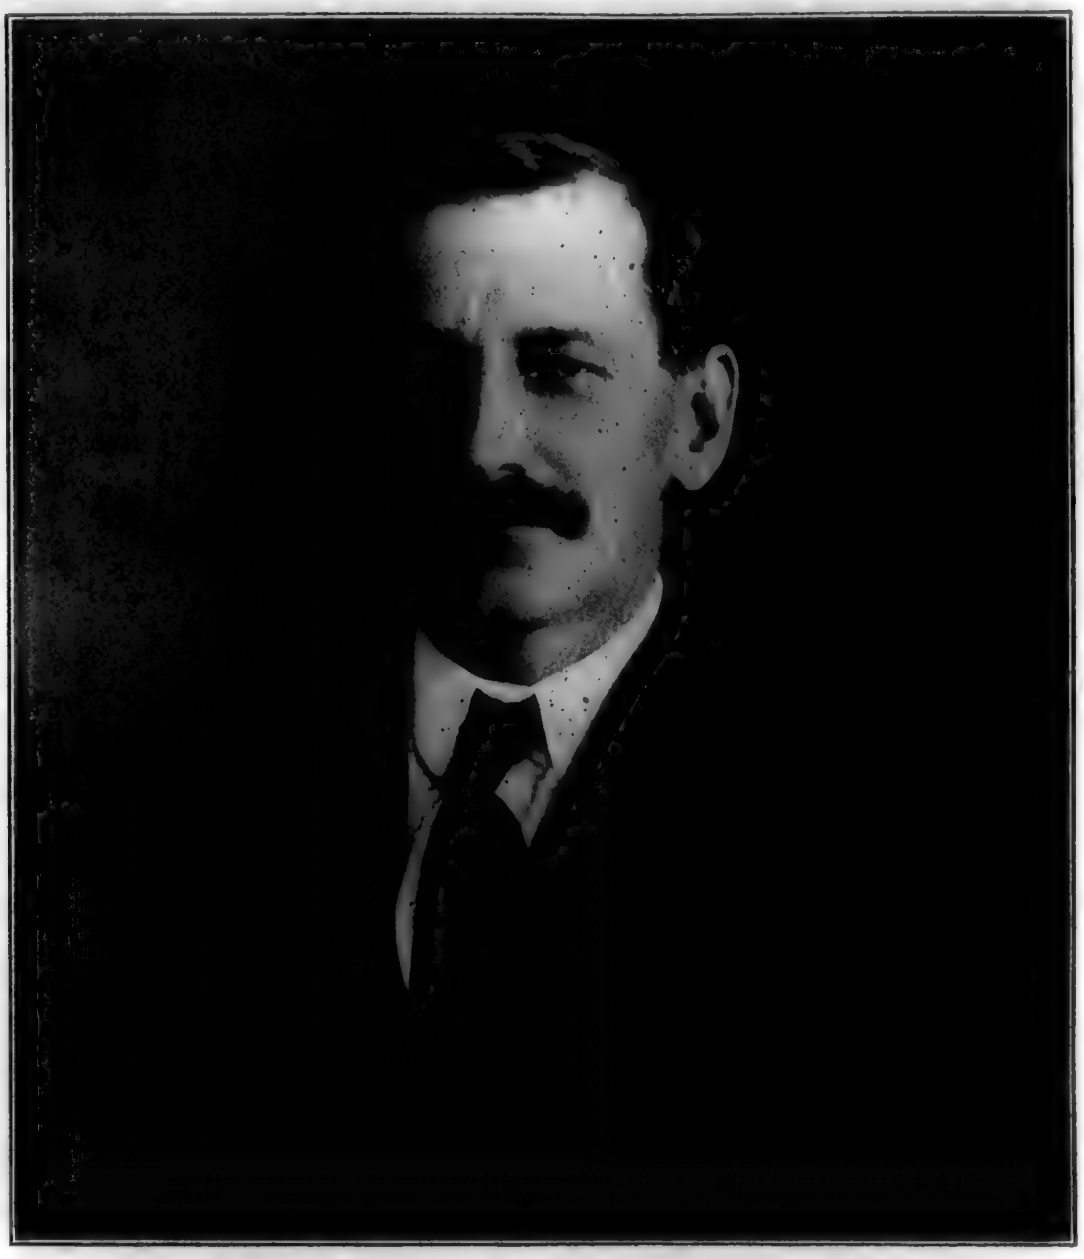
Minimum charge $5.00
Flat rate, per square foot..... .10

Wall exhibits shall not project over one foot from the wall. Exhibitors' signs must be kept within limits of wall space.

Exhibitors must furnish at their own expense all tables, cloth and other accessories and incidentals. The superintendent will be willing, so far as his other duties will permit, to assist exhibitors in securing tables and other needed articles; but neither the superintendent nor the society will pay for or assume any financial responsibility for the purchase or placing of such articles.

All signs shall be uniform in character and be furnished by the superintendent of exhibition at cost and no other signs to be permitted.

Charges for freight, cartage or expressage will not be paid or guaranteed for exhibitors. Goods shipped charges collect will be refused unless the owner is on hand to pay the charges.



Rule 5. Add (Garden Requisites) to Section F. Change number of rule 19 to 21 and add:

Rule 19. While the society will exercise all due care to safeguard the exhibits, it will not assume any responsibility or liability for any loss or damage to any exhibit.

Rule 20. The executive committee will make such further rules as it may deem necessary for the proper conduct of the exhibition.

Attention should be called to the fact that these rules, and especially the one concerning the signs, will be strictly enforced. No signs will be permitted in the hall other than those of the uniform character which have been adopted by the board. Exhibitors should take note of this and see that their signs are ordered in advance. Copies of the complete rules and plans of the floor space may be secured of the superintendent, Mack Richmond, Baltimore, Md.

Hotel Belvidere, located on Charles and Chase streets, has been selected as the hotel headquarters for the society. The president's reception will also be held at this hotel. Applications for rooms should be sent in early, so as to secure good accommodations. The hotel is located within a few minutes' walk of the Armory, where the meetings and exhibitions are to be held.

Mack Richmond, Superintendent Baltimore Convention Exhibition.

Registration of Roses.

Public notice is hereby given that the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa., offers for registration the roses described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed names is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

MACK RICHMOND.

A good many people believe that the good sports are the good workers, and certain it is that whenever one of the bowling contingent has been designated as superintendent of the S. A. F. convention trades' display, good work always has been had. Perhaps that is why it has come to be the fashion to pick a sport to do the heavy work of the August exhibition. Mack Richmond, who is to be superintendent of the trades' display at Baltimore in August, is one of that town's tireless bowlers, and his scores always are a credit. He is with Halliday Bros., and it is said he works as hard as he plays. Already Mr. Richmond, whose address for convention work is 1813 Pulaski street, has sold a large part of the floor space in the great Armory building, where the trade will gather in August.

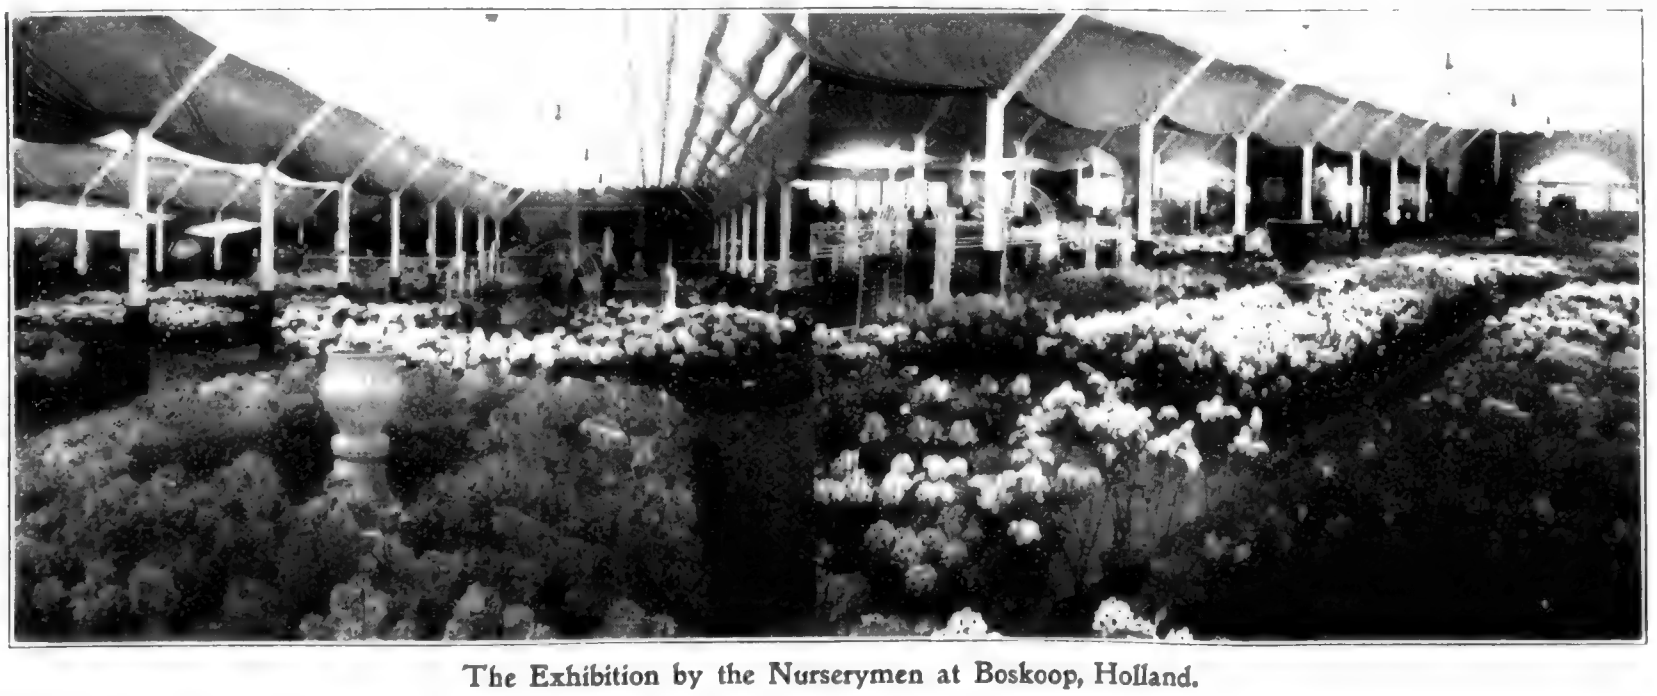
As I have said before, the American florists and growers, as I saw them, are a decent lot, and even after allowing that they were on their best behavior, I think the same expression is applicable. Not a few are prepared to do their bit in the way of tall-talk, but I nevertheless believe that the bulk of the Americanized Britishers are ready, if tackled on the square, to admit that the "old country" isn't such a tarnation one-horse show as some would have us believe.

As a grower of both plants and blooms, I was disappointed at the meager show of goods obtainable in the markets. Whether climate has anything to do with it, I cannot say, but I give it to our U. S. A. friends that we can whack 'em all over. Mr. Vincent, who, by the way, proved a good pilot, does a big trade in pot lines, but mostly of the bedding type. At E. G. Hill Co.'s Richmond quarters, things were done well, but I candidly confess that roses and carnations were beginning to pall upon me before I reached there. It seems as if America lives on roses and carnations and I was mortally sick of them after I viewed the great concern of Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Chicago. The stock was indeed wonderfully well done. I give the Yankees credit that they can do these two lines on a vast scale in a very even manner. I don't pretend to know anything about these lines, but all the same I can express an opinion as an outsider, and it is this: "The best American grade carnation or rose is no better than the best home-grown as I've seen them." But the Americans certainly have a long pull when it comes to production in quantity, for the simple reason that in America the firms put down acres to these two crops. Poehlmanns' have forty-five acres given almost entirely to them, and I own that when I finished my survey, I didn't care a red cent whether I saw another rose or carnation during the next two years. Poehlmanns' attracted me more on account of its phenomenal size and the labor-saving methods than the produce did.

The Boston show to American eyes may have been the biggest on earth—the building certainly eclipsed anything of the kind that I know—but I nevertheless think that to best our Temple or Holland House shows the U. S. A. men have a long way to go. Some of the Boston exhibits were good, really good, and I almost went down on my knees when I came across Farquhar's cyclamens. This firm can do these plants in style. The whole Farquhar exhibit was very creditable. The rose exhibits were good, naturally, as were some of the carnations. As a sweet pea grower, I confess that Wm. Sim can lick us into a cocked hat when it comes to early bloom. Sim is a credit to Old England, or rather to Scotland, and his sweet peas made me feel small. The plant exhibits generally were only moderate, but Mr. Roland's were an exception. Taking the plant lines as I saw them in America, it seems to me that the growers there depend largely upon hard-wooded imported stuff.

Just how many times I heard, "Very pleased to meet you," I cannot say, but I used to pity the poor Yankees every time they were introduced to our crowd. By the time each had greeted us, he was out of breath and hugging a sore hand. Most of them said: "Come right along." Our trip was one series of banquets and functions. The florists' clubs of each town vied with each other to give us a good time. It really seemed as if one crowd hung on our heels until the next lot came to meet us. At one place, Washington, if I remember rightly, we had two banquets. Washington, by the way, is a fine place, but Boston more closely resembles London than any place we visited. Taken on the whole, I gained some amusement and a good deal of knowledge from my trip, but leisure I never had. Dog-tired every day, Sundays and all. The club boys never let us rest. They are born pilots, for they took us to all points where things were to be seen; buildings or parks, they knew every crook and cranny, and I venture to say with their help we saw more of America in three weeks than the average tourist would see in three months.



THE BOSKOOP EXHIBITION.

Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., was a member of the international board of judges for the great flower show at Boskoop, Holland, in April. This was the first attempt of the Boskoop nurserymen to give an exhibition of this magnitude and they are more than pleased with the results. Altogether, 60,000 persons visited the show in the fourteen days of its duration, and among these were leading men in the trade from all the countries of Europe. Of the plants shown, rhododendrons and azaleas naturally occupied first place, but there were large and fine displays of lilacs, roses, hydrangeas, Japanese maples, viburnums, magnolias, prunus, cytisus, malus, cratægus, clematis, deutzias, kalmia, robinia, staphylea, spiræa, weigelia, peonies, lilies and all the decorative plants for which Boskoop is known the horticultural world over.

AT THE ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

The lilac display at the Arnold Arboretum, in Boston, was at its height May 20, when these notes were written. A quantity of large sized specimens were moved last fall, many of them being cut down near the ground, and are now breaking nicely. The undisturbed plants are in fine flower.

A few of the best varieties noted were: Aline Mocquery, single dark purplish red, dwarf habit; Mme. Lemoine, still the finest double white; Philemon, single, dark purple, immense panicles, one of the finest lilacs grown; Frau Bertha Dammann, large pure white panicles; Guizot, fine single light lavender; Ville de Troyes, rosy lilac, a splendid grower; Volcan, a grand single dark purple variety, similar to Philemon; Dr. Masters, double blue, erect panicles, good; Louis Henry, much branched panicles, rose with lavender, a good double; Le Printemps, double pink suffused with lavender, large flowers; Prince Imperial, single, airy-looking branched panicles, light blue; Michael Buchner, double, pale lilac, erect; Negro, single, dark purple, a grand variety; Macrostachya, the most beautiful of all the single light pinks, immense erect panicles; Senateur Volland, an excellent double, light pink; Ambrose Verschaffelt, light single pink, large panicles; Souvenir de Ludwig Spæth, single, deep purple red, still one of the best; Doyen Keteleer, double, pale lavender; Lemoinei, fine double blue; Nigricans, a cheery single light pink—Nigricans is something of a misnomer for this variety; Marie Legraye, still the finest single white; cærulea superba, excellent single deep blue; Belle de Nancy, bright satiny rose; Geant des Batailles, fine single, light pink; Croix de Brahy, single pink, small trusses, densely flowered; Jean Bart, double, deep pink; Mme. Abel Chatenay, medium panicles, pure white, double; Princess Alexandra, fine single white; Charles X, still in the front ranks, reddish purple, trusses a little loose. All lilacs grown here are on their own roots.

Among other interesting plants seen here were masses of the brilliant Azalea Kæmpferi and Fothergilla major in fine flower. Twenty thousand seedling Chinese rhododendrons were transplanted and being grown in frames under lath shades. Pans containing tens of thousands of seedling coniferæ were noted, as well as a host of deciduous subjects. A long frame contained a large quantity of the new red Cypripedium Thibeticum and a yellow spotted cypripedium which was collected by E. H. Wilson in China and which successfully withstood the four months' journey. A number are already in flower. Superintendent Dawson has many other interesting things to show the visitor.

In the collection of malus or flowering crab apples the following were noteworthy: M. Halliana, M. Ionensis flore pleno, M. Toringo, M. atrosanguinea, very dark; M. Niedwedzkiana, a fine dark variety; M. floribunda, M. Scheideckeri, M. spectabilis, M. baccata, M. Arnoldiana, a beautiful pure white sort; M. Sargento, low growing, handsome, and M. Ringo. W. N. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Convention Exhibition Rules.

At the mid-lenten meeting of the executive board the following changes were made in the rules governing the trade exhibition:

Rule 3. Exhibition space shall be designated in square feet. The charges for space shall be as follows:

Minimum charge $10.00
Flat rate, per square foot..... .25

Exhibition space shall be limited to six feet six inches above the floor, except for plants, greenhouse structures or other exhibits which necessarily extend to a greater height. Plant and cut flower exhibits may be also built up to any height authorized by the superintendent. All exhibits except as above specified which extend above six feet six inches in height shall be charged ten per cent additional on the entire space for each six inches of additional height of any part of the exhibit. All signs must be kept within the space limits. Where tables are against the walls, wall space up to six feet six inches above the floor and of the length of the table will be furnished the exhibitor without extra charge. Wall exhibits projecting above this height will be charged for the additional space, at wall space rates. Signs on the wall or elsewhere shall not extend higher than six feet six inches above the floor in any exhibit.

Wall space, without floor or table space, or when exceeding in dimensions the amount allowed with the exhibition space, shall be charged as follows:

Minimum charge $5.00
Flat rate, per square foot..... .10

Wall exhibits shall not project over one foot from the wall. Exhibitors' signs must be kept within limits of wall space.

Exhibitors must furnish at their own expense all tables, cloth and other accessories and incidentals. The superintendent will be willing, so far as his other duties will permit, to assist exhibitors in securing tables and other needed articles; but neither the superintendent nor the society will pay for or assume any financial responsibility for the purchase or placing of such articles.

All signs shall be uniform in character and be furnished by the superintendent of exhibition at cost and no other signs to be permitted.

Charges for freight, cartage or expressage will not be paid or guaranteed for exhibitors. Goods shipped charges collect will be refused unless the owner is on hand to pay the charges.

Rule 5. Add (Garden Requisites) to Section F. Change number of rule 19 to 21 and add:

Rule 19 While the society will exercise all due care to safeguard the exhibits, it will not assume any responsibility or liability for any loss or damage to any exhibit.

Rule 20. The executive committee will make such further rules as it may deem necessary for the proper conduct of the exhibition.

Attention should be called to the fact that these rules, and especially the one concerning the signs, will be strictly enforced. No signs will be permitted in the hall other than those of the uniform character which have been adopted by the board. Exhibitors should take note of this and see that their signs are ordered in advance. Copies of the complete rules and plans of the floor space may be secured of the superintendent, Mack Richmond, Baltimore, Md.

Hotel Belvidere, located on Charles and Chase streets, has been selected as the hotel headquarters for the society. The president's reception will also be held at this hotel. Applications for rooms should be sent in early, so as to secure good accommodations. The hotel is located within a few minutes' walk of the Armory, where the meetings and exhibitions are to be held.

Registration of Roses.

Public notice is hereby given that the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa., offers for registration the roses described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed names is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

MACK RICHMOND.

A good many people believe that the good sports are the good workers, and certain it is that whenever one of the bowling contingent has been designated as superintendent of the S. A. F. convention trades' display, good work always has been had. Perhaps that is why it has come to be the fashion to pick a sport to do the heavy work of the August exhibition. Mack Richmond, who is to be superintendent of the trades' display at Baltimore in August, is one of that town's tireless bowlers, and his scores always are a credit. He is with Halliday Bros., and it is said he works as hard as he plays. Already Mr. Richmond, whose address for convention work is 1813 Pulaski street, has sold a large part of the floor space in the great Armory building, where the trade will gather in August.

HARDY PERENNIALS.

In the Gorgeous June Borders.

The month of June is perhaps the most interesting of the year in the hardy herbaceous borders, for in no other month do we get such a wealth of beautiful flowers. The present season has been a rather trying one for these plants, as the marked deficiency in precipitation has dwarfed many of them and few show their true characteristics. It is, however, astonishing what a transformation a few genial showers make; the plants seem almost to double in size in a night. Frequent cultivation, to keep the surface soil loose and cut off weeds, was never more necessary than during the present season.

Some of the earliest border plants are already gone, but in any well planted borders, properly dove-tailed, other subjects growing in close proximity seem to be waiting for a little extra space to show off their beauties, and the early bloomers' places are easily filled. It is later in the season that big gaps appear and then some annuals are a necessity to cover the bare spots.

Beautiful now are the aquilegias, and how well they last in water! It is surprising that they are not more grown commercially, for what up-to-date florist or critical purchaser can resist a vase of these beautiful columbines, with their gracefully spurred flowers? The Rocky Mountain columbine, A. cærulea, with its blue and white long-spurred flowers, is perhaps the best of all. A. chrysantha, with golden flowers, has greater vigor and longevity, and is beautiful. Skinneri, yellow, with red spurs; Haylodgensis, in varying shades of blue (these are cærulea hybrids); cærulea alba, white, and Nivea grandiflora, pure white, are all lovely varieties. All these aquilegias seed freely. If you have an excellent long-spurred strain, save some of your own seed and sow when ripe, or buy seeds now and they will make nice plants for flowering next year at this season. Aquilegias are not fussy as to soil and they do well either in sun or partial shade. Even the long-spurred sorts will naturalize nicely, and all are excellent in rockeries.

Phloxes for Six Months.

The phlox family is perhaps the most valuable one among hardy perennials. From the time the dwarf subulatas come into flower in May until sharp frost ends the paniculata section, there is no break in them, and any single family which furnishes flowers for six months in the year is one which everyone should grow. P. divaricata is a beautiful variety, with pale blue flowers; a charming subject, also, for culture in pans for spring flowering. The variety Laphami has flowers of a more intense blue. Propagation of P. divaricata is easy from cuttings, as well as from division of the roots.

The suffruticosa section flowers ahead of the paniculatas, which are mostly grown. The best of the suffruticosas is Miss Lingard, flowering in New England about June 20; flowers pure white with a delicate lilac eye. If restricted to one phlox, this would be my selection. No variety propagates more readily from cuttings, especially in the fall, and for cutting or massing effects it stands ahead of all other sorts. This is also a beautiful subject for forcing. Cuttings for this purpose can be secured in plenty about the end of September, and the plants should be placed in an average temperature at night of 50 degrees in January. The paniculata section is easily propagated from cuttings in spring, and these cuttings, if well rooted now, should be planted out in beds or nursery rows six inches apart. They will carry a large head of flowers each, somewhat later than the old clumps, which helps to prolong the phlox season.

Gas Plants and Foxgloves.

Dictamnus Fraxinella and its variety alba, commonly known as gas plants, a title given on account of the plants giving off in hot weather a volatile oil which readily ignites, are among the best of perennials. They are at their best in June, and as the dark green leaves persist until late fall, there are no unsightly gaps where they are growing. They are rather slowly propagated from seed and do not become established as quickly as most of the other hardy plants. They should be transplanted as little as possible. If left undisturbed for a few years, they will make big, peony-like clumps, which are a telling feature in any garden. When planting the dictamnus, give it a generous soil, and for massing effects the two colors look particularly well together.

The digitalis or foxgloves are now coming into flower and surely no garden, however humble, is complete without a clump or two of them. They are old-fashioned, it is true, but how stately they are! In good soil it is no unusual thing to see them five to six feet high, or even more. The gloxinia-flowered type is the best, and those wanting strong plants to flower in June, 1912, should sow them soon. Old plants carried over flower beautifully. Individual specimens with ten to twelve spikes are objects worth looking at. With many these are not classed as hardy. They need a light winter protection, but a heavy one will rot them, particularly if the winter proves a mild one.

BEST WISHES FOLLOW ROWE.

As reported in The Review a few weeks ago, E. Fred Rowe, for many years connected with James Vick's Sons, of Rochester, has left his connection with that house to take a place with the McFarland Publicity Service as chief of its copy department. When Mr. Rowe arrived in Harrisburg to assume his new duties he found a pleasant remembrance from his former employers and associates in the form of a vase of beautiful American Beauty roses bearing the inscription, "Best wishes of old friends and former associates of Vick's."

Mr. Rowe was for some years the Rochester correspondent of The Review.

SPOTTED FERN FRONDS.

Enclosed you will find some fern leaves. I should like to know what causes them to be spotted and what I can do for the trouble. I water with a sprinkling can; would that cause the brown spots? E. M.

The nephrolepis fronds referred to in this query appear to be sun-scalded. The most likely cause of this is watering overhead during bright, hot weather. Possibly the house in which the plants are growing was not sufficiently ventilated at the time the watering was done. Try giving free ventilation, and water in the early morning, looking over the plants again in the afternoon, in order to water any that may dry out during the day.

Tionesta, Pa.—C. A. Anderson says the business throughout this section increases every year and that the demand has been excellent this season.

Raspeburg, Md.—John G. Kilian is preparing to enlarge his place. He had splendid success with the house built last season, cutting first a crop of mums and following these with sweet peas on one side of the house and pot plants on the other.

WHAT FLOWER DENOTES JUSTICE?

Would you please tell me what flower or flowers represent justice?

J. J. L. B.

The flower that is supposed to symbolize justice is the rudbeckia or coneflower. In this connection, however, the word "justice" appears to be nearly synonymous with "impartiality," and some writers on the subject prefer the latter word. As the genus rudbeckia includes the Golden Glow and also R. hirta, or the Black-eyed Susan, the flowers themselves are surely well known, though their significance may be almost unknown; the flowers themselves are common enough, though the quality that they typify may not be as common as might be wished.

Just why rudbeckias are emblematic of justice may be something of a conundrum, which can probably be solved as well by J. J. L. B. as by anyone else. In the so-called "language of flowers" there are many such conundrums. The rudbeckia grows in almost any kind of soil or situation, in almost any temperate climate and with almost any sort of culture; in that sense it is certainly impartial, but the same is true of some other flowers. Perhaps it is sufficient for J. J. L. B. to be assured as to the fact that the rudbeckia in some way typifies justice. If he wants more authority on the point, he might refer to the back part of the Standard dictionary, where a list of flowers and their significations will be found, under the title of "Symbolic Flowers and Gems."

The coltsfoot, or Tussilago Farfara, is said to represent the sentiment, "Justice shall be done," or "You shall have justice." Injustice, the opposite of the quality under consideration, is symbolized by Humulus Lupulus, the common hop. But here we are encountering more conundrums.

Peony Golden Harvest at Wild's.

SARCOXIE PEONIES.

Where the Industry Originated.

The present-day cut flower peony industry had its practical inception in the town of Sarcoxie, Mo. The joke-makers have rung the changes on the "show me" proposition for so long that it is becoming just a little tiresome to the Missourians. But in the case of the Sarcoxie nurserymen showing them once was enough to establish the peony as a first-class source of ready money. James B. Wild was the one who was first shown, and as he recalls the circumstance the profit in peonies was demonstrated to him by Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, to whom a few cases of early blooms had been turned over by a South Water street commission house, which had received the flowers in a car of strawberries. Mr. Wild was the organizer of the Sarcoxie strawberry industry. He arranged for the first refrigerator car which ever ran out of that town, and in one season, a few years later, as secretary of the growers' association he shipped in one year 263 carloads of strawberries. Occasionally a case would be packed with peonies, instead of berries. When these reached the Chicago wholesale florists, they sold so well that more were wanted. As with the strawberries, a small beginning soon led to great development. Now Sarcoxie ships peonies by the thousands of dozens and they go all over the country.

While there are hundreds of strawberry growers shipping from Sarcoxie, the peony business is practically all in the Wild family. There are others, but they do not count by comparison with the Wilds. Gilbert H. Wild has probably the largest acreage of peonies in the United States. His fields cover almost twenty-five acres. With him is associated his father, James B. Wild. Their stock is shipped all over the United States. This year consignments for immediate sale were made to wholesale florists in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago, though the bulk of the cut still goes to Kennicott Bros. Co., in Chicago, who store it in anticipation of the Memorial day demand. This year Gilbert H. Wild's stock in storage at Chicago, May 27, amounted to 4,720 dozens. The accompanying illustrations are prepared from photographs of Mr. Wild's fields made in the early part of May of this year.

Gilbert H. Wild cut this year not more than one-third of the blooms on that part of his stock from which blooms are taken; part of his fields are grown for the production of roots, a large business having been worked up in one and two-eyed roots for the mailing trade.

The next largest peony grower at Sarcoxie is Wild Bros. Nursery Co., which is conducted by Henry Wild and his sons. This concern has something over five acres in peonies, growing both for cut flowers and for stock for the nursery business. The cut flowers are consigned to E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, and a good part of them go into storage to be held for Decoration day.

The Frank Wild Floral Co. also has about five acres of peonies, the cut blooms of which are consigned to the J. B. Deamud Co., Chicago. Another acre of Sarcoxie peonies is grown by Mr. Schull, who also is a member of the Wild family, related through Mrs. J. B. Wild.

To northern peony growers, whose season this year was anywhere from one week to three weeks earlier than usual, it will be interesting to note that the Sarcoxie growers were nearly ten days behind. In 1910 Gilbert H. Wild cut his first peonies April 17 and the last one April 26. This year the first stock was cut April 25 and the last shipment was made May 19. The early stock realized fully as good prices as ever before, but the season at Sarcoxie was extremely dry and even before the extreme hot wave arrived the stock showed the effects of lack of moisture. When the heat came, shipping difficulties were added to the difficulty of cutting the stock in prime condition. The result was that the crop of salable blooms was reduced through a considerable loss in handling. The Sarcoxie growers did not have this year nearly so profitable a cut flower season as they had expected, but they are men of wide experience and not at all inclined to cry over spilled milk; they placed the blame entirely upon the shoulders of the weather man.

In the so-called "language of flowers" there are many such conundrums. The rudbeckia grows in almost any kind of soil or situation, in almost any temperate climate and with almost any sort of culture; in that sense it is certainly impartial, but the same is true of some other flowers. Perhaps it is sufficient for J. J. L. B. to be assured as to the fact that the rudbeckia in some way typifies justice. If he wants more authority on the point, he might refer to the back part of the Standard dictionary, where a list of flowers and their significations will be found, under the title of "Symbolic Flowers and Gems."

The coltsfoot, or Tussilago Farfara, is said to represent the sentiment, "Justice shall be done," or "You shall have justice." Injustice, the opposite of the quality under consideration, is symbolized by Humulus Lupulus, the common hop. But here we are encountering more conundrums.

Peony Golden Harvest at Wild's.

SARCOXIE PEONIES.

Where the Industry Originated.

The present-day cut flower peony industry had its practical inception in the town of Sarcoxie, Mo. The joke-makers have rung the changes on the "show me" proposition for so long that it is becoming just a little tiresome to the Missourians. But in the case of the Sarcoxie nurserymen showing them once was enough to establish the peony as a first-class source of ready money. James B. Wild was the one who was first shown, and as he recalls the circumstance the profit in peonies was demonstrated to him by Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, to whom a few cases of early blooms had been turned over by a South Water street commission house, which had received the flowers in a car of strawberries. Mr. Wild was the organizer of the Sarcoxie strawberry industry. He arranged for the first refrigerator car which ever ran out of that town, and in one season, a few years later, as secretary of the growers' association he shipped in one year 263 carloads of strawberries. Occasionally a case would be packed with peonies, instead of berries. When these reached the Chicago wholesale florists, they sold so well that more were wanted. As with the strawberries, a small beginning soon led to great development. Now Sarcoxie ships peonies by the thousands of dozens and they go all over the country.

While there are hundreds of strawberry growers shipping from Sarcoxie, the peony business is practically all in the Wild family. There are others, but they do not count by comparison with the Wilds. Gilbert H. Wild has probably the largest acreage of peonies in the United States. His fields cover almost twenty-five acres. With him is associated his father, James B. Wild. Their stock is shipped all over the United States. This year consignments for immediate sale were made to wholesale florists in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago, though the bulk of the cut still goes to Kennicott Bros. Co., in Chicago, who store it in anticipation of the Memorial day demand. This year Gilbert H. Wild's stock in storage at Chicago, May 27, amounted to 4,720 dozens. The accompanying illustrations are prepared from photographs of Mr. Wild's fields made in the early part of May of this year.

Gilbert H. Wild cut this year not more than one-third of the blooms on that part of his stock from which blooms are taken; part of his fields are grown for the production of roots, a large business having been worked up in one and two-eyed roots for the mailing trade.

The next largest peony grower at Sarcoxie is Wild Bros. Nursery Co., which is conducted by Henry Wild and his sons. This concern has something over five acres in peonies, growing both for cut flowers and for stock for the nursery business. The cut flowers are consigned to E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, and a good part of them go into storage to be held for Decoration day.

The Frank Wild Floral Co. also has about five acres of peonies, the cut blooms of which are consigned to the J. B. Deamud Co., Chicago. Another acre of Sarcoxie peonies is grown by Mr. Schull, who also is a member of the Wild family, related through Mrs. J. B. Wild.

To northern peony growers, whose season this year was anywhere from one week to three weeks earlier than usual, it will be interesting to note that the Sarcoxie growers were nearly ten days behind. In 1910 Gilbert H. Wild cut his first peonies April 17 and the last one April 26. This year the first stock was cut April 25 and the last shipment was made May 19. The early stock realized fully as good prices as ever before, but the season at Sarcoxie was extremely dry and even before the extreme hot wave arrived the stock showed the effects of lack of moisture. When the heat came, shipping difficulties were added to the difficulty of cutting the stock in prime condition. The result was that the crop of salable blooms was reduced through a considerable loss in handling. The Sarcoxie growers did not have this year nearly so profitable a cut flower season as they had expected, but they are men of wide experience and not at all inclined to cry over spilled milk; they placed the blame entirely upon the shoulders of the weather man.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Everyone seems well satisfied with Memorial day business. There were really two brisk markets: The one Saturday, May 27, caring for the out-of-town customers, especially those a long distance away, while Monday was more largely given up to the demands of Boston and suburbs. There was a striking and pleasing difference between trade at Easter and Memorial day. The latest holiday found all growers in excellent spirits, as the market had an old-time snap to it which was cheering. Memorial day easily ranks as the greatest holiday for volume and value of cut flower sales.

Roses were in good crop, but we have seen larger quantities. The weather for nearly a week before May 27 was abnormally cool and sunless, which reduced supplies. Still there was plenty to go around. Prices stiffened somewhat, especially on the pink and red varieties. The demand was, as usual, best on grades selling at $3 to $8 per hundred. Short-stemmed and medium Beauties, Richmonds, Rhea Reids and Killarneys were in big demand. Mrs. Aaron Ward also was popular. Kaiserin with long stems made up to $12 per hundred. Carnations, due to heavy local calls on growers, were not overabundant and sold at $3 to $5 per hundred, some lower and higher, the scarlets and crimsons, as usual, bringing the best money. Sweet peas made 50 cents to $1, all good flowers selling with ease. Tail ends of crops went more slowly. Lilies and callas were sold at $8 to $12 per hundred.

Some grand large-flowered gladioli, such as Mrs. F. King and Dawn, made $1.50 per dozen; others $6 to $8 per hundred. Small flowered sorts, like Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride, averaged $3 per hundred. Good ten weeks' stocks sold in big quantities at $3 per hundred; inferior grades sold lower and singles were not wanted at all. Double feverfew was not over-plentiful and sold at 50 cents per bunch. Ordinary white candytuft made $5 per thousand, but some of superior quality brought double these prices. Marguerites were quite popular at $1 and $1.50 per hundred and sold in large quantities. Antirrhinums sold quite well, especially scarlet and pink. Spiræa Japonica met with a big sale at $3, Queen Alexandra making double this price. There was an abundant supply of fine outdoor valley, which crippled the sale of the indoor article. What few tulips appeared made $4 per hundred. Bunches of deutzia, lilac, Spiræa Van Houttei and other shrubs met with a large sale. Choice flowers, such as cattleyas, long-stemmed Beauty roses and gardenias, only made a moderate sale. Asparagus Sprengeri had a heavy sale, also plumosus and adiantum.

Geraniums seem to be more popular than ever. Most of the large growers are almost cleaned out and report a satisfactory season. Salvias, petunias, pansies and other varieties were all in great demand. Hydrangeas, rambler roses and rhododendrons met with a good sale among other flowering plants. Dracæna Australis and variegated vincas were two plants much in demand.

Various Notes.

Arnold & Petros, the new and enterprising Boylston street florists, did a remarkably heavy Memorial day business. They received one order for 343 galax and laurel wreaths for the army and navy from the government, which helped to keep them busy.

Peirce Bros. did a splendid Memorial day trade. Among other flowers they had a grand lot of gladioli and heavy cuts of double feverfew, stocks, carnations, Spiræa Japonica and marguerites.

Frank T. White, the well known Holbrook florist, is mourning the death of his mother, who passed away May 24.

P. & W. O. Jahn, of East Bridgewater, had the finest Fenn carnations I noted for Memorial day, also some grand Georgia, White Enchantress and Fair Maid.

J. Newman & Sons, on Tremont street, had an immense Memorial day business, not only in natural flowers, but in artificial designs, which they featured.

A. A. Reed, of Whitman, is sending in a fine lot of Cattleya Gaskelliana. His crop of C. Mossiæ is finished. He had a heavy local trade for Memorial day.

J. M. Cohen, the popular salesman at the Boston Cooperative Flower Market, is back on duty again after a severe attack of tonsilitis, which reduced his weight twelve pounds.

William H. Tomlinson, of Dorchester, is marketing the first of his tomato crop. He had a heavy cut of candytuft for Memorial day and cleaned out geraniums, salvias and hydrangeas entirely. W. H. Carr acts as Mr. Tomlinson's salesman at the Boston Flower Exchange.

J. F. Flood, of Woburn, for Memorial day had excellent batches of pink fibrous begonias, rhododendrons and hydrangeas, which met with a ready sale May 27 and 29.

The Halifax Garden Co., through N. F. Capers, sold an immense quantity of high grade carnations for Memorial day, also stocks in large numbers and 500 bunches of mignonette. Their sweet peas are finished for the season.

Ladies' night at the Gardeners and Florists' Club meeting June 20 will, as usual, attract a large attendance. There will be an entertainment in lieu of the regular lecture and an attendance of 300 is expected.

The excessive heat May 23 and a torrential rain storm May 25 ruined many late tulips, which several specialists had been building hopes on for Memorial day. J. J. Fee and the Sutermeister estate, however, had small batches.

W. C. Bowditch, of Grove Hall, Dorchester, has had a great sale lately for his neat rambler roses, Tausendschon, Dorothy Perkins and Hiawatha, also Spiræa Queen Alexandra, of which he sold a large quantity. E. B. Cobb, of Canton, also had a fine lot of Queen Alexandra, also Willow Hill Greenhouses, West Roxbury.

H. M. Robinson & Co. far exceeded all previous Memorial day records not only in cut flowers but in galax leaves, hardy ferns, laurel and sundries. Many shipments went long distances.

Lewis E. Small, of Tewksbury, had 600 bunches of annual chrysanthemums May 27, which were eagerly bought for bouquet work, also a fine lot of Spiræa Queen Alexandra.

Among shippers of yellow marguerites in quantity at 2 Park street are E. H. Ahern, of Wellesley; W. T. Walke, of Salem, and D. J. Horrigan, of Foxboro.

W. H. Elliott had a fine holiday lot of Beauties and Kaiserin, also asparagus

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The coming of Memorial day on Tuesday of this week demonstrated its value Saturday, when shipments out of town and the natural week-end demand caused a pretty thorough clean-up of the overstocked market, although any real uplift to general prices was impossible.

The hot wave which had been devastating the west had not yet reached New York Sunday, though it was promised for the early days of this week and its continuance on arrival is assured by the weather prophet. The weather has been hot enough for comfort already, and the dry spell is prolonged until vegetation is now suffering badly and great damage must ensue if the drought is not soon broken. Many cut flowers show the influence of continuous sunshine and reach the city in an open condition that renders them unsalable. Some improvement is anticipated because of the booking of June weddings and the school commencements, and it is certain that even midsummer cannot show a greater lack of business than the month of May has shown. No such May has been recorded by the oldest veteran of the wholesale cut flower trade. Society seems to have almost deserted the city. Retailers complain of the early vanishing of their customers, many of the four hundred having gone abroad to attend the coronation.

American Beauty roses are deteriorating rapidly. Few are worthy of the name of specials. All the short-stemmed stock seeks an outlet on the street. Ten cents a bunch is the street merchant's asking price for all roses. There are few carnations of merit arriving and few get above a 2-cent top, even with the expected extra demand for Decoration day. Orchids are abundant and down to rock bottom. So are gardenias, valley and sweet peas. There is a great increase in the shipments of peonies, gladioli and irises and the stock is exceptionally fine. The south is doing its share in adding to the volume of the peony supply, which is increasing also daily from the local growers, of whom there is no limit. Everybody seems to have a lot of them this season. A dull interlude after Memorial day until the June weddings move is anticipated.

The Decoration day business proved excellent in spite of the hot wave that arrived May 29. The cemetery and out-of-town florists did a big trade. There were enormous shipments of roses and peonies. Top prices, realized only on fine stock, were about as follows: Roses, 5 cents; Beauties, 15 cents; carnations, 4 cents; peonies, 8 cents. Of course the greater part of the receipts were sold far below these rates. Orchids were in large supply and were neglected.

Various Notes.

Tuesday, May 3, over 1,000 visitors enjoyed the reception tendered the horticulturists and others by Doubleday, Page & Co., of Garden City, L. I. A special train from the big Pennsylvania Terminal building in New York was provided for the guests and an elaborate lunch followed the inspection of the firm's wonderful plant by the host of visitors. Nothing more complete in all its requirements seems possible in modern publication work. Over forty acres of ground have been purchased by the company, at a cost of $250,000. Sixteen acres are devoted to the experimental farm and much attention is devoted to the floricultural and welfare features of the place. Over 600 are employed on the great enterprise.

D. J. Mackintosh says he has no complaint to make of the season. He has purchased a summer home at Rockaway and moves there June 1 with his family.

Professor Curtis lectures Saturday, June 3, at the Botanical Gardens, Museum building, on "Plant Distribution," and June 10 Dr. Murrill lectures there on "The Royal Gardens at Kew, England."

At a benefit performance last week many flowers were used and the city papers gave credit to the following for their liberal donations: W. S. Allen, William Burns, Charles A. Dards, M. A. Bowe, Henshaw & Fenrich, M. C. Ford, H. E. Froment, Growers' Cut Flower Co., E. C. Horan, Kessler Bros., P. F. McKenney, W. S. Lee, Mr. Le Moult, Charles Millang, H. C. Reidel, George Saltford, W. F. Sheridan, Siebrecht & Siebrecht, Wadley & Smythe, S. A. Woodrow and A. L. Young & Co.

The auctions will close for the season next week, after the must successful year this department of floriculture ever has known.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will take place Monday evening, June 12, the last meeting of the season, followed June 28 by the club's annual outing. Chairman Fenrich is sending out some seductive literature and a grand day's sport is thoroughly provided for. It is necessary to let the committee know early as to attendance. The boat leaves at 9:30, giving a 2-hour sail before the noon dinner. There will be music, dancing, prizes for the ladies and children, and an attendance of over 500 is provided for and expected. The club has a membership of over 300.

The sympathy of the trade is extended Emil Le Moult in the loss of his wife. Many beautiful floral tributes attested the general regret felt in his great bereavement.

The seedsmen are still busy, the local trade continuing far beyond expectations.

Messrs. Geller, Hanfling and Cova, the latter manager of the Greek-American Florists' Supply Co., go to Europe this month.

June 10 and 11 there will be an exhibition of peonies and other seasonable flowers at the New York Botanical Garden, under the auspices of the New York Horticultural Society. F. R. Pierson is chairman of the committee and Geo. V. Nash is secretary.

High scores were as follows: Barth, 201; Chadwick, 204; Manda, 215.

OBITUARY.

Lemuel Ball.

Lemuel Ball, who was one of the widely known Philadelphians growing decorative stock for the wholesale trade, died May 24 at his home at Wissinoming, aged 65 years.

Mr. Ball was, for many years, a successful grower of choice palms, dracænas, etc. The product of his greenhouses was always considered of the most excellent quality, and his methods of conducting business most honorable. Previous to the year 1884 he was associated in business with his brother, Chas. D. Ball, doing business at the latter's present location, Holmesburg, Philadelphia. At that date the firm was dissolved. Mr. Ball was, however, too much attached to the florists' business to long continue out of it, and soon purchased property at Wissinoming, Philadelphia, erecting the present establishment. For several years thereafter he devoted his energies to the cultivation of roses and other plants for cut flowers, but later substituted palms and foliage plants. For many years he concentrated his efforts on such plants, producing only the choicest stock. His presence and his fine exhibits at the S. A. F. conventions will be missed by his many friends and by those who have long done business with him.

Mr. Ball's illness was of short duration, the physicians not considering him seriously ill until about one week previous to his death. The deceased was a member of the S. A. F., the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. He is survived by one married daughter.

Charles Armitage.

On Monday, May 22, Hitchings & Co., the greenhouse builders, were deprived, by death, of their president, Charles Armitage. He died of heart disease, at his home, 11 Irving street, Montclair, N. J. He was 65 years of age. His health had been failing for about two years, and during the last half year he had been unable to be at his place in the office. A few weeks ago an automobile in which he was riding was struck by another car and he suffered a severe shock, from the effects of which he never entirely rallied. The funeral services were held at his late residence, on Wednesday, May 24, and the interment was private.

He had been an official of the company since the death of its founder, Mr. Hitchings. He lived in New York city many years before making his home in Montclair, fourteen years ago. He was a member of the Montclair Club, the Montclair Dramatic Society and the Montclair A. C.

His son, F. A. Armitage, is connected with Hitchings & Co. as sales manager. The other surviving members of his family are his wife and four daughters.

Lloyd G. Blick.

The demise of Lloyd G. Blick, at Norfolk, Va., May 18, was recorded in The Review for May 25. Edward Reid, one of Mr. Blick's Philadelphia friends, sends the following supplementary notice, with a request for its publication:

"Lloyd G. Blick, the well-known Norfolk florist, and a most highly esteemed citizen, passed away yesterday evening at 9:20 o'clock at his home, Lindenhurst, after an illness of eight months, in the forty-sixth year of his age. Few men were blessed with a happier disposition than Mr. Blick, which made him very popular. So companionable was he, indeed, that it was a privilege to know him, and no one in the city had a wider acquaintance or larger circle of friends, each of whom will feel his demise as a personal loss.

"His kindness of nature and affability were most remarkable, and he was a man of sterling integrity, all of which built up for him a large floral trade. He took great interest in his business, made it a study in all its branches, and became an authority on floriculture.

"He was an enthusiastic fraternity man and traveled long distances in attending the national lodges. He was a member of the Elks, Eagles, Royal Arcanum, Maccabees, Society of American Florists, the Norfolk Board of Trade and the Hampton Roads Yacht Club, and was a director of the Bank of Norfolk.

"He is survived by a brother, J. W. Blick, and two sisters, Miss Lovey A. Blick, who was his companion in business, and Mrs. Rosa E. Stewart.

"The funeral occurs Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at his late residence on Avenue C, Ninth ward, Rev. R. F. Gayle, of the Cumberland Street Methodist Church, and Rev. Vernon l'Anson, D. D., of Grace Baptist Church, officiating. Interment in Elmwood. The casket will be handled by six colored men, at the request of the deceased. There will be honorary pallbearers."

John G. Forbes, Sr.

John G. Forbes, Sr., formerly in business as a grower at Auburndale, Mass., died at his home on Lexington street, Newton, Mass., May 19. The funeral services were held at his home on Sunday, May 21. The interment was at the Newton cemetery.

LILIES FOR CHRISTMAS.

Can I get Harrisii, Formosa, longiflorum or other lilies into bloom for Christmas? If so, how? Do callas flower under the same conditions?

W. D. H.

Longiflorum, Formosa and Harrisii lilies, also speciosum album and rubrum, can all be had in flower for Christmas. Usually Harrisii arrive sufficiently early to flower them on time if plenty of heat, say 65 degrees at night when well rooted and started, can be given. Formosas last season arrived quite early and some growers managed to bloom them at Christmas. This is a more variable type than Harrisii. It includes quite a variety of seedlings, but we can hardly recommend it as a desirable Christmas sort, although in January, February and March it is good.

Longiflorums arrive much too late to be flowered for Christmas; therefore, cold storage bulbs should be secured and potted about the middle of July. Keep these cool until well rooted and started, after which a steady night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees should be given. Speciosums should be potted early in July. They succeed best in a little lower temperature than the longiflorums. Callas potted early in August will flower freely by Christmas in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night. Try the new Godfrey calla, which is a marked improvement on the old C. Æthiopica.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18 1911.

The Review brings results.

THE annual Temple show was held in London May 23 to 25. The Britishers insist that this beats our Boston National Flower Show.

EXPRESS rates are high and they must eventually come down — but reduction won't amount to much until it is made illegal for a railroad to own stock in an express company.

THE United States Census Bureau now has in course of compilation the statistics of florists and nurseries collected in connection with the thirteenth census of agriculture, but the figures will not be ready for publication for some little time.

LEWIS P. LOCKE, the Minneapolis frost-proof plant box man, has a unique letterhead. It consists of four pages, the usual letterhead size. The front page is printed and used for the letter, the other three pages being printed to catalogue his line.

THE party of British horticultural traders who visited America at the time of the Boston flower show held a reunion in London May 24, during the Temple show, with a considerable attendance of others in the trade to listen to the discussion of things American.

J. A. VALENTINE, Denver, has just issued a booklet entitled "The New Home of the Park Floral Co." It is well printed and tells its story so well and in so few words that every copy sent out is pretty sure to be read through. There are, in addition to the printer's decorations, nine handsome illustrations, seven reproductions of photographs and two of water colors, the latter in colors. Such advertising efforts cannot but build up the business in the interest of which they are distributed.

HEAT HURTS BUSINESS.

The heat wave which traversed the country from west to east last week caused a loss of many thousands of dollars to the trade. The east was fortunate that the heat wave did not arrive until after the bulk of the Memorial day business had been done, but in the Mississippi valley the crest of the hot weather came just before the shipping had to be done, doing much damage to the quality of all stock and reducing its selling value. Many florists were compelled to call on wholesale markets, for the reason that their own stock was so poor that they did not wish to offer it to their customers, but the wholesale markets were in the same predicament; there was an abundance of stock, but it was so poor that it was offered only because there was nothing better. As always in such cases, carnations, usually the most popular flower, made the most trouble. Carnations simply will not ship under such conditions as prevailed. The peony came to the rescue. Not only were large quantities in cold storage at various points, but stock was brought into the market for Memorial day which ordinarily is not ready to cut until well along in June. In many cases peonies were the finest flowers available, and, if such were possible, this Memorial day has added to the popularity of the peony.

BULLETIN ON SWEET PEAS.

The first report of the coöperative work between the National Sweet Pea Society and the Horticultural Department of Cornell University is being published as a bulletin of the Cornell Experiment Station. It is just off the press and may be secured by all residents of New York state interested in sweet pea culture, and by non-residents who are members of the National Sweet Pea Society. The secretary of this society is Harry A. Bunyard, care of Arthur T. Boddington, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York city.

This first bulletin contains mainly the results of fall and spring planting tests, in addition to a thorough study of the forcing or winter-flowering type of sweet peas. The department of horticulture has been studying these types under glass for the last two seasons, and this bulletin contains the results of this study. The bulletin has been prepared by Prof. John Craig and A. C. Beal, of the department of horticulture.

These were the official temperatures in the shade in the weather man's aery; on the street level and in the greenhouses last week's temperature was far higher. It not only broke all records for heat in May, but it tells the story of the Decoration day business. The success of what otherwise would undoubtedly have been the biggest flower holiday the middle west ever has known was spoiled simply by the fact that the unprecedented heat made the stock too poor to ship with satisfaction. Orders were endless—the demand was enormous—and there was an abundance of stock, such as it was. All the factors in the least under control had been so handled as to provide the basis for a wonderful business. Only the weather was at fault.

The usual number of advance orders had been booked and the shipping began heavily as early as May 27, when the wholesalers found themselves confronted with the most difficult problem in years. Three days of midsummer heat, when temperatures ran far above 100 degrees in the greenhouses, had deprived all stock of the quality usually to be expected at the season. Carnations were more seriously affected than other flowers, but everything was soft. The wholesalers knew perfectly well that the stock could not be expected to carry long distances and arrive in first-class shape. On the other hand, to fail to ship was to impose certain disappointment upon their customers. The shipper was literally between the devil and the deep sea; whatever he did was sure to be wrong. Quite a number of the wholesalers put the proposition up to their customers by letter or by wire. The same condition disturbed the business of May 28, which had been expected to prove the big shipping day. There were immense quantities of stock in all the wholesale houses, but little of it was good enough to be shipped with confidence. The result was a demoralization never before witnessed in this market. Buyers were canceling, wholesalers were wiring that they could not ship, and wholesalers' buyers were running around from house to house trying to pick up material better than the stock standing on their own counters.

The weather turned cool May 28, the temperature falling steadily all day, and by afternoon it had reached normal, when there was an immediate improvement in conditions, but most of all an improvement in sentiment. By Monday buyers in the country had been freshly inspired and the wholesale market in Chicago was again doing big business. Of course it was too soon for the change in weather to have any appreciable effect on the quality of stock, but it gave better shipping conditions and it gave everyone fresh courage. The shipping on the eve of Memorial day was the heaviest ever known in this market for so late an hour.

There was just one trouble with the Memorial day business—the weather. It was inevitable that stock should ship poorly. How could it be otherwise? Perfectly fresh flowers, as good as there were, set on a wholesaler's counter would deteriorate so rapidly that one could almost see them going back. The torridity seemed to be general all over the Mississippi valley and stock could not be expected to ship as it usually does. Complaints were natural, but every buyer who was disappointed should bear in mind that the wholesaler had only two choices: he could send the best there was, or he could throw the order down. There was nothing else to do.

Under the conditions it is useless to discuss supply of the various items. There were great quantities of all kinds of flowers, but really good stock was so scarce that it hardly was to be obtained. While the average prices were far below what they have been for any recent Memorial day, the little good stock commanded a premium. The waste was enormous, but the stock that was good enough to be usable finally cleaned up in fair shape.

The peony was the best flower of the season. The supply was much heavier than ever before, largely because the local crop was in, something which has not happened since the peony became an important factor. Thousands of dozens of peonies were lost, but on the other hand the best stock realized $8 per hundred, though the bulk of the receipts was sold at $3 to $5. Once more it was demonstrated that strictly fancy peonies are good property when low grade stuff is unsalable. By no means all of the receipts were sold, but the season now is where it usually is at the middle of June, so that stock which has keeping quality is still expected to realize something for the producers.

There are now large supplies in all lines and the quality has been toned up. Demand is fair and a good June is looked for. There is an abundance of the June specialties: Cattleyas, valley, lilies, Beauties, Killarneys and sweet peas, though the latter show the effects of the heat rather more than any other flower.

May Business.

May affords an unwelcome contrast to the general course of events in this market. Business has increased almost uninterruptedly for years, each month showing a larger volume than the same month in any preceding year. But in May there was a setback. The supply of stock was abnormally large, quality was unusually poor and demand was extremely slack, all because the weather throughout the month was much warmer than it ever has been before since cut flowers have been largely dealt in. There were high hopes that Memorial day, which has been rapidly increasing in importance in recent years, would give a volume of business that would offset the poor record of the rest of the month, but, on the contrary, the heat wave May 25 to 27 made the last week of the month, by comparison with last year, the poorest of all. Practically everyone handled more stock in May than in any other thirty days ever experienced, but the general result was less money than in May of last year.

shipping and selling of peonies. Mr. Wild comes to Chicago during Memorial day week each year. He says that May 27 there were in cold storage at least twice as many peonies as on the same day in 1910. He looked over the stock with care each time.

S. R. Lundy, of San Francisco, is now the representative of the A. L. Randall Co. on the Pacific coast. Mr. Lundy has for some years been with W. A. Manda and is known to practically everyone in the business along the Pacific.

The E. C. Amling Co. has set on its counter a handsome glass case containing a vase of cattleyas, a reminder of the stock in the ice-box.

Harry Manheim is well pleased with the Memorial day of Hoerber Bros. He says buyers seemed to understand the situation and there was only one complaint.

N. J. Wietor says the hot wave brought a veritable plague of thrips upon the growers. Wietor Bros. use Tobak-ine for the pest and after a few days' fight got the houses clear again.

Kyle & Foerster report that the big field of peonies at Klehm's Nurseries, Arlington Heights, will give its principal cut the latter part of this week. Only small quantities were cut for Memorial day.

C. W. McKellar is much improved by his sojourn at Hot Springs. He feels that the treatment there has freed him from the troubles he has experienced since the blood poisoning of last winter.

D. E. Freres has his new ice-box installed and in operation. It is the box Vaughan & Sperry used while in the Flower Growers' Market, and always was an exceptionally good one.

Tim Matchen, of Peter Reinberg's, says that he notified many of their customers that carnations were too soft to ship with safety, but that in almost every instance a wire came back: "Ship anyway; must have stock."

Fred Liebermann returned to his old position with Vaughan & Sperry to help out during the Memorial day rush, leaving Mrs. Liebermann to look after their retail store.

William Dittman, New Castle, Ind., is again shipping Beauties to Percy Jones. Mrs. Dittman was in town last week.

C. M. Dickinson and several assistants at E. H. Hunt's spent three days and nights last week in a cold storage warehouse, working on peonies.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. has its new ice-box in operation in the new store at 30 East Randolph street. It is one of the deepest boxes in the market.

Peter Risch, of Weiland & Risch, calls attention to the fact that last year firing was continued uninterruptedly to June 12. It explains a lot of differences in the market conditions.

May 29 John Kruchten received ninety-three big corrugated fiber-board boxes of peonies from the Riverbank Greenhouses, Batavia, Ill. The entire shipment had to be rebunched to be salable.

To the Trade: Realizing that the unprecedented heat May 25 to 29 would impair the carrying quality of all flowers, we took every possible precaution to have our stock go out in good condition. Our Peonies were taken direct to cold storage, there sorted, every bunch inspected, rewrapped, packed and shipped, all in a temperature of 40 degrees—no cartage to and from the store, no exposure to the heat while in our hands. This is an example of Hunt's methods—we try to meet conditions as they arise.

Customers at Zech & Mann's noted a new hand on Memorial day, but those who investigated found it was Matt Mann minus his moustache.

The Chicago Carnation Co. began cutting its big crop of peonies at Joliet during last week's heat wave.

At J. A. Budlong's, Phil Schupp reports having made Memorial day shipments to a customer at Baker City, Ore., who had been well pleased with the stock received at Easter.

Bassett & Washburn cut peonies at their field at Hinsdale for Memorial day, the first time on record.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., as usual, fed its staff of workers at the Perfecto during the Memorial day rush. It is the practice of the firm to set a special table for the store crew, reinforced by men from the greenhouses.

It has been decided that the Florists' Club will postpone its departure to Milwaukee this evening, June 1, till the 5:30 car from Evanston. It was found that many who wanted to go could not leave earlier. As this gives only a brief stay in Milwaukee, it is feared the party will not be a large one.

E. E. Pieser says that if the weather had not broken records, Kennicott Bros. Co. would have done so for Memorial day.

W. E. Lynch Floral Co. is busy planting asters this week, also seven acres of cabbage! Construction on the greenhouses will begin shortly.

W. W. Randall was in a wreck on the Illinois Central, between Galena and Dubuque, last week. While the train was going at high speed the driving rods on the locomotive both broke, practically demolishing the engine. Mr. Randall was in the next car back.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market steadily improved until Memorial day, under the influence of increased social activity.

The conditions surrounding Memorial day business were decidedly mixed. First and foremost, the weather was extraordinarily hot, bringing in an enormous crop of flowers. Then, it was dry; so dry that the outdoor flowers were affected. Lastly, and this is a favorable condition, it was beautifully clear, just the kind of weather when flowers seem desirable. The result of these conditions was a too large quantity of inferior flowers that brought little, a moderate quantity of superior flowers that brought fair prices, and an exceedingly small quantity of fine flowers that brought really excellent prices. The demand is even more difficult to describe than the supply. The fashionable florists in and out of town do not want flowers on Memorial day to any extent; the suburban florists do want quantity, particularly those near the large cemeteries, while the florists in and about the battle towns occupy the foremost position at this time. For them the finest Festiva maxima are selected, and the finest of many other varieties of peonies, and other showy flowers. The prices realized Memorial day are rather lower on peonies than in preceding years. The popular price is from $40 to $60 per thousand for select stock, with $8 to $10 per hundred for extra fine stock. Select roses brought $4, with $6 per hundred asked for fancies, occasionally $8. Carnations are in shorter supply than either roses or peonies, colored carnations being at times quite scarce; $30 to $40 per thousand was the price, with $5 per hundred reached on a very, very few. These prices all refer to good flowers, no poor or open stock included.

With these flowers the bulk of the Memorial day business was done, the others taking an unimportant part. While it is too soon to sum up yet, it is probable that an increase over preceding years will be shown in the total business for the holiday, while prices, generally speaking, are lower. An exception may be noted in Beauties that brought from $3 to $4 per dozen, but this is under the influence of buying for social festivities coincident with but not dependent on Memorial day.

C. Eisele's Place.

C. Eisele is one of the oldest and best known Philadelphia florists. He represents the old school in a way in which I wish it were always represented, for it takes no common ability to do business with the old stock in these modern days.

I mean by this that Mr. Eisele's stock comprises many of those rare and highly prized old-fashioned flowers that made up the gardens of some years ago and that are so often sought in vain today. It does not seem half so difficult for a grower to devote his place to a few varieties of carnations or roses, or to chrysanthemums, Christmas and Easter plants, as it does to devote it to a miscellaneous collection and make it pay. Mr. Eisele does this and the florists of the country owe him a vote of thanks as well as their hearty support. When they want peppermint geraniums, for instance, or Swainsona alba, would they find them in the vast ranges of the specialists? Not a bit of it. They would find both these plants and many others in Mr. Eisele's range. They would find something more than this, for the place is presided over by a genial former collector of rare plants, whose whole interest and personality are thrown into his work and with whom an hour seems but a few minutes when he is talking of his pets.

The place occupied by Mr. Eisele in the commercial world of plants is strikingly similar to the position occupied by ex-Governor Stuart in the commercial world of books. When you want a new book, just published, or a standard work that is in everyday demand, you go to one or other of the large book stores, but when you want a rare gem, once prized but now seldom seen, you go to Leary's Book Store, owned and operated by Edwin H. Stuart, lately governor of Pennsylvania, and there you are pretty sure to find it. So it is with Mr. Eisele; he has the rare old plant gems and he depends on them and on the florists all over the country to carry on his business successfully. Mr. Eisele is exceedingly busy shipping his plants to many distant points.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

STYLISH BASKETS

FOR COMMENCEMENTS AND WEDDINGS

There is a great improvement in the BASKETS we are offering for June weddings and for school and college commencements.

Less attention used to be paid to the BASKET than to its contents; almost anything would do, because the flowers would look well—that is how people put it.

Now a handsome BASKET is indispensable. We do not mean an expensive basket, but one that has style, beautiful proportions, graceful lines, shapely handle and is neat and durable.

Our BASKETS are recognized as the standard all over the country. If you have not already used them, we would like you to give us a trial order; if you are using them, which is most likely, please look over your stock when you read this and see that you have enough to supply your June business, and if you haven't let us know and we will rush them to you.

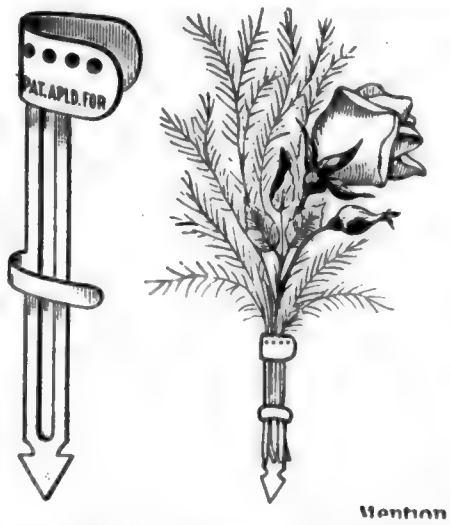
They went first to Wyndmoor, where they were hospitably received by John Burton. Mrs. Burton entertained the party at luncheon and they visited the three Burton places—the father's and those of the two sons, Alfred and George. Temperature, not so easily controlled on that fierce day, soil, varieties, culture—in fact, everything pertaining to the profession of rose growing, with a little horticultural construction, chemistry and so forth added, was discussed by the professor and the rose growers for the benefit of the students.



Then came a visit to the establishment of Myers & Samtman, where the large houses of Beauties, Hilda and My Maryland were inspected. Frank P. Myers explained that his place should have been visited first, as they were only amateur rose growers, and he supported this statement by pointing out that the roses were all in benches, which is the way in which everyone learns to grow them, whereas those of all the other rose growers around Philadelphia are in solid beds.

Roslyn came next, and under the guidance of Mr. Myers the places of Adolph Farenwald, Victor Groshens and Edward Towill were visited. The new president of the American Rose Society here joined the party and they went to North Wales to see the vast glass acreage of the Florex Gardens, with the immense quantities of roses, carnations and tomatoes. The day was full of interest for all and will, let us hope, prove an inspiration to these horticulturists to do even greater things.

The Main-Line Flower Show.

A flower show was held in the casino of the Merion Cricket Club at Haverford Saturday, May 27, under the auspices of the Gardeners' and the Weeders' Clubs, two social organizations of the smart set. The show brought out an excellent list of exhibits from the gardeners and amateurs interested.

The most effective exhibits were handle baskets of peonies beautifully arranged; one of pure white peonies in a white enameled basket, finished with a white and green striped satin ribbon; another of pink peonies in basket to match, and another of shrubs in a green basket. Oriental poppies lent effectiveness, with their handsome scarlet coloring. A bowl of water lilies was much admired.

The most effective plants were a geranium, fuchsia and heliotrope trained in umbrella form and well flowered.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. exhibited 100 varieties of roses, many of them novelties, from their collection at Riverton. The exhibit was in charge of John S. Hay. The Henry F. Michell Co. also made a handsome show of its specialties to aid the gardeners and amateurs in what would be, for them, an unequal struggle with insect pests and unproductive soil. The Morris Nursery Co. made a handsome exhibit of evergreens. The decorative groups were fine. Among the celebrities present were J. Otto Thilow and David Rust.

It has been generally stated that the children of the Sunday and public schools, who have been industriously working under the auspices of these clubs, would make their exhibits at this show. For their benefit the Henry F. Michell Co. contributed 2,500 packages of seed. The Henry A. Dreer Co. had also made a generous contribution to encourage the children's love for gardening, but the show was too early for the youthful exhibitors, who will have to hoe and weed and, as it looks now, water industriously for some time to come. One dish of radishes there was, as an appetizer, so to speak.

Various Notes.

Lemuel Ball, well known palm grower of Wissinoming, died on the evening of May 24. His funeral took place May 27. Mr. Ball was a brother of Charles D. Ball, of Holmesburg.

Charles E. Lehman, of Stokes Bros. Co., has been largely instrumental in increasing the popularity of cypress among the florists and mushroom growers of this vicinity.

Robert Shoch, of M. Rice & Co., has returned from a good southern trip.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. will close at 1 p. m. Saturdays in June, July and August.

Robert A. Craig expects to be able to offer some of the fancy dracænas in quantity this season.

Paul J. Klingsborn, of Berger Bros., says that Princeton is without doubt the best pink rose in the market today.

Charles E. Meehan returned May 29, much benefited by his trip to Ocean City.

The weather has been unusually favorable for the cemetery florists. Clear weather for a week and Memorial day superb, they did a big business.

John C. Gracey says that Memorial day was quiet uptown. Mr. Gracey is a leader there, with his two fine stores.

The business of the late Lemuel Ball will be continued. James Wade will grow the stock, as before, while Mr. Ball's brother-in-law will attend to the business.

NARCISSI NOT FLOWERING.

Enclosed you will find a narcissus bulb. Quite a large patch of these recently came to my notice. Every year the bulbs make a good growth and form buds, but the buds never open. They dry up, as you will see by the enclosed bulb. Can you explain the cause and give a remedy?

G. H. H.

The bulb resembles the old poeticus, but is probably one of the old double gardenia-scented variety, N. alba plena odorata, the latest of the narcissi to bloom and valuable where it can be successfully flowered. There are two probable causes of the blighting of the buds: First, overcrowding of the bulbs; second, a deficiency of moisture. All the stronger growing narcissi of the Burbidgei, poeticus and Leedsii types, if in good ground, should be lifted and replanted every third or fourth year. Lift them after the foliage has matured and replant them about the end of October. N. alba plena odorata is an erratic variety and few growers succeed in flowering it satisfactorily. I find it does best in low, rather moist ground. In dry ground nine-tenths of the buds fail to open. C. W.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Decoration day business, so far, is all that is ever expected of it and then some. If there are some complaints from out-of-town people about bad flowers, it is not surprising, for if a box remains in the sun for any length of time, the stock in it is likely to be cooked. At this date, May 27, the temperature continues to ride in the 90's, getting as high as 99 degrees, with no rain. This is hard on carnations in the field. Most of the growers were delayed about two weeks in getting their plants out, on account of rain, and there has been no rain since planting.

Plantsmen were never rushed harder and it is safe to say there never was a season when the general planting was so nearly completed before June 1. It would not be wise to say that there had been any increase in the plant trade, but at least it seemed as good as last year.

Peonies, syringas and some outside roses were in bloom for Decoration day.

GARY WANTS A GREENHOUSE

Here is a substantial city of 25,000, founded by the big United States Steel Corporation and

BUILT TO STAY

There is no greenhouse within several miles, yet we know there is a big demand here for flowers and plants now brought from Chicago.

We stand ready to help a first-class florist who has a little capital and is looking for a safe, sure and profitable investment. To such a man we will sell on especially easy terms a suitable tract of land and will use our influence to help him work up a good business. The profits will easily pay for the land and houses in a few years, as the factories and mills now under construction and planned will require a city of 150 000 or more people in the next ten years.

A knowledge of landscape gardening is desirable, as much of this work is done here and at present we have to send to Chicago for the men.

If you are interested and can give good references WRITE US TODAY.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

While the east has been suffering with the heat, we have been enjoying ideal May weather, with the exception of a little wind. The sun has been extremely hot at times, but in the shade there is always a cool breeze from the snow-topped mountains, which counteracts the heat of the sun and makes the weather delightful.

All stock is in fine shape, and everyone is looking forward to a good Memorial day trade. A large proportion of the cut flower supply is shipped to small towns in Colorado, Wyoming, western Kansas and Nebraska, and down into New Mexico. On Sunday, May 28, everyone was busy with shipping orders. There was a great shortage of carnations, but many orders did not specify what was preferred, simply calling for a box of cut flowers ranging in

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

QUITE a few bulb importers, who under protest paid duty at $2.50 per thousand on hyacinths the last two seasons, have handsome rebates coming from the government.

JAMES GOOD & Co., Ashland, Wis., have planted sixty-five acres of peas, for a seed crop, just outside that town. Senator Sanborn was up from Madison to supervise the planting.

JAMES CURRIE, as forecast in this column some weeks ago, has been appointed a member of the park board at Milwaukee. So thoroughly Socialistic is the city administration that the newspapers there, in discussing the appointment, thought it necessary to comment on the fact that Mr. Currie is not a Socialist.

STRESS of competition has carried the prices of tulip mixtures to the point where the duty of $1 per thousand gives the government more money than would have been paid under the old ad valorem rate of twenty-five per cent. And on some of the most largely sold named bedding and florists' varieties the dollar duty amounts to as much as would have been paid were the old rate still in force.

HENRY METTE, Quedlinburg, has found the 2-cent letter rate to Germany not the most satisfactory arrangement and advises that "To secure a prompt arrival of their orders, I would recommend my esteemed friends and customers to use a 5-cent stamp for their letters; as letters franked with a 2-cent stamp are forwarded only by a limited number of steamers and, therefore, travel about twice the time as those franked with a 5-cent stamp."

F. A. FORBES, of Forbes' Seed Store, says that a larger acreage than usual has been planted to onions in the locality of Plymouth, Ind., this spring. Many growers have had considerable acreage eaten up by insects of some kind. Some are replanting, some planting cabbage, some carrot, some let the weeds take it. Some growers had "blow outs" just before the splendid rain of May 22. One lost nine teen acres in that way. He replants a portion. Rain was much needed and will prove a great help.

They are perfect mixtures and sound in grain and a pleasure to handle."

C. H. KENNERLY, of Kennerly's Seed Store, Palatka, Fla., has written and published a 140-page book, "Facts and Figures, or the A. B. C. of Florida Trucking." He doesn't think it will hurt the sale of Kennerly's seeds and he won't lose any money on it at $1 a copy.

THIS has been a season during which the older mail order seed houses have, as a rule, broken no records, though they have, in general, rolled up an excellent season's total of sales. On the other hand, the newer seed houses, especially those in the south, southwest and west, have gone ahead rather faster than ever before. Planters would rather buy seeds near home, and do so as soon as they gain confidence in the local seed dealers equal to that the old houses have established by years of conscientious dealing.

THE winter in Denmark was mild and not moist, so that the overwintering of cabbages was extraordinarily good, with only a small percentage of death heads: five to ten per cent of the late cabbage and thirty-five per cent of the early cabbage, report Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., of Copenhagen. The heads started growth early, but severe frost with storms April 5, 6 and 7 somewhat injured the new shoots and it is not easy to say to what extent this late winter will affect the further growing, but as for the present outlook (May 6) the crop is prosperous.

MAY has given the mail-order seed houses a splendid run of business, generally much above the records of other years.

SEED GROWING IN DENMARK.

Carlos Jensen, manager of the export department for L. Daehnfeldt, Odense, Denmark, recently has visited a number of seed growers in the United States and has shown a number of interesting photographs illustrating the methods and extent of the Danish seed growing industry. One of his pictures is reproduced on this page. The view is in a field of fifty-five acres of Cabbage Danish Ball Head Amager. The plants marked with the stakes are those selected for stock seed. The Danish growers are, from all accounts, unremitting in their care to preserve

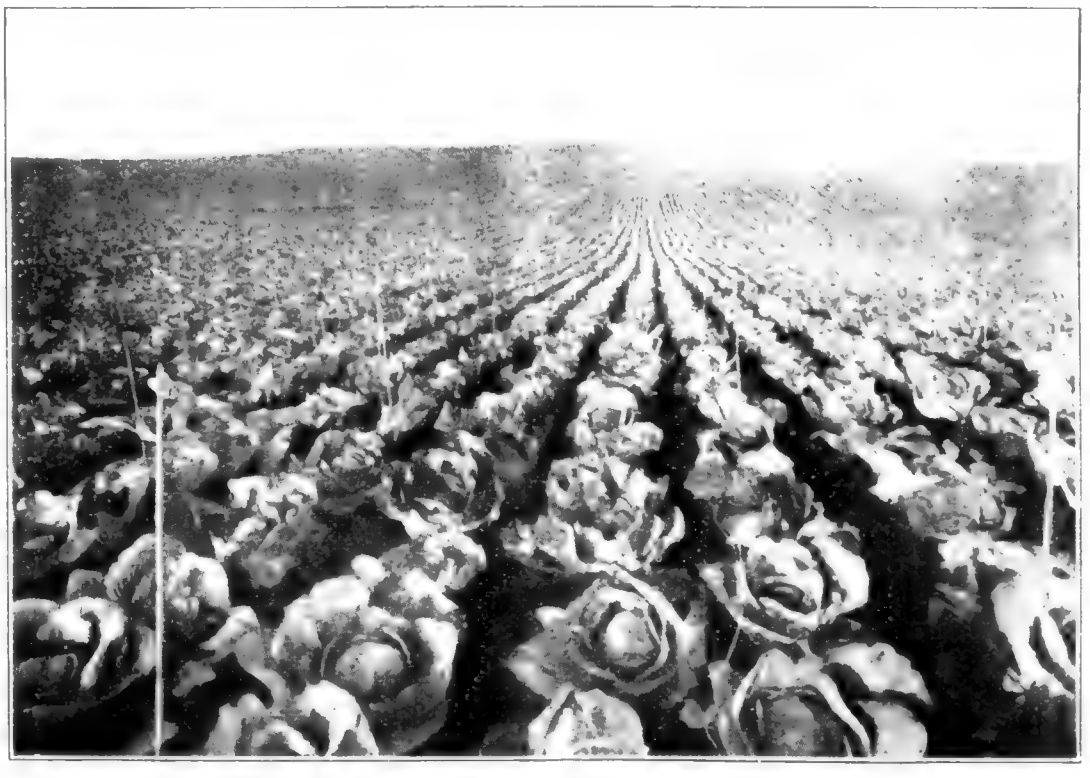
C. H. KENNERLY, of Kennerly's Seed Store, Palatka, Fla., has written and published a 140-page book, "Facts and Figures, or the A. B. C. of Florida Trucking." He doesn't think it will hurt the sale of Kennerly's seeds and he won't lose any money on it at $1 a copy.



THIS has been a season during which the older mail order seed houses have, as a rule, broken no records, though they have, in general, rolled up an excellent season's total of sales. On the other hand, the newer seed houses, especially those in the south, southwest and west, have gone ahead rather faster than ever before. Planters would rather buy seeds near home, and do so as soon as they gain confidence in the local seed dealers equal to that the old houses have established by years of conscientious dealing.

THE winter in Denmark was mild and not moist, so that the overwintering of cabbages was extraordinarily good, with only a small percentage of death heads: five to ten per cent of the late cabbage and thirty-five per cent of the early cabbage, report Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., of Copenhagen. The heads started growth early, but severe frost with storms April 5, 6 and 7 somewhat injured the new shoots and it is not easy to say to what extent this late winter will affect the further growing, but as for the present outlook (May 6) the crop is prosperous.

MAY has given the mail-order seed houses a splendid run of business, generally much above the records of other years.

SEED GROWING IN DENMARK.

Carlos Jensen, manager of the export department for L. Daehnfeldt, Odense, Denmark, recently has visited a number of seed growers in the United States and has shown a number of interesting photographs illustrating the methods and extent of the Danish seed growing industry. One of his pictures is reproduced on this page. The view is in a field of fifty-five acres of Cabbage Danish Ball Head Amager. The plants marked with the stakes are those selected for stock seed. The Danish growers are, from all accounts, unremitting in their care to preserve

THE SEASON IN GERMANY.

The German seed growers are having no respite from the unfavorable weather conditions which have hampered their operations for so long a time. In the Erfurt district the spring of the present year has been one of the driest on record, though several recent seasons have been marked by a lack of moisture. Planting has been prosecuted with difficulty because of the dryness of the soil. On the whole, the crops are generally backward, and the prospect more mixed than usual at this date. One of the results of the dryness and heat has been an unparalleled attack by vermin, the most vigorous measures being necessary this year to save the plants. The root crops were seriously attacked, and those carrots of the finer garden kinds suffered severely. The field kinds suffered less, but turnips, parsnips and kohl-rabi were badly affected. Beet came off somewhat better and the brassicas, while not unscathed, promise well. Cauliflowers are quite up to the average.

They are extremely low-budded on the collar of the roots, which makes SUCKERING PRACTICALLY IMPOSSIBLE.

In 2-year-old, strong field-grown plants, we have in stock for Fall 1911-Spring 1912 delivery such varieties as American Pillar, Leuchtfeuer, Lyon Rose, Jessie, Prince de Bulgarie, Lady Ashtown, Mme. Ravery, Mme. Car. Testout, Kaiserin Aug. Victoria, Gruss an Teplitz, Druschki, Pharisaer, etc., etc.

The Dog Briar is the very best stock for out-of-door roses. They outlive any other stock, and the color of flowers is more brilliant and true. Roses on this stock are far superior to those grown on own roots—Manetti, Rugosa, Multiflora, Sweet Briar.

At Quedlinburg the winter also was mild and April 2 there came a heat wave, followed a few days later by extreme cold, frost doing a great deal of harm to growing seed crops, biennials and perennials, as well as early sown annuals. Some fields of the latter were entirely destroyed by the frost and had to be resown. The weather in this district also has been extremely dry, making planting unusually difficult and many of the seeds slow to germinate. On the whole, the Quedlinburg growers consider their start this year one of the poorest in many seasons. Business in both vegetable and flower seeds this season was unusually good.

EASTERN PEAS ARE LATE.

An authority in the canning trade said the other day: "Interest now centers in the pea situation, which is somewhat unusual. The dry weather prevailing in most of the producing sections has retarded the development of crops and put the packing season back a week or more. The reports from Delaware and the eastern shore are especially doleful. According to these the vines are not over a few inches high and are already in bloom, so that if rain does not come soon the canners are afraid they will not get much more than half of last season's pack. Few of the prominent southern packers have yet made quotations, and they are not anxious to secure orders until they get a better line on their probable pack. Reports from Indiana are not reassuring for those buyers who looked for early deliveries from that quarter, as, according to all accounts, the crop there is at least a week later than usual. Not much is being said with reference to Wisconsin prospects, but the inference is that they are no worse than usual at this time of the year, or, in other words, that an average pack may be expected."

AUTOS AID CANNERS.

The canners find the automobile makes possible a radical change in methods, greatly increasing their radius of operations. In discussing the subject, George G. Bailey, of Rome, N. Y., formerly president of the National Canners' Association, said:

"As you know, one of the chief obstacles the canner always has faced in maintaining a sufficient output has been his ability to grow enough raw material near enough to the factory to bring it from the field, prepare it and get it into the cookers while fresh and crisp. With farmers dependent on horse-drawn wagons for hauling their produce to the canneries, stuff would wilt and be useless for canning purposes if grown more than three or four miles from the plant. It has meant restricted acreage on the one side or supplementary plants in scattered centers as the alternative.

"Someone suggested that we buy a truck with large body, capable of carrying large loads of peas and beans, vines and all, just as mowed from the field, to the threshers. We were surprised at the results. In fact, our range of producing material was so extended that we were justified in setting up our threshers in various growing centers, and were able to rush the cleaned vegetables to the canneries before they had a chance to wither. Today we have increased the growing radius from about five miles to fifteen miles from our plant.

"I have made figures on the cost and find that the economies of trucks are very striking, even though we have to lay them up idle during several months in the winter. For our purposes, however, the truck service is not to be measured solely by the cash economies but by service, and we are able to do more business and produce more and better goods in our canneries than would have been possible by the use of horse trucks or farmers' wagons. The automobile offers canners an immense opportunity, in my opinion."

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There is little change of market conditions to report for this week. The demand was a little better, but the stock was poor. There is an abundance of carnations and the local trade is buying only the best grades. The same can be said of roses and sweet peas. The extremely hot weather had a bad effect on all consignments shipped in. Peonies are still plentiful; so are lilies and valley.

The approach of Memorial day should clean up pretty well all the surplus stock on hand. Prices will probably go up a little, but not much. After this comes school graduations and June weddings, and we all expect some good business. After June 15, not much of

Just as sure as little apples, some growers could make more money doing general housework than growing lily bulbs. They persist upon buying the cheapest they can and expect the best results. There is as much difference in lily bulbs as between a buzzard and a bird of paradise. It always pays to buy the best, and the best produced, of course, are not the cheapest. Grow them well—take care of them—they want plenty of moisture—and remember that liquid manure is to lilies what yeast is to bread—they must have it to be good. There is no better flower than a lily for funeral work and nothing more appropriate—your business requires them all the year around. Various Notes.

John G. Esler, secretary of the Florists' Hail Association, Saddle River, N. J., was a recent visitor. In company with J. F. Ammann, one of the directors of the association, he visited several of the large places that lost heavily in the recent hail storm. Quite a number who were without insurance made application for membership.

S. S. Seligman was here last week in the interest of his firm, Wertheimer Bros. He had a good run of business.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, is here this week, calling on the trade. He says business has been good in his line since starting out on his present trip.

The members of the Retail Florists' Association should not forget to attend an important meeting of the association on Monday night, June 5, at 8 o'clock.

Frank Weber has his hands full these days getting everything in readiness for the annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen, to meet in convention here June 14 to 16, at the Southern hotel. He is being assisted by all the local nurserymen.

Albert Scheidegger, of Kirkwood, is at work making alterations in his greenhouses and heating system. In the midst of his work he suffered a bad fall, which kept him back a few days last week.

The Bentzen Floral Co. had an exceptionally big season in bedding plants at the Grand avenue store. This firm has had an exceedingly busy week in funeral work. The season for planting out is now about over.

Charles Wors has the concessions for the sale of cut flowers at Delmar Garden and West End Heights park.

On Sunday, June 4, will be held the first Sunday opening this year of Shaw's Garden. Superintendent H. C. Irish has his large force at work putting things in good shape and, weather permitting, a record attendance is looked for. This and the first Sunday in September are the two events the public looks forward to with delight.

John Barnard is again with the firm of Grimm & Gorly, at 702 Washington avenue, in the design department. Henry Kahrs is no longer connected with the firm.

House of Purity Freesia, as grown for the Stumpp & Walter Co.

PURITY

The best and most salable Freesia in the American and European markets. Our stock of this now popular and famous Freesia is the largest in this country. We have bulbs that have been grown under glass (the illustration shows one of our houses), also bulbs grown by the originator, R. Fischer. Both of these stocks are the true Purity stock, from which we receive our bulbs. The very highest quality is guaranteed. The demand for this variety in all the wholesale markets is persistent and universal. Its popularity is undiminished; practically it has no competitor.

Clair Floral Co., all had a great spring business in planting out. Mr. Emunds has a new canna, like King Humbert, which seems to be one of the best today.

On a recent visit to Frank Fillmore's place, the first one we met was Frank the Fourth, with his grandpa's rubber boots on and hose in hand, watering a bench of geraniums. The little lad is only a few years old and is considered the youngest working florist of today.

The trustees of the Florists' Club, Messrs. Guy, Bentzen and Ostertag, will hold a meeting this week to decide as to the place for the annual picnic for florists and their friends.

CUT FLOWERS

SPECIALTIES

Here are the things every florist needs

ORCHIDS-CATTLEYAS

Nowadays your best customers will not be satisfied unless you use Orchids in your good work—especially for Corsages and in Wedding and Commencement work. You can get the finest Cattleyas of us. For June we have arranged for a specially large supply of the very finest quality of blooms. It is good policy to place all orders a few days in advance if possible, no matter what stock is wanted, but we seldom need notice on Cattleyas—practically always have fine stock on hand.

We can supply White Orchids, or any special variety in season on a few days' notice.

KILLARNEYS

Anticipating the heavy June demand for fine Roses, we arranged for a special crop of Killarneys, white and pink. These are now beginning to come in and are much superior to the stock now being cut from plants that were in crop in the hot weather of May. Order of us if you want the best color, substance, stem, foliage—our June Killarneys are strictly fine.

BEAUTIES

Summer Beauties always are a specialty with us—and the cut from the summer houses is coming in, just in time for the weddings and school closings. You will find these Beauties better than anything cut from plants that have been forced all winter. Glad to have your orders. We can supply practically any quantity without notice. Just give us time to pack the boxes.

FANCY VALLEY

Call on us at any time; we always have it. No limit to our ability to supply—the best there is.

BUTTERFLY SWEET PEAS

There is no finer stock than these—they make a hit wherever used; long stems, large wavy flowers; exquisite in wedding bouquets or other fine work. Any color.

DAISIES, Yellow and White

If these are to be had on this market, we have them, but the demand is such at this season that frequently a whole day's receipts is ordered up in advance.

FANCY LILIES

You will need these for some of your June decorations. We can supply fine stock in quantity at low prices.

CARNATIONS

Many large buyers who have years of experience with flowers from this market say they prefer our Carnations to all others because of the superior shipping and keeping quality of our stock. If you are buying elsewhere and the stock is not reaching you in the best shape, try us. Try us anyway, just to compare.

FANCY GREENS

The Fancy Greens are here: Adiantum, 75c to $1.00; Croweanum, $1.00 to $1.50 per 100, extra long fine stock.

We have large daily receipts of Asparagus Plumosus Strings and can supply any quantity on a few days' notice, but the supply is so generally short in the market that advance orders are desirable.

ALWAYS THE BEST HARDY CUT FERNS.

THE FINE

The home-grown Peonies are now coming in. These local Peonies are not only the best cut flower as to reach each buyer in the best possible condition immediate use. We always have had fine Peonies stock, $2.00 to $4.00 per 100; fancy, $5.00 to

FLORISTS' SUPPLIES

BASKETS FOR JUNE

We carry an immense stock of Baskets, including, of course, all the styles, shapes and colors that are needed for June work—weddings and commencements. The stock is far too large to permit us to show cuts or quote prices in an advertisement. Suffice it to say that we have every style you use and that our prices are as low, or lower, than others ask. None can undersell us without taking a loss. Order Baskets of us. We ship subject to approval. If any Basket does not come up to your ideas as to quality, style or price, you are to ship it back to us at once. Could anything more clearly show our confidence in our goods?

RIBBONS AND CHIFFONS

We are doing an enormous business in these—handling the output of several of the best mills in America as well as importing the best European specialties direct from the makers in France. Our Ribbon business is so large we can sell to the Trade at the prices the mills charge smaller jobbers for equal quality. If anyone offers you a price below ours, watch the quality—either the quality is inferior or the seller is taking a loss.

We sell Ribbons and Chiffons by mail and guarantee satisfaction. Just tell us what colors, widths and qualities you need (or mention the prices you want to pay) and we ship at once. We have absolutely everything. Perfect matches for every flower color. Ribbons at prices from 25c to $3.50 per bolt; Chiffons from 2½c to 12½c per yard.

8-INCH FANCY NETTING

Here is a new 8-in. fancy Netting or Chiffon that is specially useful for June work. Heavy double edge, 12c per yd. Order a few pieces and you will be sure to ask for our special quotation on quantities.

BRIDAL SCARFS

Here is a new Chiffon Bridal Scarf that wherever once used always has brought reorders. Eight feet long and just the right width for the work. Price, $1.25 each. Special prices in dozen lots.

SATIN EDGE GAUZE RIBBON

Here is an article that you can afford to buy in quantity. You will use lots of these widths for your June work but you also need them every day in the year. These are exceptionally fine quality at such low prices—there are cheaper gauze ribbons of these widths, possibly, but we never have known such good stock to be sold at these prices. Full 10-yard bolts. All colors, including white, pink, yellow, violet, Nile green, moss green, purple, scarlet and lavender.

PACIFIC COAST.

Oakland, Cal.—Mary E. Keller has built a greenhouse at 3822 Piedmont avenue.

Pomona, Cal.—Charles Carette recently had a narrow escape from death while crossing the Salt Lake tracks in his automobile. His car became stalled on the crossing while a heavy freight train was bearing down upon him, and he saved his life by leaping over the hood of the machine to the ground, about five feet ahead. The auto was completely wrecked.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Weather conditions for the last two weeks have been unfavorable for the growing of all greenhouse stock. There have been almost continuous rains, with high winds and cold nights, causing the outdoor flowers to be extremely slow in development. Many of the growers had quit firing for the season, and now we hear complaints of a poor setting of tomatoes and cucumbers.

The Mothers' day business was all that could be expected. The day is gaining in general public favor and will soon be one of the best flower days of the year.

Bedding stock is moving slowly, but seems to be of unusually good quality, with a good supply in sight. Cut flowers, especially carnations, are scarce and are bringing a good price.

Various Notes.

Miss Gertz, manager of the Flower Shop, has been away from the store for a week on account of sickness. Mrs. Watson has also been on the sick list.

The California Florist had the contract for decorating the new U. P. depot for the opening day.

The Florists' Club, at its last meeting, decided to hold the rose show in conjunction with the Woman's Club, June 16 and 17. Messrs. Roberts, Hinz and Mahnke were selected as judges.

J. L. S.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

With Memorial day just at hand, the scarcity of flowers is worrying the florists. The last week was cold and rainy; only a little stock developed and such of it as did so was badly blighted. Peonies are opening under many difficulties. The usual outside flowers, such as sweet peas, bachelor's buttons and iris, are practically out of the market. Shipping trade was steady during the entire week. Graduation exercises caused the principal demand. The long distance shipments for Memorial day commenced about Friday.

Carnations are in better supply than previously reported; with a few days of sunshine there would be a wonderful change. The Maryland rose is in full crop, but other varieties are scarce. Hydrangeas are about the only blooming plant of consequence on the market. Advance orders for June weddings are being rapidly booked.

Various Notes.

The Portland Seed Co. reports business far in excess of former years, especially in the nursery department, which is practically cleaned out.

Walter K. Louis, representing the Dayton Paper Novelty Co., is in town, introducing a new line of flower boxes.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Memorial day is close at hand, and from the amount of shipping that is being done it is evident that portion of the business at least will be up to that of former years. The shipments, however, seem to be of smaller bulk than we have usually seen, but the flowers sent are of more expensive stock.

Formerly all the interior towns depended on San Francisco and surrounding towns for their Memorial day blossoms, because there were so few growers in the country districts. In the last few years this condition has been gradually changing, and where it was the custom to fill out-of-town Decoration day orders with almost anything that was a good keeper, that portion of the business is attended to by the country

Fischer's Grand Freesia Purity

Now is the time to order your supply of Fischer's grand Freesia Purity. Be sure to ask your dealer for Fischer's guaranteed stock, grown by him and supplied to you in his original package; for this stock is never sold in bulk, but is always packed by him in 100, 250 and 500 bulb muslin bags, stamped and indorsed by his signature. Insist upon getting his guaranteed stock, for then you are sure you are getting the pure stock that is grown in the open field in the pure air and sunshine; is thoroughly ripened and absolutely free from culls, and not stock that has been raised from its own seed, which never comes true, or lathhouse grown, which is likely to rot in your benches, instead of growing, owing to the very green, unripe state in which it is dug to get it ready for market in time, or stock that is grown on contract and therefore with the least trouble to the grower, which will very soon evolve itself into a mixture little removed from refracta alba. Eternal vigilance is absolutely necessary to keep it pure. Do not run any risk when you order your Freesia Purity, for it is up to you whether you get the pure stock or a mixture.

To protect both you and himself, his stock this year is sold under guarantee in any sized package to suit dealers, not exceeding 500 in any one package. A certificate of guarantee is enclosed in each package, and Rudolph Fischer's signature is on the outside of package. If you want to get the true stock, insist upon getting it packed as above.

Your dealer will get it for you; if not, write to me and I will tell you who will.

florist, and San Francisco is only called on to provide such stock as is grown with elaborate surroundings and in greater variety than is profitable in rural communities. Callas, white stocks, candytuft and bachelor's buttons used to make the bulk of shipments, but it is noticeable now that fancy carnations, roses, Easter lilies and valley are in the great majority.

Flowers of all kinds are plentiful and the prices are a shade lower than they were one year ago. The weather continues to be favorable and if it remains so for another day or two we shall be thankful.

Various Notes.

E. Reynolds, formerly with the Art Floral Co., is at present in the H. M. Sanborn Co.'s new store, on Broadway, Oakland.

J. G. Lewis has taken charge of the greenhouses of the Thorsted Floral Co., at Fruitvale.

The Hackel Floral Co. will retire from the retail trade on Powell street and is offering the lease for sale.

A trip through the country in the neighborhood of south San Francisco, where most of the hardier varieties of the cheaper flowers have been grown, shows that there is less acreage devoted to this industry than formerly. This accounts for the fewer sorts that the

LETTUCE IN NEW MEXICO.

Please advise us as to the best commercial head lettuce to plant during hot weather in a dry, irrigated country, such as we have here, in southern New Mexico. There is plenty of water for irrigation, but the air is hot and dry. We want a lettuce that will make the largest white head, without getting bitter in summer.

Also what is the best hardy winter head lettuce? We have succeeded with hardy Brown Dutch head lettuce outdoors all winter, but the heads are not large enough and the market demands a whiter head instead of the green variety, like the Brown Dutch. The temperature occasionally gets down to 10 degrees above zero at night here in winter, so we need a lettuce that will stand cold to that degree, for fall planting. R. S. C.

The best variety of lettuce for R. S. C.'s section we think is the Big Boston, provided he gets a first-class strain of this lettuce. This is the best variety for summer growing. The New York lettuce is also a fine variety. For winter use we think the Brown Dutch probably the best. The Big Boston is grown more in Texas than any other variety. Texas Seed & Floral Co.

MAGGOTS ON CUCUMBERS.

Is pulverized sulphur good to put in the soil when planting such crops as cucumbers and muskmelons, to kill the little white maggot that feeds on the roots and kills the plants? Last summer quite a few of my plants were killed by these pests just as they started to bear, but I did not know what the trouble was until all the plants were gone. Carbon bisulphide is pretty expensive to use on a large scale. I thought sulphur would answer the same purpose if used right. If this is correct, tell me how to use it and in what quantity. E. W. C.

Sterilization of the soil has come to be an accepted necessity for successful cucumber culture under glass. Outdoors this is not possible. I have never tried sulphur for the maggots you refer to, and do not know how it would work. I would, however, have greater faith in air-slaked lime, applied in the late fall or early spring at the rate of 2,000 pounds per acre for this and other pests of a like character. Soft coal soot is also excellent to apply to land similarly infested. Mixing some tobacco dust, or even tobacco stems, in the hills is often tried and with good results, but I have most faith in lime. Carbon bisulphide at the rate of 25 cents per can is, of course, costly to use on a large scale, but it does its work well.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June 14 to 16, 1911.

STARK BROS. NURSERY CO., Louisiana, Mo., contemplates starting a nursery in Iowa and has had a representative looking over available sites.

THE Denver Nursery Co., Denver, Colo., has been incorporated, with $50,000 capital stock, by P. Schroeder, A. M. Schroeder and M. J. Schroeder.

M. H. GAAR, the nurseryman of Cambridge City, Ind., has purchased an additional tract of five acres and has already planted it with 15,000 trees.

W. H. LEWIS, who for more than forty years conducted the Fairmont Nursery at Winterset, Iowa, has sold his stock of trees and retired from the business.

GEO. W. JOHNSON, a nurseryman of Palouse, Wash., has purchased an irrigated tract at Loon Lake, Wash., and will establish the Highland Nursery there.

THE Valdesian Nurseries, Bostic, N. C., report that the continued dry weather, which has caused a great loss on late plantings, has been broken by light showers. Fall sales are coming in nicely.

THE nursery business of E. F. Edmundson, at Perry, Ia., has been incorporated, under the name of the Perry Nursery Co. The capital stock is $10,000. The incorporators are E. F. Edmundson, S. M. Edmundson, Ralph Edmundson, C. E. Wilson and E. B. Wilson.

THE meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen at St. Louis, June 14 to 16, will be the thirty-sixth. The membership of the association without question represents the most progressive men in the trade and the meetings grow in size and interest as the years go by.

A REPORT in the first part of May stated that steps had been taken for the establishment of the Eugene-Creswell Nurseries, at Eugene, Ore., and that articles of incorporation, fixing the capital stock at $25,000, would be filed in a few days. The promoters are O. H. Skotheim, Webster L. Kincaid, John Baird and P. Augustus Peterson, all but one of whom are connected with the Eugene & Great Western Land Co.

APHIS ON COTTONWOOD TREE.

Under separate cover I am mailing you a twig from a cottonwood tree, which is literally covered with insects. They confine themselves to the twigs and do not seem to bother the leaves. I should like to know what the insects are, whether they are dangerous and what is the most effective remedy. Will Paris green kill them? There are simply millions on each small tree.

H. A. L.

This is one of the numerous aphides commonly known as plant lice. As these are sucking insects and do not eat the foliage, as do various caterpillars, poisons like Paris green would be of no avail. Pests of this class must be

Use a force pump with a fine spray nozzle attachment and wet every portion of the wood. All insects hit will be killed. EXPORTS OF NURSERY STOCK.

The exports of nursery stock are about one-seventh of the imports, but nevertheless the sales outside the United States are on the increase and probably will take quite a jump if the Canadian reciprocity bill becomes a law, for Canada is our largest foreign customer. The total exports of nursery stock in the last five years were valued as follows:

Year.	Value.
1909	317,827
1908	247,844
1907	225,339

JUNIPER TIPS DYING.

What causes the tips of my juniper tree to turn brown and die? The trouble started about two weeks ago. The tree has always done well and looks green, except at the tips, which are dying. There are no insects and it has fairly good soil. Can you tell me what to do for it? I am sending some of the tips under separate cover. M. L.

This dying of the tips on junipers is not at all unusual in spring. It is due to one of two causes. If the plants are quite dry at the root when the ground freezes up tightly in early winter, and if no water is able to percolate to the roots during the winter months, some burning of the tips is likely to be noticeable on this and a number of other evergreens when the hot sun and cold winds of March and April arrive, the damage being usually done in March. If damp at the root when the ground freezes, evergreens rarely show any browning or dying of the tips. The damage is also due sometimes to late spring frosts, which scorch the young growths. In all probability, however, the dryness at the root is the cause of your trouble. Another season soak the roots of any evergreens before the arrival of freezing-up weather and they will in nine cases out of ten come through the winter unscathed.

The Market.

During the extremely hot weather we have experienced in the last two weeks, stock has suffered greatly and the quality now is the same as in midsummer, far below what we have had in other seasons at this date. Roses have suffered most, and there were hardly any good salable roses for Decoration day. There has been an enormous quantity of carnations on the market, a great plenty to go the rounds. Trade was heavy for Decoration day, and quite a quantity of outdoor flowers were on the market. Peonies were never in such quantities as this year, and quality was fine. There was no jasmine on this market this year, as they were all reported in and gone before Decoration day.

Geraniums were all sold out early and few were in shape for May 30. Bedding work has been heavy and has used up an enormous quantity of stock.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club gave its last dance of the season May 17 and there was quite a nice crowd present. The next on the program is the annual picnic, which will no doubt be at Buckeye lake.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business for Decoration day in all lines of work.

E. Metzmaier says business was never better.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had a heavy business, with large cuts of carnations.

The Livingston Seed Co. had a heavy trade for Decoration day. J. M.

Select Potted Roses

FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING

The Roses here offered are field grown plants which have been potted into 5 or 6-inch pots (according to the growth of the variety) during the winter months. They have been stored in cold houses and cold frames and are in the best possible condition to turn over to your retail customers for outdoor planting, giving an entirely different result from stock carried over winter in storage. For best results the plants should be shipped in pots; in this shape they will carry safely to reasonable distances by freight.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

This is the time of the year when the florist gets tired of his business. The lull just before Memorial day, and the warm weather, give him the spring fever, and he longs to go fishing, to go to the ball game, or anywhere, just to get away from the store and office, and to get out into the fresh air and the sunshine. This feeling was intensified during the last week, with the thermometer at 90 degrees in the shade. The topic of absorbing interest to Rochesterians during the last ten days has been the weather. One felt that a second glance at the calendar was necessary to assure oneself that the muggy August days were not here. Such leaps and bounds as the plants and flowers and trees are making in their growth is extraordinary. With the flowers, the season is a full two weeks ahead of the average. Some trees which do not flower normally until Memorial day have passed their prime and are dropping their blossoms, and there is more than one sign of mid-June in the field. In one of our parks there are more than ninety varieties of American hawthorn in flower. The hardy azaleas are in full flower, and the rhododendrons are rapidly reaching their height of beauty.

The cut flower market is flooded with all sorts of stock, and great quantities find their way to the refuse heap because the supply is far greater than the demand. Beauties are sold at a low figure and so are roses of all kinds, with the exception of the best grades of Killarney, Maryland, Taft and Richmond. Cattleyas are plentiful just now and bring but little money. Carnations are poor. Sweet peas are pouring in, but

HOW ABOUT YOUR EMPTY BENCHES?

After Decoration Day you have empty benches. Will it pay you to have them empty? Take a few minutes to think and consider which will pay the best. Chrysanthemums? No, I know something better. I plant a bench or two with asters, in July, and in August I cut them. That gives me time to refill my benches with a fine lot of fall and holiday plants, such as cyclamen, ferns and poinsettias, roses and other plants suitable for my fall business. I am going to write an order right away to Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, for his Giant Crego Aster. It is the best early branching cut aster in the world.

Yes, we have it for sale in four separate colors; 20,000 of them in white, purple, rose and pink, very strong plants, 2½-inch pots, $3.00 100; $25.00 1000.

are poor in quality and were greatly damaged by the heavy rains of last week. Some good gladioli are placed on sale, of the Blushing Bride variety. There is a great abundance of greens of all kinds.

Flowering plants for hospitals and gift baskets are in great demand, but the supply is small, since there are only the same old standards from which to choose—spiræas, gloxinias, hydrangeas and a few late potted ramblers.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Bowling Club has discontinued practice for the summer.

Charles H. Vick has been chosen as judge at a flower carnival and exhibition to be held August 23 and 24 in Perry, N. Y., under the auspices of the women of the Methodist church of that place.

Horace Head has returned from Hilton, N. Y., where he has been for his health. He was greatly benefited by a few weeks of rest.

E. C. Campbell has gone to Mount Clemens, Mich., for a short visit.

Emil Thomann, who was thrown from a wagon a short time ago, severely injuring his arm, is improving slowly.

E. F. Rowe, formerly with James Vick's Sons, has gone to Harrisburg, Pa., to accept a position with the McFarland Publicity Co. Edwin C. Armbrust, with J. B. Keller's Sons, 25 Clinton avenue, succeeds him as correspondent for The Review.

Miss Lillian Wheeler, of the Rochester Floral Co., has resumed her duties at 245 Main street east.

Bedding plants are the best sellers these days, and outdoor work demands all the attention of the landscape gardeners. They are working overtime because of the warm spell.

J. B. Keller's Sons have begun early closing and are running on summer schedule time.

Sunday, May 21, was observed as Lilac day at Highland park. About 100 varieties of lilacs, all in full bloom, were viewed by thousands of people. Mayor Hiram H. Edgerton and Park Commissioner W. C. Barry were among those who were out to note the perfection, profusion and perfume of lilacs.

The Market.

The hot weather is beginning to have its effect on all cut stock, particularly roses. The quality is only fair. The blooms are small and the stems short. Carnations are affected the same way. Stock is quite plentiful and the demand fairly good. Tulips are about done. This season has been a good one for them. The later varieties of lilacs are now on the market. The season for these was unusually short. The hot weather killed off the early varieties in a short time and there were three or four days when there were none offered. Outdoor flowers, such as phlox, poppies, iris, etc., are now being offered in large quantities. Some fine Iceland poppies, in different shades, are on the market. A fine lot of spiræa is being shipped in. Peonies are well started. The whites are fine, but as yet the colored ones are not of much account.

Various Notes.

R. Jennings, of Brampton, was in the city last week. He has just purchased a fine new Ford motor car for pleasure purposes.

James Milne, for a long time shipper at J. H. Dunlop's establishment, has left that firm and is now connected with the Roman Stone Co. in a similar capacity.

A. G. Dillemuth reports a good trade in all lines. From orders booked, he will have an exceedingly busy month. He has many out-of-town orders.

The Toronto Horticultural Society had an exhibition of spring flowers in St. George's hall May 20. An excellent lot of English primroses was shown. Some of the modern varieties showed many colors besides the original yellow. Many varieties of tulips were exhibited.

Mrs. Ford is moving, June 1, from her present store on College street to a place on Yonge street, near to her old stand. This should make a big difference in her business. Besides her flower trade, she will handle the retail trade in Harry Webb's chocolates.

Chas. E. Lewis reports a fair trade in boxwood trees.

Grobba & Wandrey, of Mimico, are shipping some fine stock of all lines into the city.

A. E. Moore is receiving daily shipments from his newly acquired plant in Georgetown and is now able to meet the demand much better. E. A. F.

Northampton, Mass.—Frederick Steward has taken a position with H. W. Field.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business for Memorial day was immense and every florist had as much as he could do. Flowers of all kinds were plentiful on the market. Roses and carnations were in big demand. The quality was only fair, owing to hot weather. The day was warm and clear. A number of funerals increased the business considerably.

Various Notes.

Ben Kramer had some of the best peonies to be seen and had a fine sale for them. Carnations sold best with him, but roses sold well also.

The Blackman Floral Co. had immense quantities of stock and enjoyed a big day May 30. Funeral work formed a large part of the sales.

Julius Niednagel & Sons had, besides the Memorial day business, a number of funerals and sent out several wagonloads of designs and bunches.

J. C. Elsperman was busy enough and his forces had all they could do. They have recently put into service a new delivery wagon.

Royston & Fenton sold all the roses they could cut and could have sold many more.

Louis Fritsch was surprised at the calls for flowers and was caught unprepared. He says next year he will see that he has enough to go around.

Nellie Goodge was kept busy making small bouquets for the cemetery. Her plant sales were large.

Karl Zeidler gathered in most of the trade that went to the Locust Hill cemetery.

Henry Seymour was busy and had to buy considerable stock. E. L. F.

in large quantities from Brighton. From Madbury, N. H., the Mrs. Aaron Wards and Killarneys were noteworthy. Mr. Hutson, the head salesman, reported business as satisfactory.

Malcolm Orr, of Saugus, who has been specializing in sweet peas, had also candytuft and stocks in quantity for Memorial day.

George W. Ayer, of Reading, has had good success with his sweet peas this season. He also hit it right with a big crop of candytuft for the holiday.

Samuel Gidley, of Waltham, has a fine new Buick delivery car, which he is finding a great convenience in his business.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, had some grand Gladiolus Dawn and Mrs. Francis King, which are popular at the stores.

William Nicholson, of Framingham, had a superb lot of carnations for Memorial day, also his usual heavy cut of double feverfew and marguerites. He had a heavy local trade.

Welch Bros. were more than satisfied with Memorial day trade, which easily beat all previous records. It taxed the capacity of the roomy Devonshire street emporium to handle the business.

Business at the seed stores is now easing off considerably. The drought, added to attacks of cutworms, necessitated second sowings of many crops. The demand for dahlias and gladioli has been heavy.

S. J. Goddard had an extra heavy cut of carnations, feverfews, gladioli of the large-flowered type, and marguerites for Memorial day, and reports a good increase in local trade.

A. L. Silloway, of Maynard, hit it right with a big crop of double feverfews for the holiday, which cleaned up quickly.

A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, has had a successful season with flowering and bedding plants and is pretty well cleaned out. His roses and hydrangeas have been extra fine.

The W. W. Edgar Co. reports great activity in bedding plant trade, particularly in geraniums. Their hydrangeas, roses and other Memorial day plants have sold splendidly.

Peonies did not appear at the wholesale markets at all, except a few of the old officinalis rubra. Welch Bros., however, handled quite a few at their Devonshire street store.

The annual rhododendron show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held June 10 and 11. Classes are provided also for azaleas, German irises, tree peonies, herbaceous plants, fuchsias and groups of orchids. The rose show comes June 24 and 25. W. N. Craig.

NARCISSUS FLY.

Under separate cover I am sending a sample of bulbs affected with some worm. Will you kindly advise me what this is and the remedy, if any is known to you? They are also on my auratum lilies in the same garden.
W. E. D.

The bulbs forwarded had been badly attacked by the larvæ of the narcissus fly, a destructive pest and one which has nearly exterminated narcissi in some American gardens. It appears to specially favor the large bulbed varieties, such as Emperor, Horsfieldii and Victoria, but will also attack the smaller bulbed sorts and tulips. These, or some similar larvæ, have also probably attacked your Lilium auratum. Where these larvae are found in quantity, it is better to burn all the affected bulbs and select fresh ground when planting another season. It is impossible to reach and destroy them when located within the bulbs without also destroying the bulbs. Sometimes the larvæ of the May beetle will also attack bulbs in this way. They usually come in rather fresh cow manure, which should never be used for bulbous plants of any kind. When planting bulbs of any kind, be sure the manure is old and well decayed. A dressing of Scotch soot or land lime will also be helpful on ground containing such pests.

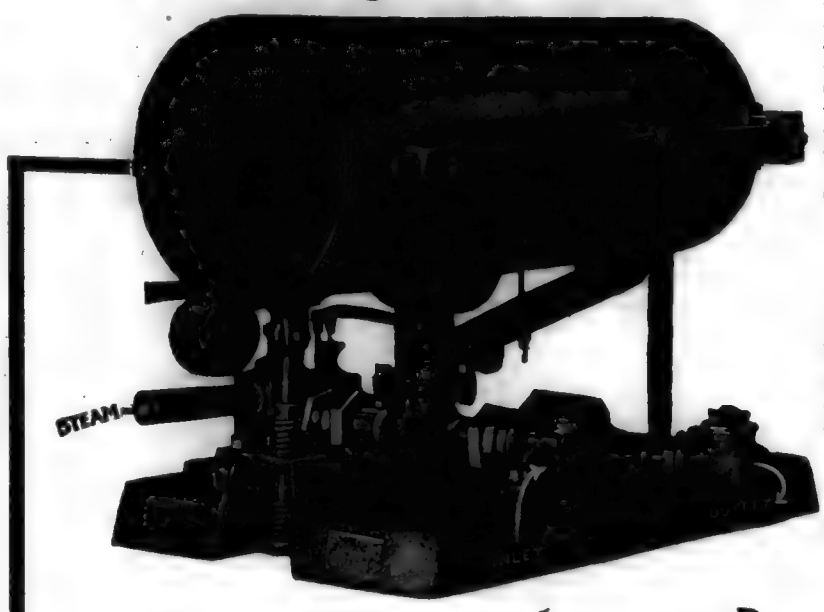
Greenhouse Heating.

WITH 4-INCH PIPE.

Will you please give me some information in regard to the heating of our greenhouse? How many feet of 4-inch hot water pipe will be needed to heat a house 26x100 to a temperature of 70 degrees in zero weather? What size of boiler will be necessary? We are located in southeastern Minnesota. R. H. M.

If 4-inch pipe is to be used, it will be well to put in about twelve. There could be two flows and four returns upon each side of the house, or they could be distributed so that there would be one flow and two returns in each of four places. The boiler should be able to handle 2,000 square feet of radiating surface.



IN CENTRAL TEXAS.

I have a greenhouse 22x75 feet and twelve feet to the ridge. The side walls consist of three feet of wood and two feet of glass. The house runs south of east and north of east. I expect to build two more houses, each 20x50, connected, and running west of south and east of north. The new houses will be about fourteen feet, or perhaps less, from the present house. Can all the houses be heated by the same boiler, to a temperature of 50 degrees at night? We seldom have zero weather here. I shall appreciate it if you will give me some advice about the piping, as I know nothing about it. C. L. S.

Under the conditions mentioned, there should be no difficulty about heating the new houses from the central plant, provided the coils can be at least as high as those in the present house. If the boiler is sufficiently low, it will be advisable to carry the flow pipe from one house to the other in an underground conduit. This could be made of cement, or an 8-inch sewer pipe could be used for the flow and another of the same size for the return. The pipes themselves should be 3-inch and should be covered with asbestos packing.

From the main flow and return pipes a 2½-inch flow and a return of the same size should lead to each house, where they should connect with the returns. If the boiler is not sufficiently low to permit the running of the flow pipe underground, it can be carried

BETTER AND CHEAPER THAN ANY OTHER SYSTEM.

Zanesville, O., Feb. 11th, '11.

Gentlemen:—
In regard to the Kroeschell Threaded Tube Piping System, I think it is better than standard piping system, not only in being cheaper but thinner, and giving more heat. I found the Generator was a paying proposition and would recommend its use to all using a hot water system. My No. 11 Boiler does the work satisfactorily on over 25,000 square feet of glass.

Very truly yours,
C. L. HUMPHREY.

TEST AT 14 BELOW ZERO—HEATS WITH EASE.

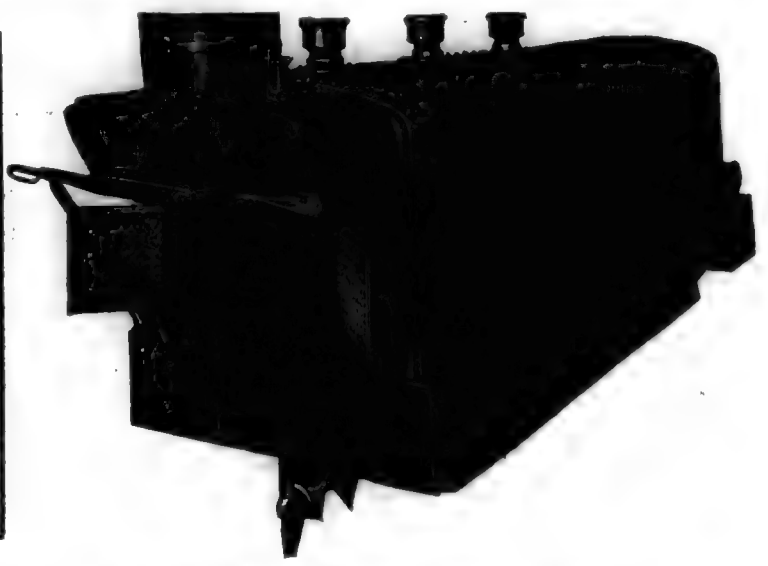
Omaha, Neb., Jan. 4th, '11.

Gentlemen:—
It might interest you to know the results obtained from your boiler and threaded tube piping system. We have just had a night of 14 degrees below, with a stiff wind blowing, and we carried the house at 52 degrees with the boiler at 170 degrees. The house is piped for 50 degrees, and as we are using a cheap grade of slack, the result speaks for itself. We were told by the dealer when we ordered the coal that we could not burn it, so we bought a car of good coal to help along if the slack would not give results, but it was not necessary. Your Generator certainly helps the circulation and your method of piping for hot water is a surprise to some of the greenhouse men in this vicinity.

Very truly yours,
FERGUSON BROS.

BETTER THAN STEAM.

Pontiac, Ill., March 16th, '10.



Gentlemen:—
We have no trouble whatever in keeping a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees in our carnation houses, and 60 degrees in our rose houses, in the coldest weather. We fire once in three hours on very cold nights, and at other times once during the night. The boiler has given excellent satisfaction; it is simply wonderful. We had a fire box boiler previous to this, but your improved system has it beat to death in every way. Your system of piping, together with your improved Generator system, has steam skinned to death in so many ways. We were on the market to buy high pressure steam, but after receiving such reports of your improved hot water system, we concluded that your experience was worth something, and have been delighted at the results, and so glad we took your advice and put in hot water instead of steam.

Very respectfully,
W. J. MILLER & SON.

overhead from one house to the other, and covered with packing as already directed.

In each of the new houses run a 2½-inch flow to the farther end and connect with the return coils, which should include seven 2-inch pipes in each of the houses. The returns should, of course, have a slight fall, as should also the flow pipes, if possible. For the house 22 by 75 feet, use two 2½-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns. The flows can be on the plates and the returns on the side walls, or a part of them might be under the benches.

PIPING IN VIRGINIA.

Please give us some information as to the size of boiler we need and the amount of piping. At present we have three houses, each 25x102. The side walls are six feet high and the height to the ridge is twelve feet. How many runs of 2-inch pipe will be needed for each house? We wish to put in a new boiler and intend to build two more houses of the same size. The new ones will be at the southwest corner, and the strongest winds come from the west. C. & W.

The question does not state the purpose to which the houses are to be put, or the class of plants to be grown in them, so that no very definite advice can be given as to the piping that will be required.

For heating houses 25x102 feet to 60 degrees in the latitude of Virginia, it will be advisable to put in three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns, provided there is no glass in the side walls. In case a temperature

¶ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.

¶ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.

¶ The majority of florists are using Morehead Traps. If you are one of the exceptions, it will be to your interest to write us—we will make you a liberal trial offer proposition.

¶ By way of getting acquainted, just send your name and address and ask for "Trap Book."

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The last three days of the week just closed were about as busy as the florists in this city and vicinity have experienced for a long time, the demand, especially for potted plants, being unusually large. The prices were good and the quality of the stock was above the average. Cut flowers were also in demand, but a considerable increase in price somewhat checked the sales. Funeral work continues brisk and the orders for delivery on May 30 and 31, for Memorial day, exceed those of any previous year.

Various Notes.

Paul de Nave, vice-president of the Fall River Florists' and Gardeners' Association, was a recent visitor in this city. He reports a fine crop of Cattleya Mossiæ, Gaskelliana and gigas.

John McNulty, a driver for George Johnson & Son, was painfully injured May 22 while driving his horse on Wickenden street. The horse stumbled and threw Mr. McNulty from his seat. He received a scalp wound a couple of inches long, in which several stitches were taken.

S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, are shipping some excellent Beacon, Pink Delight and Afterglow carnations to the Boston market.

Newport, South Kingstown and Bristol will make independent attacks on the tree pests which infest these districts, even though the State Board of Agriculture can do nothing to assist them financially, inasmuch as the appropriation for that work has been vetoed by the governor.

Alfred H. Leonard, head bookkeeper for W. E. Barrett & Co., has the sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances in the recent death of his father.

James Hackins, of Central Falls, is contemplating a trip to Europe in the fall.

J. Sullivan, formerly with the Westminster Greenhouses, in this city, was a recent visitor here. He is now conducting a large flower store at Springfield, Mass.

By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. Our new catalogue is just out and if you contemplate making any changes you had better get one—it is yours for the asking.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Market.

Trade has been good and Memorial day brought a big rush. Many funerals have kept everyone busy of late, and there were several large weddings last week. The weather was cold and rainy for May and has kept the outdoor stock back.

Window and veranda boxes seem to be the rage at present and the florists are kept busy trying to fill the orders. Business on the whole has been exceptionally fine.

Various Notes.

John Champion and family have closed their home on Ellsworth avenue and gone to the shore to spend the summer months.

Growers from every section of the town are complaining about the great quantities of cutworms that have devastated large fields, especially tomato plants. About every device imaginable is being employed to keep the worms in check, with but little success.

Bruce, the Orchard street florist, is kept busy filling piazza boxes.

Osterman, the Church street florist, has a fine window display of ferns, cut flowers and potted plants. B.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Memorial day business began in earnest on Saturday, both in pot plants and cut flowers. The general opinion is that the volume of business will exceed that of all previous years. Prices are lower, but the satisfaction to the retailers and to the general public is much greater than usual. Roses, carnations and peonies have formed the bulk of the supply. Flowering shrubbery, often so important a factor for Memorial day, was neglected this year, possibly because everybody had his own.

The crop of peonies was timed to a day, good judges estimating that seventy-five per cent of the local crop was ready. The ruling price for good stock ranged from $30 to $40 per thousand. Fancy stock of P. festiva maxima and Prince Nicholas brought exceptionally fine prices. Something like two-thirds of the flowers were white, while the remainder of the supply was of the various shades of pink. Few reds were to be seen.

Carnations, unlike peonies, were wanted in colors. A large proportion, however, were white, which sold exceptionally well. Owing to the immense crop of peonies, the prices on carnations were lower than last year. Roses were also more popular in colors than in white, and a large demand was made for pink of all shades.

Some excellent lilies are in the market. The quality stimulates the demand. Sweet peas are in heavy supply, but are not wanted, as they are faded and hardly last a day.

The bedding plant men have had an excellent season, considering the long dry spell. Many of the growers are practically sold out and much more stock could have been sold for Memorial day if in flower, but everything showing color, particularly in the geranium line, had been picked out as fast as it opened during the last two weeks, so that much of the stock delivered was not at all showy.

Various Notes.

J. Bolgiano & Son report one of the largest seasons in potted plants that this firm has ever had. Their out-of-town trade in potted plants has grown to immense proportions. Over 60,000 potted roses have been sold this season, besides 48,000 geraniums, and of scarlet sage and pansies there is no end.

R. A. Vincent reports one of the largest seasons the firm has had in potted plants and roots. Q.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Business last week was slow, the general lull before the holiday rush. Memorial day always is big here. A few May weddings helped business at the end of the month. The Watch Hill season is about to open and the landscape gardeners are kept busy. Bedding plant trade has been heavy.

Various Notes.

Wilcox park is being put in its beautiful summer garb. Superintendent Coon and his force of men are kept busy.

S. J. Reuter & Son have opened a large store in New London.

The Westerly Burial Co. had a fine window of potted plants and ferns for Memorial day.

CUT STOCKS KEEPING POORLY.

We have grown some excellent ten weeks' stocks, but find that if we cut them and place them in water they wilt and do not revive. Can you tell us the reason for this? N.

In cutting the stocks, select the early morning and late afternoon for the work. Use cold water in deep jars. Set them in a cold room. Do not cut the plants close to the soil, as the wood is hard there and does not suck up water readily. Cut the side shoots singly and let the cuts be long and slanting. Set the stems well down in the water. If you follow these directions, you should have no more trouble of the kind you speak of. C. W.

And a STANDARD PUMPING ENGINE Helped to Make It

The Market Growers Journal has published a booklet describing the experience of one of the most successful market gardeners in the country, one who has found that The Standard Pumping Engine has been his best investment. His experience is merely one of hundreds. This booklet contains many helpful hints for the grower, which cannot fail to interest you, and it will be sent upon request by

The Market.

Trade has been decidedly good for the last week. Funeral work, wedding decorations and the bedding trade kept the florists on the jump even before the special Memorial day demand began to be felt.

The hot weather has had a bad effect on roses and carnations, but there is an abundance of other flowers. The peony crop is unusually large this year, but many of them were early for Memorial day. Candytuft, sweet peas, daisies and lilies are to be had in quantities.

The bedding trade has been good this season, but the hot weather will cut it short, as many people who have overlooked getting their plants will leave for the summer resorts soon, and do without the plants.

Various Notes.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, spent a day in the city last week to dispose of his surplus bedding stock.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. J. Baur spent several days in Richmond last week. Recently the park board converted Thirty-eighth street into a boulevard and widened it fifty feet. Mr. Baur's residence stood too near the street and it became necessary to move it back about twenty-five feet.

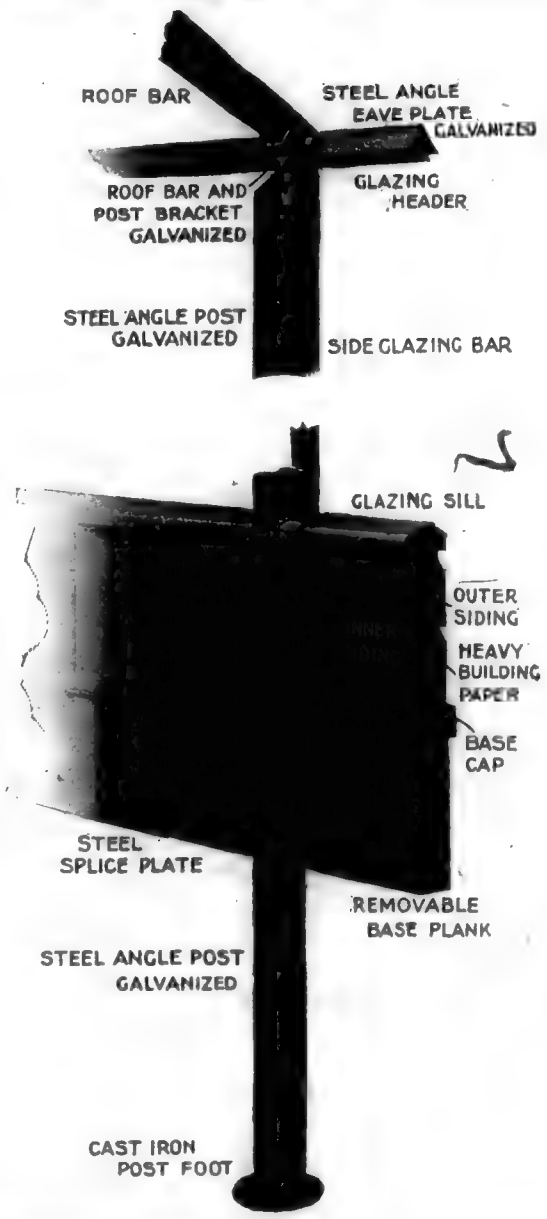
Harry Balsley and W. H. Elverson were both in the city at the same time last week, talking flower pots.

The Pahud Floral Co. and E. A. Nelson have their hands full, filling cemetery vases. They report the plant business satisfactory.

The June meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held in the horticultural rooms in the horticultural rooms in the State house.

A. Wiegand & Sons were summoned last week, along with a number of others, for not having a license on their delivery auto.

Frank Farney, with M. Rice & Co., was a caller last week. As usual, he reports business flourishing.



The Indianapolis Flower and Plant Co. reports an excellent business in bedding stock this year. This firm is sending quantities to the market daily.

Ollie Hobbs, with the Bridgeport Nurseries, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, is much improved.

Albert Pettit had a fine cut of sweet peas for Memorial day. He has disposed of a great quantity of bedding stock.

Hartje & Elder had a fine lot of feverfew, sweet peas and candytuft for Memorial day. H. L. W.

The Review sends Scott's Florists' Manual postpaid for $5.

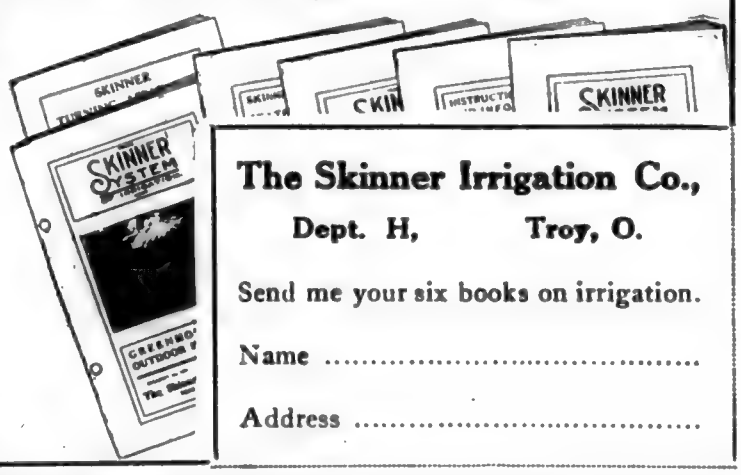
Hundreds of Gardeners and Florists testify to the efficiency of the Skinner System of Irrigation

With scarcely an exception we have had enthusiastic letters from every gardener and florist who has put in the Skinner System.



Their crops have been bigger—earlier—surer. Drought has been an absolutely unfeared element to them.

The Skinner System waters in a mist form that cannot bruise the foliage or cake the ground. And the area one man can water is limited only by the extent of the installation.

Send the coupon for our six books on Irrigation.

They contain in detail the most modern methods, and the concrete, signed experiences of other growers and florists. A postal or the coupon will bring them free.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

CAXTON BUILDING

508 South Dearborn Street

CHICAGO

Advertising forms close

TUESDAY

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Little Rock, Ark.—H. Meyer, proprietor of the Oakland Cemetery Greenhouses, at 1623 College street, just opposite Oakland cemetery, has been in business there since 1900 and has developed a large and profitable patronage. Though he makes a specialty of funeral work, he is well equipped for a general trade, including landscape gardening.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

CATTLEYAS IN BOUQUETS.

June is a month which brings a demand for white orchids beyond the resources of the wholesale cut flower markets. A lot of the June brides think there must be white orchids in the bouquet; they have the idea that nothing else is appropriate. The retail florists will make it easier to handle the trade if they educate the public to the use of cattleyas, such as Mossiæ and gigas, with valley, in the wedding bunches. While white orchids are scarce, there is an abundance of the lighter-colored forms of seasonable cattleyas, blooms with just enough color to work nicely with valley; indeed, some people whose taste is good in such matters think the best wedding bouquets are those made with the darker-colored cattleyas.

ROCK'S WAYS.

W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, uses a fancy Dennison tag for cut flower boxes, putting the sender's card, if any, in a small envelope enclosed with the flowers, but for plant sales a special envelope is used. It is of strong manila, attractively printed with the florist's name and address, lines for the name of the party to whom sent, and in the corner "Card inside." THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

CHICAGO

TUESDAY

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Little Rock, Ark.—H. Meyer, proprietor of the Oakland Cemetery Greenhouses, at 1623 College street, just opposite Oakland cemetery, has been in business there since 1900 and has developed a large and profitable patronage. Though he makes a specialty of funeral work, he is well equipped for a general trade, including landscape gardening.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

CATTLEYAS IN BOUQUETS.

June is a month which brings a demand for white orchids beyond the resources of the wholesale cut flower markets. A lot of the June brides think there must be white orchids in the bouquet; they have the idea that nothing else is appropriate. The retail florists will make it easier to handle the trade if they educate the public to the use of cattleyas, such as Mossiæ and gigas, with valley, in the wedding bunches. While white orchids are scarce, there is an abundance of the lighter-colored forms of seasonable cattleyas, blooms with just enough color to work nicely with valley; indeed, some people whose taste is good in such matters think the best wedding bouquets are those made with the darker-colored cattleyas.

ROCK'S WAYS.

W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, uses a fancy Dennison tag for cut flower boxes, putting the sender's card, if any, in a small envelope enclosed with the flowers, but for plant sales a special envelope is used. It is of strong manila, attractively printed with the florist's name and address, lines for the name of the party to whom sent, and in the corner "Card inside." The envelope is thus both a shipping tag and a card container. It seals and has an eyelet for the cord. With this envelope cards can not be lost or soiled.

With cut flowers the Rock Co. encloses a neatly printed card, as follows:

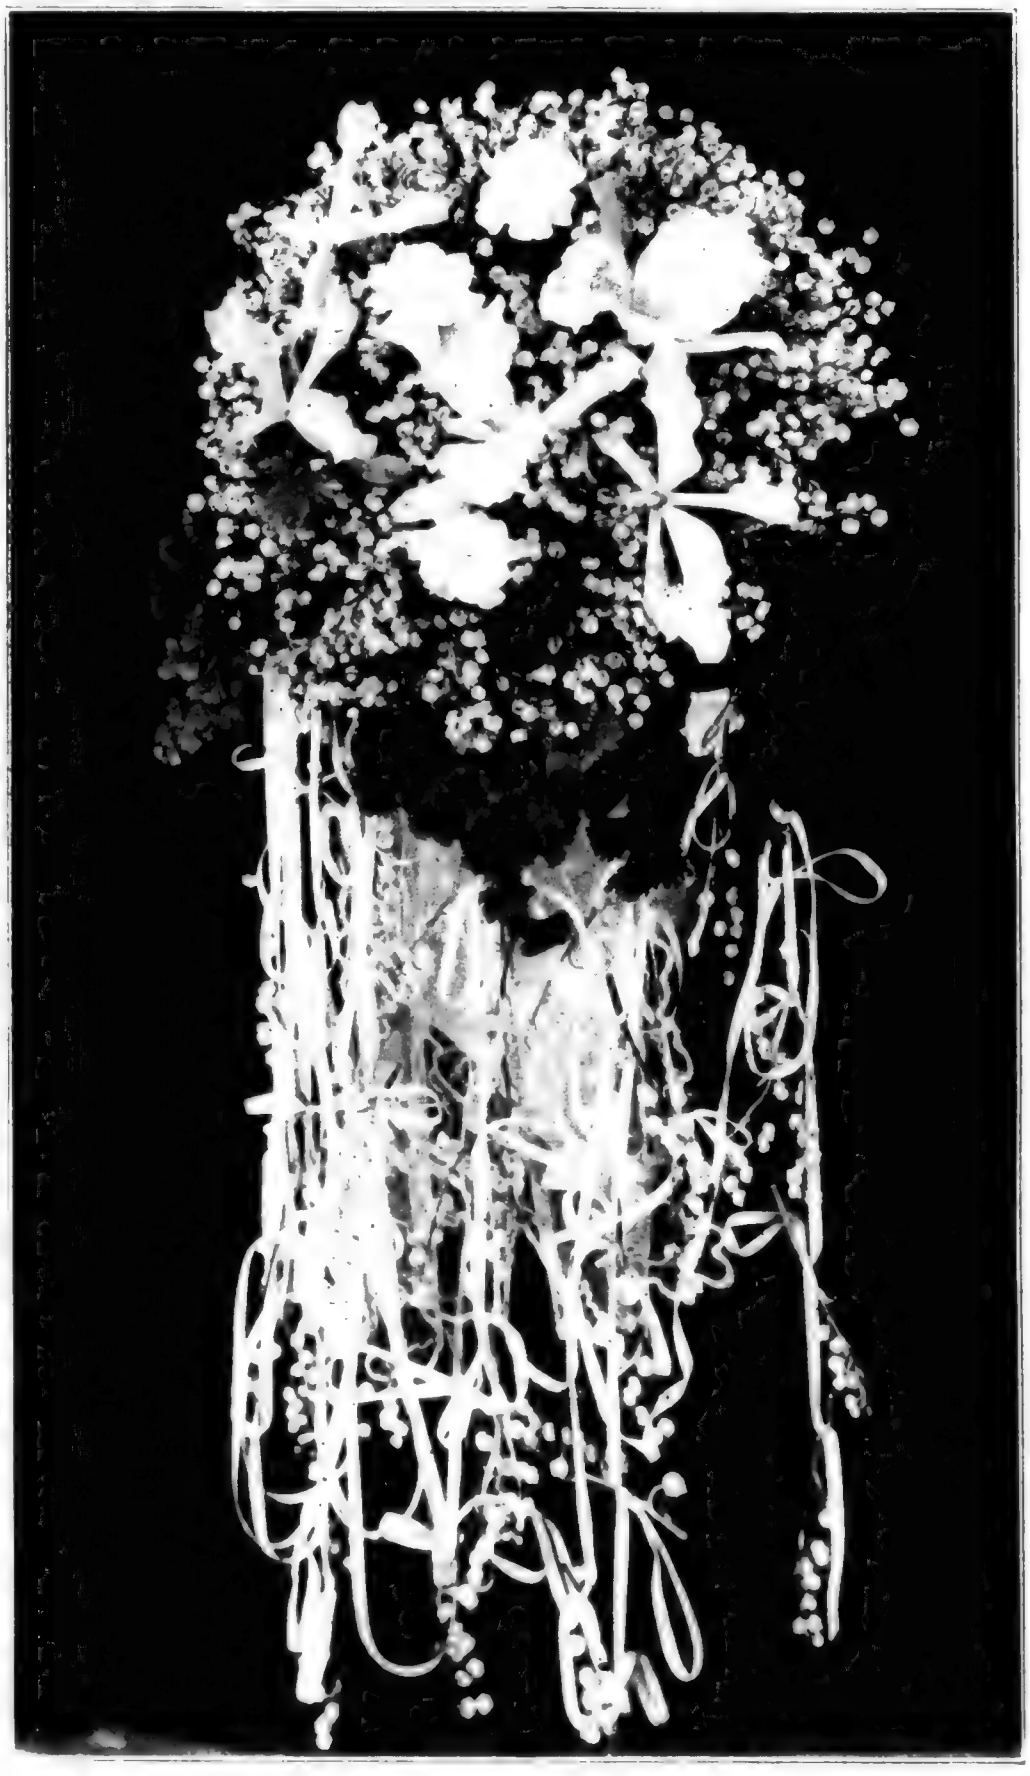
THE CORNFLOWER IN DESIGN.



With Some of Its Near Relatives.

A bunch of bunches of fringe—that is what we have now in blue borders of the garden, uncertainly wavering to lavender pinks and white. He — the cornflower — is as persevering as his cousin, the thistle, and when he appears on dress parade in a decoration he shines with a jaunty air with some down borrowed from his pestiferous cousin and some somber gray foliage from his brother, the Centaurea gymnocarpa. By these articles of borrowed finery we hope to make his fringiness more fringy and his airiness more airy. As a general favorite the cornflower has yet to make his debut, but his merits are none the less real.

In seizing upon the "very thing" to develop such characteristics in flower or plant life, one is answerable only to common sense and taste for his selections — the pre-Adamic critics to the contrary notwithstanding. But, while nature is wild and free, quaint and coquettish, she is never silly. To sustain the repose of the simplest floral assemblage or to develop the beauty of form and color, we are entitled, then, to any resource of still life or animated nature which our eyes light upon.

Baskets or Bowls of Cornflowers.

With a basket of cornflowers on a luncheon table I may confine a bunch of live butterflies, with a chiffon veil thrown over the whole. Or, somewhere on the side of a large doorway, suspend a raffia hanger which holds a basket or bowl of blue cornflowers. Bend the stems so that they will show from below. Make several wide loops of white, pink or Nile green chiffon. Let one of them envelop the bowl, as though supporting it. Catch the bows in a cluster at the point from which the hanger is suspended. Make another cluster of loops, of which the sides are basted together, fill these loops with thistle down or milkweed down, and let them hang as they will among the ends. Talk about your atmosphere effects!

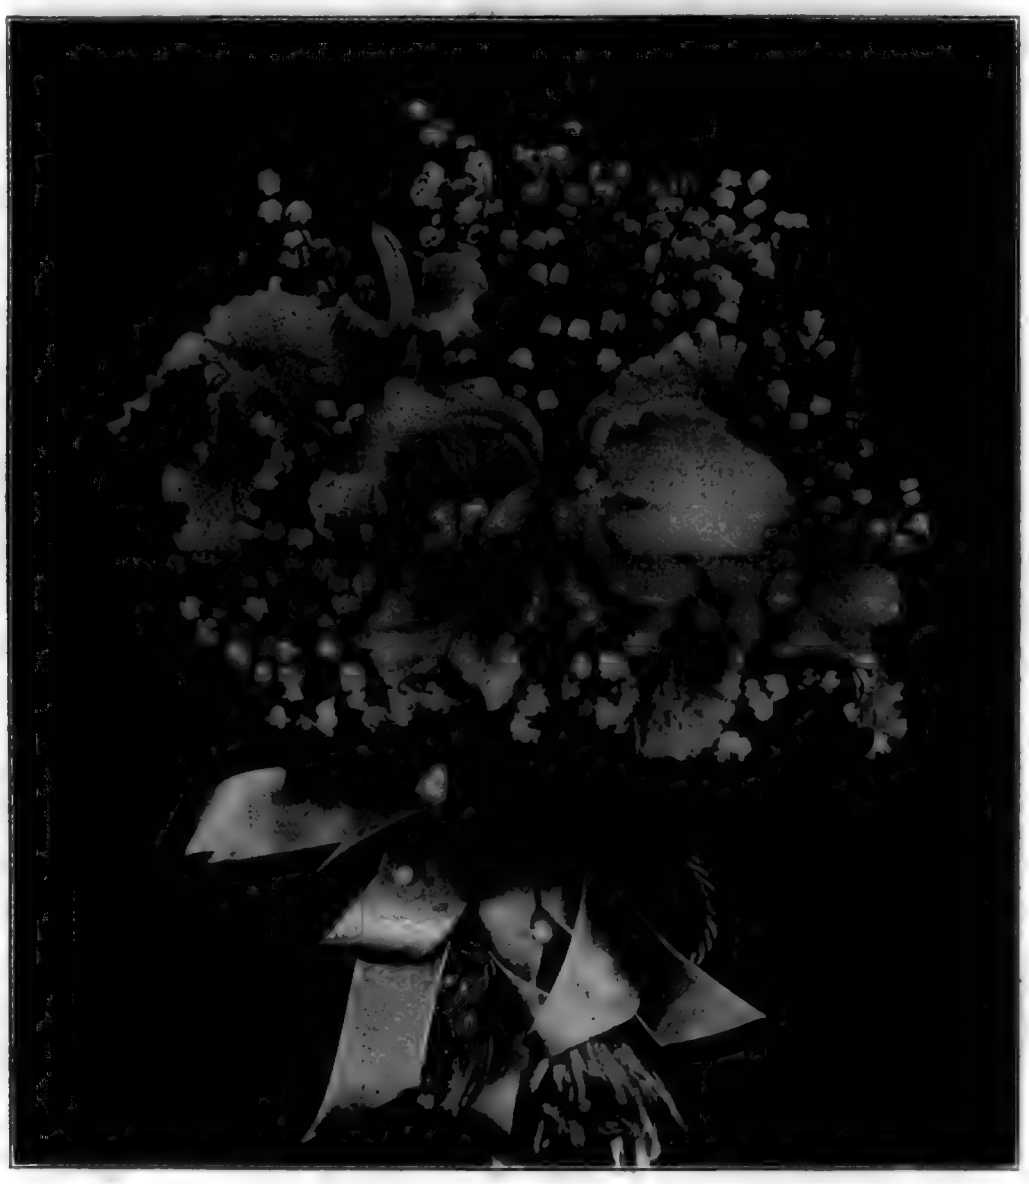
Now that balls are in favor—and may they long stay there—make some of this kind for table decorations to use with cornflower centerpieces, or tie a basket handle with chiffon loops filled with the down.

For Weddings.

Speaking of near relatives which may be drawn into the scheme, there are other interesting centaureas, among them the large double white and the garden dusty miller or Centaurea gymnocarpa. These two—the flower of the white and the foliage of the gray—make a quaint coloring with the purple-blue. Blue and white is a color scheme frequently decided upon by the bride for her wedding colors, but as often called off for lack of flowers. From the time when the greenhouse-grown cornflowers come, in April or May, till frost, they can be counted by the thousand from a moderate sized stand.



For hand bouquets, arm baskets or trimmed hats, for bridesmaids or maids of honor, these flowers in blue are striking and beautiful and as capable of fine arrangement as any flower. The best ferns to use with them are the several smaller varieties of pteris fronds. With other, smaller, old-fashioned garden flowers, like candytuft, alyssum and mignonette, they make a cool, quaint centerpiece for a summer luncheon.

A Useful Shade of Blue.

The blue ones are just the color for the blue of "Old Glory" and for a G. A. R. shield, or for an O. E. star. The same color in a wreath, with a spray of wheat, makes a rich piece for an elderly person. For sprays and casket covers they should be prepared and arranged in the same manner as sweet peas.

With such dainty white flowers as achilleas and gypsophilas, blue cornflowers make a pleasing arrangement. On a solid pillow, panel a section with cornflowers, bordered on each side with fern leaves. Across the entire length throw a loose spray of light pink roses, asters, lilies, dahlias, or other large flowers of wiry stem, which have the proper color with the blue and white.

Gertrude Blair.

Wedding Bouquet of Valley and Cattleyas.

HARDY PERENNIALS.

Pyrethrums and Bell Flowers.

Few hardy perennials are of greater value for cutting than Pyrethrum roseum. The single varieties are easily raised from seed and the doubles by division in late summer. I have often thought there was a future for these flowers if forced. I saw flowers in early April which were wonderfully fine, grown in this way. In many states pyrethrums flower for Memorial day and certainly few flowers are better adapted for bouquet work than they, as the flowers have a wide range of colors. Now is a good time to sow seeds to get strong plants in 1912.

Campanula Medium is by far the finest of the bell flower family. For pot culture it is superb, reaching a perfection when thus grown that would be impossible outdoors during a dry season. The double flowered varieties are too heavy. The singles and calycanthemas, hose-in-hose as they are popularly termed, are charming and anyone with a batch of these around Memorial day can get good money for the flowers, even if the plants do not captivate someone's eyes. It is not yet too late to sow Canterbury bell seed. Do not, however, put off the sowing much longer. The little Carpathian bell flower, in blue and white shades of color, is now flowering and will continue to do so until fall. It is one of the most satisfactory edging plants we have and also makes an ideal subject for the rock garden. The persicifolia section will be in flower in a few days. The single forms come in several shades of blue and pure white. Of the doubles Moerheimi and humosa are splendid, especially the latter, which is blue, while Moerheimi is pure white.

Violas and Lupines.

Viola cornuta, blue, and its white form, V. cornuta alba, have no equals as edging or groundwork plants. Blooming, as they do, the whole summer and being perfectly winter hardy, no one need feel diffident about growing them. They propagate easily from root division or cuttings. This is better than from seed. A large proportion will not come true as seedlings, too many resembling the larger bedding violas in size and color, and while such tufted violas as Admiration, Blue Perfection, Papilio and others are fine for bedding, they lack the beauty of the true cornuta type, being too much like pansies, while the cornutas are like large violets.

How stately and beautiful are the perennial lupines in early June! There are blue, several shades; white, pink and rosy red shades; the newer forms, roseus, Pink Beauty and Moerheimi, are all pink or rose in color. For massing effects few perennials can equal these in beauty and they are so good for cutting that it is surprising they are hardly ever seen in a florist's establishment, much less in any retailer's windows. Seed sown now will give big plants for flowering next season. Some of the stronger seedlings may even flower the same fall. Lupines are one of the really ironclad herbaceous perennials.

Some others of the early June perennials are: Papaver orientale, of which the dark variety Parkmanni is perhaps the best; Hemerocallis flava, H. Middendorfii, H. aurantiaca major; Hesperis matronalis, sweet williams, Thermopsis Caroliniana; Lynchnis Haageana and its hybrids and L. Viscaria flore pleno; Trollius Asiaticus excelsior, deep orange, charming; Spiræa astilboides, S. Japonica, S. Aruncus; Polemonium cæruleum, P. Richardsoni; doronicum in variety, Harpur Crewe being the best; Incarvillea Delavayi, Clematis recta, Aster alpinus, Anthericum Liliastrum major, Dianthus plumarius, some of the earlier delphiniums and, of course, peonies in abundance.

ORCHIDS

Cattleyas.

June is a month when orchid flowers usually are fairly abundant, much more so than in April, and this year some of the big city markets have been overstocked with cattleyas for some weeks. The demand in the hot months is not by any means equal to that in the cooler months, when labiatas and Trianæs are in season, but there is now more or less demand for orchids the year around, especially in the larger cities, and the grower who would cater to the public taste should be prepared to supply at least a few of the summer varieties.

C. Mossiæ is now on the wane. It is by far the freest flowering of the early summer cattleyas. Any repotting should be done now and care should be taken to water more sparingly until new roots are being freely produced. The temptation to water in hot weather is irresistible for those whose experience in orchid culture is limited, and it is hard to convince even those who are good growers of other varieties of plants that even in the hottest weather newly potted stock must be watered with extreme caution. Especially is this necessary where the houses are quite heavily shaded. Use the hose, however, freely among the pots on bright days; on cloudy days little damping down is necessary. Some top ventilation should be left on the houses both night and day now. Cattleyas dislike a close, stuffy atmosphere. It weakens them, and if there is much humidity in the atmosphere it causes roots to push outside the pots and baskets, rather than in the compost, and cattleyas with a wealth of aërial roots may interest novices, but no good grower wants to see them, as the flowers from such plants are of poor quality.

We get hot, bright days in summer, when a good, heavy shade on the glass seems welcome. There are spells, however, of dark, gloomy weather when we wish the glass was clear. Those who can afford it and use cloth blinds on rollers, or lath shades, have a great advantage, as they can give a maximum of light when it is most needed. The lath shades are much used in Europe and are coming into use here. Their initial cost, however, prevents their extended use. Heavy shade gives us green-bulbed, green-foliaged cattleyas. These, however, do not flower so well as those grown in stronger light.

C. Trianæ, C. labiata and C. Schrœderæ will now be making roots quite freely and the water supply for them should be increased gradually. Give all of them the lightest possible location. These and, in fact, all cattleyas and lælias enjoy a syringing overhead about the middle of the afternoon on hot days.

The cattleya fly has been previously referred to in these columns. It is the worst foe orchid cultivators have to fight. It seems wicked to cut away handfuls of fine growths as they are just starting, but it is the only true remedy. Watch for the swollen growths and cut off and destroy them before the flies can hatch out and escape, or the damage will be greatly extended. C. labiata is headquarters for cattleya fly, but any of the short-bulbed section, as well as some lælias and epidendrums, are also attacked. Long-bulbed cattleyas, such as Harrisoniæ, Bowringeana, etc., are less attacked. Persistent fumigation with a powerful nicotine extract will account for some flies, but cutting off the young growths is the best remedy, murderous as it may appear.

Cypripediums.

With a few exceptions, cypripediums enjoy a moister, warmer and shadier house than cattleyas. They also do well in small, stuffy structures, while cattleyas enjoy larger, airier ones. Thrips, if it gets a foothold now, will rapidly disfigure the foliage on many varieties. Syringing, sponging and dipping in tobacco water are necessary to keep it away, or to fight it should it appear. Plants of the insigne section do particularly well in cooler quarters than many other varieties. A brick frame, where they can be elevated on a stage over a good bed of coal ashes, is an ideal location. Here they can be freely syringed and given all necessary ventilation. Keep them close to the light. In the case of plants having the pots full of roots, supply weak cow manure water once a week. Green-leaved cypripediums, such as insigne, Sallieri, villosum, Charlesworthii, etc., grow best in good fibrous loam, while the variegated leaved sorts rather like a fair amount of osmunda fiber mixed with the loam. Unlike the cattleyas, the lady's slippers want a fair supply of water at the roots, even in the so-called resting period.

Odontoglossums.

The repotting of odontoglossums should now be completed. Filling the pots one-third full of crocks and using rather soft osmunda fiber, with a little chopped, fresh sphagnum, gives an ideal compost. It is also best to round the compost above the rims of the pots. Low potting is not to be recommended for orchids. It is well to have the bulbs level with or just clear of the tops of the pots. Odontoglossums should now be in their summer quarters. A north house with blinds, a span lath house without glass, a sunken pit—any place, in fact, where as low a temperature as possible is obtainable, with the necessary light—will answer. Some day artificial refrigeration may make it possible to grow these most beautiful of all orchids as we see them in Europe.

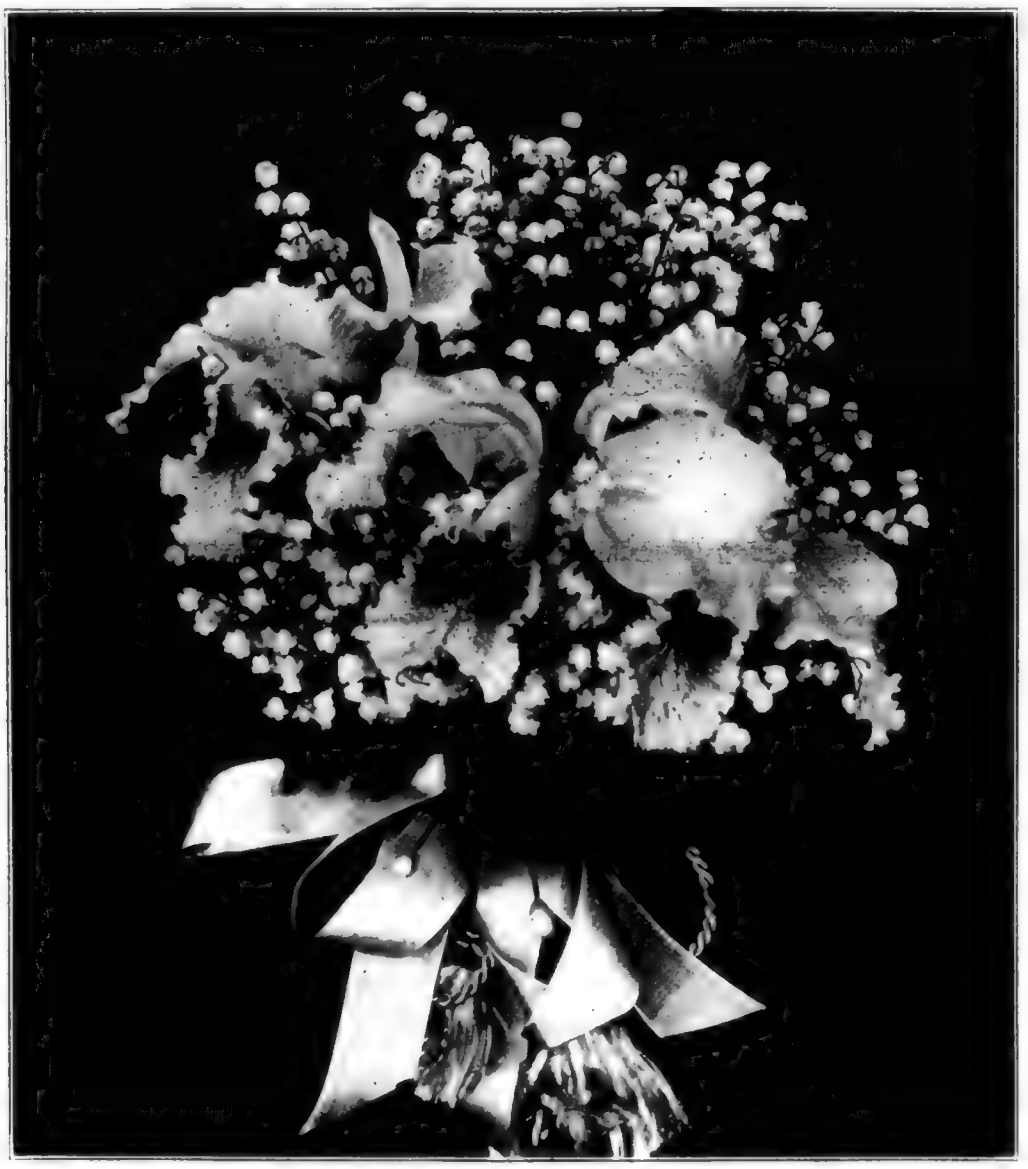
gether, fill these loops with thistle down or milkweed down, and let them hang as they will among the ends. Talk about your atmosphere effects!

Now that balls are in favor—and may they long stay there—make some of this kind for table decorations to use with cornflower centerpieces, or tie a basket handle with chiffon loops filled with the down.

For Weddings.

Speaking of near relatives which may be drawn into the scheme, there are other interesting centaureas, among them the large double white and the garden dusty miller or Centaurea gymnocarpa. These two—the flower of the white and the foliage of the gray—make a quaint coloring with the purple-blue. Blue and white is a color scheme frequently decided upon by the bride for her wedding colors, but as often called off for lack of flowers. From the time when the greenhouse-grown cornflowers come, in April or May, till frost, they can be counted by the thousand from a moderate sized stand.



For hand bouquets, arm baskets or trimmed hats, for bridesmaids or maids of honor, these flowers in blue are striking and beautiful and as capable of fine arrangement as any flower. The best ferns to use with them are the several smaller varieties of pteris fronds. With other, smaller, old-fashioned garden flowers, like candytuft, alyssum and mignonette, they make a cool, quaint centerpiece for a summer luncheon.

A Useful Shade of Blue.

The blue ones are just the color for the blue of "Old Glory" and for a G. A. R. shield, or for an O. E. star. The same color in a wreath, with a spray of wheat, makes a rich piece for an elderly person. For sprays and casket covers they should be prepared and arranged in the same manner as sweet peas.

With such dainty white flowers as achilleas and gypsophilas, blue cornflowers make a pleasing arrangement. On a solid pillow, panel a section with cornflowers, bordered on each side with fern leaves. Across the entire length throw a loose spray of light pink roses, asters, lilies, dahlias, or other large flowers of wiry stem, which have the proper color with the blue and white.

HARDY PERENNIALS.

Pyrethrums and Bell Flowers.

Few hardy perennials are of greater value for cutting than Pyrethrum roseum. The single varieties are easily raised from seed and the doubles by division in late summer. I have often thought there was a future for these flowers if forced. I saw flowers in early April which were wonderfully fine, grown in this way. In many states pyrethrums flower for Memorial day and certainly few flowers are better adapted for bouquet work than they, as the flowers have a wide range of colors. Now is a good time to sow seeds to get strong plants in 1912.

Campanula Medium is by far the finest of the bell flower family. For pot culture it is superb, reaching a perfection when thus grown that would be impossible outdoors during a dry season. The double flowered varieties are too heavy. The singles and calycanthemas, hose-in-hose as they are popularly termed, are charming and anyone with a batch of these around Memorial day can get good money for the flowers, even if the plants do not captivate someone's eyes. It is not yet too late to sow Canterbury bell seed. Do not, however, put off the sowing much longer. The little Carpathian bell flower, in blue and white shades of color, is now flowering and will continue to do so until fall. It is one of the most satisfactory edging plants we have and also makes an ideal subject for the rock garden. The persicifolia section will be in flower in a few days. The single forms come in several shades of blue and pure white. Of the doubles Moerheimi and humosa are splendid, especially the latter, which is blue, while Moerheimi is pure white.

Violas and Lupines.

Viola cornuta, blue, and its white form, V. cornuta alba, have no equals as edging or groundwork plants. Blooming, as they do, the whole summer and being perfectly winter hardy, no one need feel diffident about growing them. They propagate easily from root division or cuttings. This is better than from seed. A large proportion will not come true as seedlings, too many resembling the larger bedding violas in size and color, and while such tufted violas as Admiration, Blue Perfection, Papilio and others are fine for bedding, they lack the beauty of the true cornuta type, being too much like pansies, while the cornutas are like large violets.

An Exceptionally Fine Plant of Cattleya Labiata, That Best of Florists' Orchids.

Plants with a growth of nice sphagnum in their pots look fresh and inviting. The moss, however, makes an ideal home for the small shell snails, which find the young flower spikes on these and some oncidiums toothsome morsels. Ventilate the odontoglossums freely at night, especially at the close of hot days, and give them a little sun before pulling down and after drawing up the shades.

BENCHING YOUNG STOCK.

With the passing of Memorial day and the clearing out of many bench crops, the work of emptying, repairing and refilling the benches for mums will now occupy considerable time. The compost should have been prepared some time ago. Far too often it is not mixed until the planting time arrives, and frequently manure not properly decomposed is added. Far better plant in comparatively poor soil and feed well from the surface, rather than place the roots in direct contact with fresh manure.

The distance apart to plant depends on the variety, also on whether the plants are to carry one, two or three flowers. Small-foliaged varieties, like Ivory, do well as close as 6x6 inches; other varieties 6x8 inches or 8x10 inches. If for exhibition purposes, more space than this is needed, but planting for show blooms should have been completed before now.

Where the plants have become somewhat potbound, loosen the balls of earth with a pointed stick before planting. Keep the surface soil well stirred and syringe freely. Any necessary disbudding should be done at planting time and the staking should be attended to just as soon as possible. Every year this work is put off and put off, and when staking is finally done the plants are little short of an interminable tangle.

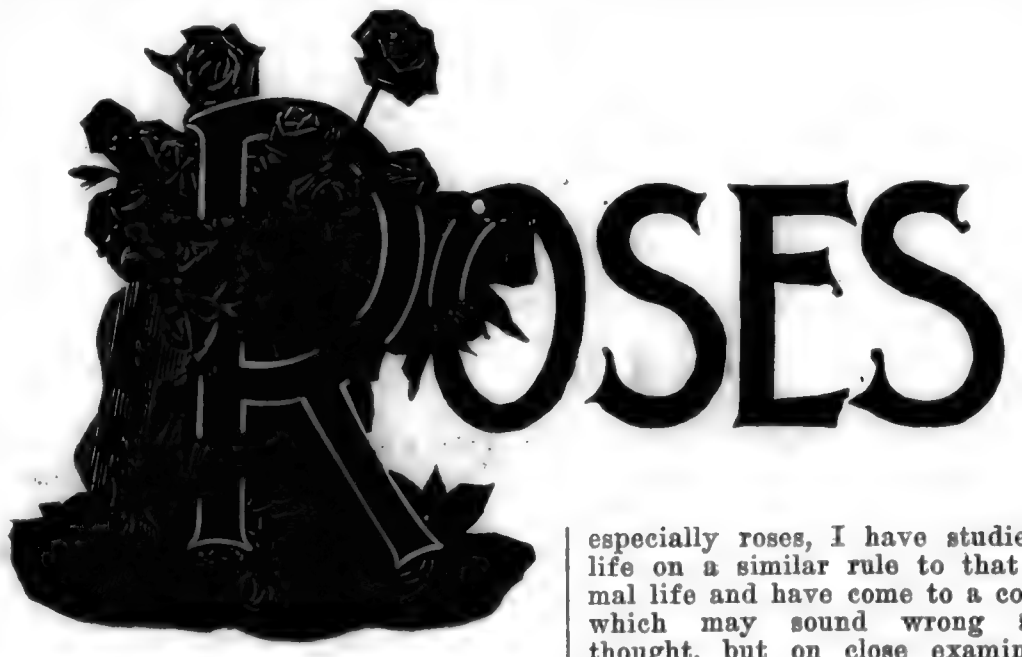
In the cities there is an increasing call for sprays in preference to single blooms, and where customers want these it will pay the country florist to cater to the demand. Also, do not forget the singles, which are steadily growing in favor. These, if benched now, or even a month hence, will give beautiful sprays, and for decorative effects these are in many ways much to be preferred to the doubles.

MUMS IN LETTUCE SOIL.

Please give us some advice about the treatment of our chrysanthemums. We wish to grow two flowers to a plant. They were potted off in due time and have been growing in a house without heat for about a month and a half. We have now benched them and they are fine looking plants. They comprise two varieties, Dr. Enguehard and Bonnaffon. The plants are about four inches high. Should these be topped once more or left to grow right along? We had no cow manure and so we used well decayed horse manure, putting two inches of it in the bottom of the bench. We grew two or three crops of lettuce in the soil. Are the plants likely to produce good flowers? We wish to feed with liquid manure. D. & F.

I do not see why the plants should need to be pinched back, provided they have four or five feet of head room. Bonnaffons that are four inches high June 1 will not go much over three feet, though the Enguehards will probably go to five feet, if left to grow right along as suggested. I do not see but what the well decayed horse manure is almost as good as cow manure, for mixing with the soil.

As to growing two or three crops of lettuce in the same soil before planting the chrysanthemums, I have seen good results when the plants have been so treated, if the soil after the last crop had been permitted to sweeten out nicely. At the same time, first-class growers seem to be unanimous in saying that a different crop should have new soil. The mum is not so particular in this respect as the rose or carnation, if ample liquid fertilizer is supplied after the plants have become well established. Chas. H. Totty.



THE IRIS.

The iris family is an indispensable one in every garden. The Germanica section comes in specially useful for cutting at Memorial day. The earliest to flower, and one of the best, is Florentina alba, pure white, free flowering. The old Mme. Chereau is still not to be despised. Mrs. H. Darwin is a splendid pure white. Queen of May is one of the best pinks, suffused with lavender. The pallida section is the tallest and most stately, Dalmatica attaining a height of three feet or more. Its lovely lavender blue flowers rivet attention at once. Glory of Hillegom, clear porcelain blue, is a fine form. The number of German irises is legion, but the foregoing short list will be found a good boiled down selection for florists.

Immediately following the German iris in flowering comes the Hispanica section. Many people still labor under the delusion that these are tender, whereas they need no winter protection and are as hardy as oak trees. They are the best of the whole iris family for cutting and if left undisturbed will flower year after year, all the attention needed being a light winter mulch of rotted manure to enrich the ground. Excellent varieties are: Chrysolora, British Queen, Midley, Louise, Belle Chinoise and Cajanus.

Following right after the Spanish iris comes the Anglica section, not so well known as they should be. They are just as hardy as the Hispanicas, are rather stockier growers and carry somewhat larger flowers. The variety Mont Blanc, pure white, is one of the best. Another iris not of a bulbous nature, which all florists should have a good batch of, is Iris Siberica Snow Queen, one of the finest perennials for cutting. The spikes are long and the flowers the reverse of stiff and heavy; nothing better for design work is to be found in the whole iris family.

THOUGHTS FOR ROSE GROWERS.

[A paper by W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, read before a joint meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club and the Chicago Florists' Club, at Milwaukee, Wis., June 1, 1911.]

When our president asked me to give a paper on roses, I believe that he expected me to give something besides the general rules of growing roses, and in giving this paper I am trying to comply with his request. If this paper proves a disappointment, I hope it will at least suggest new thoughts in regard to plant life, and if it does that I shall feel that I have fulfilled my mission.

In treating plants in general, and especially roses, I have studied plant life on a similar rule to that of animal life and have come to a conclusion which may sound wrong at first thought, but on close examination I think you will find it not far wrong.

We have been told that plants require so much nitrogen, so much potassium and so much phosphorus, and that by giving them that much, with enough water to dissolve it, we will get the desired results. But do we? Now, take animal life. Does an animal or human being absorb all it takes in? Evidently not, for if it did there would be no manure, or if there were any manure it would be of no use for feeding plants. We are told to drink three pints of water per day. Does the body absorb it? No. The most of it is taken to remove impurities from the system. I believe the same is true of plants. The nearer we come to giving plants the exact amount of food and water that they require, the poorer is the result. Therefore I believe that plants should be fed and watered as liberally as animals, expecting that the surplus will be employed in purifying the system of the plant, as it purifies the system of the animal. Some plants require more and some less. I believe the rose is one that requires more.

Avoiding Extremes.

This, of course, does not mean that the feeding and watering cannot be overdone. On the contrary, a plant can as easily be overfed as an animal, or more easily, and here is where a good many mistakes are made. No man would think of consuming enough food at one time to last a week. Neither should anyone try to give a rose, growing in a greenhouse and yielding four to six crops a year, enough food to last during that time, or a quarter of that time.

This is where we find Killarney roses and other roses of that class the most sensitive. These roses are gross feeders; at the same time they are the most easily overfed. They like lots of water, but are the first to suffer from sour or stagnant soil, and there is nothing that will put soil more quickly or more surely in such a condition than giving it too much water, for that is the one way of closing up all the pores in the soil and making it keep every particle of impurity that the plant throws off. I firmly believe that a rose or any other plant throws off impurities, the same as an animal, and while these impurities may be useful to some other plant they are the death of the plant that throws them off. Therefore I believe, as I have said before, that a plant should be fed and watered just as liberally as an animal, expecting it to take out of the soil only that part of the nourishment that it requires.

Planting.

In growing roses I find that those which are planted in the benches in early spring, before the hot weather starts in, irrespective of their size at the time they are planted, will make a much stronger and larger growth than plants planted during the heat of summer, and I believe in planting young plants. There is more gained by throwing out old plants in spring, when they are about through doing their best, and replanting with young stock, than by waiting until the spring has glutted the market and the hot weather is making it almost unprofitable to grow them any longer.

The Soil.

There has been some discussion lately regarding soil from bottom lands for roses, as if this were a new idea, but some of the most successful rose growers have been using such soil for years, either piling it up in the fall or spreading it out on high ground and allowing the frost to work through it during the winter, then mixing it with manure and fertilizer in the spring before taking it off the field. But whether it is soil from high or low ground, the main thing is that it be virgin soil, or at least soil that has never been used for roses before, and has lain in grass at least three or four years before using.

Diseases.

One of the greatest of the rose growers' enemies, if not the greatest, is mildew, and it is also one of the hardest to fight. About the only way to conquer it is practically to keep firing the year around and to keep sulphur on the pipes. Of course, houses built on high and sandy soil have little trouble in this direction, as compared with those built on low and marshy places, where there is heavy dew during the summer. But as long as the plants are kept in good growing condition and have sufficient nourishment there is never great danger from mildew.

Thrips.

I want to mention in conclusion a subject that is dear not only to rose growers, but to all florists just now—dear not to their hearts, but to their pocketbooks—and that is thrips. We are told by some that the only way to kill them is to smoke until we are blue in the face and the plants black. Others say to burn red pepper and many others to spray with nicotine solutions, but for myself I have found one remedy, and only one. That is Paris green and brown sugar. If that does not kill them, it is simply because the plants were not sprayed evenly enough and the thrips could not reach the sugar, for they will go for it if they can get to it. Entomologists tell us that this pest is a sucking insect and therefore poison has no effect on it, but when we look at a fine crop of Beauties all chewed to pieces we feel tempted to differ with them, for the insect must certainly attack the tissue of the flower to produce such effect.

GROWTHS ON CARNOT STEMS.

I am sending under separate cover a small Carnot rose with a peculiar growth that looks like a bur on the stem. It is something new to me, and I have been growing roses for many years. Will you diagnose the case and tell me what it is? I did not notice it until I had cut the rose, or would have let it grow. The shoot started at the ground and was cut off outdoors.

E. M. H.

The growths, or "burs," as you fittingly characterize them, are certainly curious. They are nothing, however, that you want to endeavor to perpetuate. Cut these swellings open with a knife and you will find an active little caterpillar inside. I have not previously seen this same pest on roses, but it is found on a number of plants. The only remedy I can suggest is to cut off and burn all wood similarly affected.

C. W.

DIRECTION OF HOUSES.

I recently bought a block of houses which are parallel with the adjoining street and which run in a general direction from east to west, but slant slightly southward toward the west end. That is, they run neither straight east and west nor from northeast to southwest, but between these two directions, at an angle of perhaps only 15 degrees from the direct east and west line. What do you think of that direction? Would it be advisable for me to add more houses south of the present ones and at the same slant? I am located in central Indiana.

W. H.

While on some accounts it is better to have the houses run either east and west or north and south, the slight variation in the present case will not make much difference, and by some that little would be considered an advantage, as the houses would get more of the sun in the early morning, while at noon, when the sun is often too strong, the slight twist given the houses toward the east would bring the rays at an angle with the glass, and there would be more shade from the sashbars. On this account it can be said that the proposed plan for locating the houses has some advantages and no serious objections.

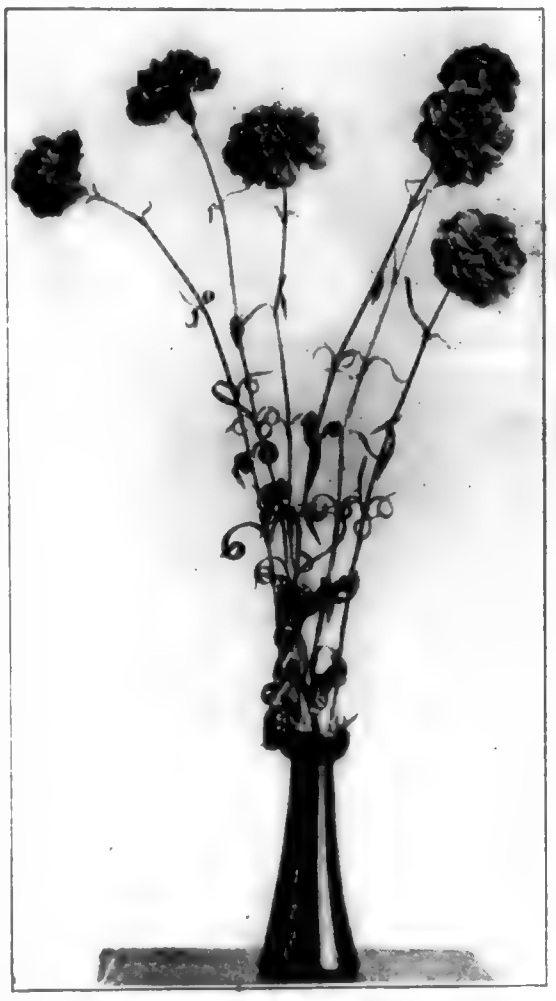
Carnations

BARSON'S SEEDLING.

Charles Barson, of Ossining, N. Y., has this season been sending cut blooms of a new pink seedling carnation to Gunther Bros., New York, who have found the variety not only an excellent seller but a splendid keeper. Mr. Barson has decided to disseminate the seedling, which is not yet named, in the season of 1912. He has worked up considerable stock. The color is a deep rose pink and the blooms are of the largest size, with serrated edge and well built center. Mr. Barson describes the plant as exceptionally easy to grow, the blooms being carried on long, strong stems, some flowers being cut which stood more than four feet above the soil in the bench. He has found that it does not burst its petals, except to an inconsiderable extent in the one month of January, and that in addition to having a good constitution, making no surplus grass, it is extremely easy to root.

BUILDING SOLID BEDS.

Please give me a plan for building solid beds for growing carnations.



O. F. C.

If you wish to build solid beds in the full sense of the term, there is nothing complicated about it. Simply build up your sides and fill in with good soil. The sides may be made of either lumber or concrete; the latter material is in great favor these days. Right at the start let me caution you to use only the best of material, whatever kind of bed you build. If concrete, then use good cement and clean gravel, mixing it in the proportions of one part cement to six parts gravel. Be sure you get it thoroughly mixed, as that is one of the most important points in making concrete. Build your forms the full length of the bed before you start filling in any grouting; then it can all set together in one piece. One inch is thick enough at the top, if you let it taper to four inches at the bottom.

If you use lumber for making your beds, then use red cedar for posts and pecky cypress for the siding. Set the posts on the outside of the bed, four feet apart and deep enough to stand the weight without tipping outward at the top after a while. The height of the sides will determine the depth you should set the posts into the ground. We build our beds according to this latter plan, but instead of filling solidly with soil, we fill in with cinders, leaving good four inches of room for soil, which we change each year just as you do with raised benches. We consider this the most economical bed for growing high grade stock. A. F. J. B.

FIVE ACRES OF CARNATIONS.

In recent issues of The Review there have been printed comments by the English trade visitors who made a trip of 3,000 miles through the United States a few weeks ago. One thing that every visitor commented on was the sight of five acres of carnations "under one roof"; apparently nothing the English visitors saw in this country impressed them so strongly as did the carnation range of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Morton Grove, Ill. Here are over 200,000 carnation plants, but not "under one roof" as Americans understand it; it is a range of ridge and furrow houses built after the style generally adopted by growers of cut flowers in the middle west. The accompanying illustration gives the view as the Englishmen saw it. The photograph is one made in the early part of the present season.

THE TEMPLE SHOW, LONDON.

England's Great Annual Event.

The annual Temple show, the great horticultural event of the year in England, was held May 23 to 25 and was again a triumph for horticulture. It was visited on the opening day by their Majesties the King and Queen, and by a great crowd of visitors, who were delighted with the representations of the best that cultural skill can produce in plants and flowers. How good that best is can only be realized by those who have seen a Temple show.

Orchids, roses, tulips, carnations, sweet peas and hardy flowers were magnificently shown by many growers. In orchids great banks of bloom, all arranged with a light and fairy touch, were staged by Sander & Sons, Bruges and St. Albans; Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, and C. Vuylstehe, Loochristy, Belgium.

Roses, especially ramblers, were superb, and among others who seemed to outshine all previous efforts were Hobbies, Ltd., Dereham; Paul & Son, Cheshunt; Wm. Paul & Son, Waltham Cross; Frank Cant & Co. and Ben Cant & Sons, Colchester, and G. Mount & Sons, Canterbury; also H. Cannel & Sons, strong with American Pillar.

Nothing Striking in New Carnations.

In carnations there were no particularly striking new varieties, but all the well-known favorites were well represented in huge vases of magnificent blooms from Stuart Low & Co.; C. Englemann, Saffron Walden; A. F. Dutton, Iver; H. Burnett, Guernsey; S. Mortimer, Farnham, and Young & Co., Cheltenham.

Sweet peas were superb from Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh; E. W. King & Co., Coggeshall, and from other noted growers.

May-flowering tulips were one of the decided hits of the show and there were grand collections from Alex. Dickson & Sons, Newtownards; Hogg & Robertson, Dublin; Barr & Sons, London, and R. H. Bath, Ltd., Wisbech.

Begonias of immense size, yet of refined form, were strongly in evidence from Blackmore & Langdon, Bath, and T. S. Ware, Ltd., Feltham.

The new marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander, in nicely flowered plants from Sander & Sons, was remarkably pretty.

"Five Acres of Carnations Under One Roof."

John Waterer, Bagshot, was in strong force with a massive rhododendron bank in which Corona was the newest feature. Pink Pearl, Prometheus and other telling subjects were well displayed.

Azaleas of the mollis type—a richly golden colored mound—were delightfully displayed by R. & G. Cuthbert, Southgate.

James Veitch & Sons, Ltd., were in the front rank with all classes of stove and greenhouse plants.

Hardy Flowers and Novelties.

In hardy flowers the exhibitors were many, the collections grand, and the rock garden style of exhibiting greatly admired. Among the notable exhibitors of these were Bakers, Wolverhampton; Amos Perry, Enfield; Kelway & Son, Langport; R. Wallace & Co., Colchester; W. Artindale & Son, Sheffield, and Carter & Co., London, with a Japanese garden.

Few certificates were given to new subjects of commercial value; the majority went to fanciers' or specialists' flowers. Among new or recently introduced subjects shown were Adiantum Glory of Moordrecht, or the Glory fern, from A. A. Fabius, Redlands; a new perpetual flowering pink, named Progress, from C. H. Herbert, Acochs Green; three fine zonal pelargoniums, His Majesty, Winter Cheer and Fiscal Reformer, from W. H. Page, Hampton, and a collection of trollius, fine seedlings, from Cocker & Sons, Aberdeen.

Bee.

Tampico, Ill.—Fred Shanks, of this town, is planning to erect a greenhouse in the coming fall and grow general stock for the trade.

AN ANGLO-AMERICAN DINNER.

The British horticultural traders who visited the United States in March met in London for a reunion dinner, May 24, and invited a number of friends so that they might entertain them with stories of their travels. The walls of the dining hall in Anderton's hotel were decorated with the British and American flags; so were the menu cards, and from beginning to end the proceedings were thoroughly Anglo-American. The menu, however, was British; there were no cocktails and no clam chowder, no iced water and no American Beauties.

J. S. Brunton discharged the duties of chairman and toastmaster and proposed the toasts of "King George V" and "President Taft," which were most enthusiastically responded to. He then briefly introduced the speakers in succession, namely, Messrs. Cull, Engelmann, Graves, Gunn, Prickett, Pratley and South, and America was their topic. Each dealt with a different phase of the trip and J. Simpson summed up by proposing the toast of "American Horticulture," with special reference to the florists' clubs that took the Britishers in hand. It was hoped that Julius Roehrs, who was in London earlier in the day, would attend and respond to the toast. J. Dimmock was commissioned to secure his presence, but both are busy men and both eluded the feast, to the disappointment of assembled guests. In their absence, W. Wells, of chrysanthemum fame, who visited America a year or two ago, was called upon to fill the breach and, for the time being posing as an American, he replied in racy style.

J. Brown proposed the toast of "The Ladies," delighting the company with his American experiences in which ladies played a part, and American ladies were, of course, "embraced" in the toast. In proposing "The Press," W. H. Page also included the American horticultural press and J. H. Dick replied. Altogether, America was fairly booming throughout the various speeches, but at the finish all agreed "there's no place like home." J. Pinches proposed the toast of "The Chairman" and the reunion dinner was voted a great success. Bee.

WHO OWNS THE AIR?

For years florists have contended that they control the air above their greenhouses, and in certain cases the courts have ruled that the consent of the property owner is necessary before a right of way may be had above the greenhouses. The theory of air control is to be put to a further test this week, according to the following press telegram from Boston:

"Peirce Bros., florists, will today ask the courts for an injunction to prohibit the airships which are to fly at Aviation park, in Waltham, this month, from flying over their property.

"The florists claim that should an airship fall on their glass greenhouses it would not only smash the structure but would also ruin many valuable plants which could never be replaced.

"The injunction brings up an entirely new phase in aero-navigation. Has an owner of property a right to say who shall fly through the air over his land? This question the court will be asked to decide.

"The injunction will make no difference in the coming meet. The flyers will proceed in other directions, although the course already planned would take the machines over the Peirce property."

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT.

[A paper by Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, June 6, 1911.]

It is often said that one is not in business for his health, but I believe the pursuit of horticulture is a vocation apt to render that particular blessing, and it therefore has lured to its fold many who have ventured without any prior experience, and through determination and prompted by a keen love for plants and flowers, have made partial if not complete success.

The trade journals have done much in bringing to us some knowledge of our fellow florists in our own land, and also those of Europe, often telling us how success is achieved by those who specialize, and what their beginnings have been. The mutual benefit of this open and free discussion has helped the commercial side of horticulture more than it is possible to tell. The broad standard of the profession today, largely due to the great advance of the past decade, has placed the grower and dealer before the public as important factors in the commercial world, created a demand for a higher grade of product, a more critical selection of what to grow, and a keener conception of what will satisfy the consumer.

A Help to Beginners.

I am frank to say that these are some of the salient points that I have learned since giving my entire attention to the business of a grower. I owe much to the trade papers for having kept me informed on many points, telling me how things are being done successfully by others who are struggling as I am. The information that I have gained has also been shared by a host of others throughout our land, both men and women, who have entered the profession as enthusiasts with little or no practical knowledge.

I was seeking health, I found it; should I not in turn be free to record my strongest sentiments in favor of the florists' business as a health giving vocation? I read with great interest the many notes concerning the women florists, not all of whom, perhaps, have entered the rank as I have, some, no doubt, being forced to continue the business left by a deceased husband, and with a family depending upon their efforts. These mothers have reason to believe that their experience, gained while working hand and shoulder with the breadwinner, has fitted them to continue, with equally good returns for their efforts.

I believe that women have a natural love for flowers, a more intense desire for everything that grows. A mother's instinct for nursing the tender growing child is also shown in her close attention to the growing plant, and when this care results in profit, and a close study shows what response the plants will give, then I believe that she is fitted to conduct a business successfully, and if she possesses some executive ability there is no reason why she should not be a profit-sharer in the profession. The foregoing introduction is my idea of the qualifications necessary to conduct a florist's business by either man or woman.

Specializing.

I say with pardonable pride that I started out as a specialist, and while this is the modern idea, I believe it is the best; it is better to do one thing well than to dabble in many things. So I resorted to violets and carnations, but a few other things have crept into my care and keeping, which I will touch on in a commercial way.

To bring about the results which necessity demanded, it was important to develop a few things needful for success, good soil, heating under proper control, cultivation and close attention. This could be done better by studying the habits of a few things than by launching heavily into a labyrinth of variety. My first beginning was very modest—having a special fondness for violets, I thought best to begin in a small way, yet large enough to know whether my extreme fondness for a vocation on which my mind was set would tire from the close care and attention which commercial growing required. I started in Atlantic City, N. J., with three sashes of violets. This very small beginning proved to me that violets had become a commodity and only needed producers, and having learned enough to convince me of that, I dared to venture deeper. The following year my equipment had grown to six sashes; so you will perceive that I had decided conclusively it was better to creep first, and my creeping was of long duration, yet I believe that violets have peculiarities which require several seasons to learn, to successfully overcome the troubles they yield to so easily.

Slow, Steady Growth.

My ambition and anxiety to launch heavily into the business was encouraged by my success in this small beginning, which was slow, yet entirely satisfactory, and my next venture was transferred from Atlantic City to Secane, Pa., where I purchased five acres of ground and erected two houses, 10x75 each. It is evident that my confidence had become fixed.

This area of glass would produce violets which must find a market, so a small shed was built over the boiler pit to be used as a workshop for preparing the stock for market, bunching violets, etc. This was also the place where every conceivable plan for better and larger equipment kept running through my mind in the hope that I could devote all of my time to commercial horticulture, as I had then decided that my intense love for flowers and their cultivation would never abate through even excessive labor, demanded by increased facilities. It was necessary to provide for a domicile, so I at once set to work making plans for a dwelling, which was built during the summer and ready for occupancy the next fall.

My first year with all these responsibilities was uphill work. I started with three varieties of violets, viz.: Luxonne, California and Lady Hume Campbell, double. I found the singles much better than the doubles, except in the spring. This, however, did not discourage me. I was preparing for better and greater things, and when the following fall arrived I had fine field-grown plants with which to fill my houses, and I was seized with that dominating desire, which seems to have a claim on every florist, of wanting more glass. I therefore purchased some sashes and also some Princess of Wales violets, mainly to give them a test, although I knew it was a good standard variety. These sashes gave me quite an extra area besides the houses, from which I reaped a good crop until Christmas, and then again in the spring.

One Variety Best.

My houses were heated with hot water, and while my boiler seemed small I felt that a little coaxing might induce it to perform greater work, so I procured more sashes, which with the help of the sashes I had would build a sash house. I then decided on one variety of violets, Princess of Wales, which I still grow, and discarded all the others.

My boiler experience is what might happen to any florist who is straining all parts of the business to do its best, but I have since learned that it is false economy to tax one boiler for all work—another important item learned by experience, but as I could not boast of a modern, up-to-date establishment, I had to resort to old-time methods.

The demand for my violets was greater than the supply and this was highly gratifying, not only from its remunerative point, but because I felt assured that I had correctly used the knowledge gained in my small beginning. Being only an amateur, this gave me courage.

The next year I enlarged my violet houses, secured a new boiler and dug a larger cellar, built a large new shed and constructed a new house, 25x125. I was told by experts that the house was not practical, "the glass was too far from the plants," and many other unsolicited suggestions were given, but my violets were the best and all theories were exploded, as the violets seemed to like their new quarters. I also grew asters in this house, and they were the finest in the market.

Carnations Added.

My stock was responding to the care which my knowledge prompted. I had already secured a good market for my product, and, like many, felt that my flowers were not good enough to be called first-class or No. 1, but I hoped that time and experience would create a demand for my special stock. My aim was high, and so should it be with everyone. I felt proud to think that my flowers would be exhibited in the leading shop windows, and was anxious that those which my care and coddling produced should be in demand by critical consumers. This and many other conditions have been the means of encouragement.

I then turned my attention to carnations, and purchased enough plants to fill my sash house, 12x40. I may have been particularly careful and not sufficiently daring in my ventures, but I was sure that I could study a few better than many, so I began with Joost and Queen Louise, and propagated enough from these plants to fill the large house by the following fall. My method of propagating was perhaps different from the usual system; a sand bed was prepared in one corner of my violet house and the carnations took nearly all winter to root, as the temperature was only 40 degrees at night. When they were rooted, they were put in flats, in soil without any fertilizer. My reason for doing this was to avoid the young, tender plants becoming affected by any disease.

Varieties Grown.

They were planted direct from the flats into the open field, which had been coated heavily with rotted stable manure and plowed under and kept cultivated through the season. The plants were in fine condition to be put into the house in September into solid beds. After they were established they were fed with ground bone. Ventilation was freely given during the day. My crop was good and continued to produce throughout the season. I then put up another house of even span, 35x100, and planted it with violets the first year, but I now grow carnations and sweet peas in it, together with another house alongside which I have recently built.

I have also added a propagating house, which is arranged to be converted into a growing house when wanted. The varieties of carnations grown by me are: Enchantress, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Beacon, Winsor, Mrs. Ward and Alma Ward. After venturing largely into construction from my point of view, I found many little drawbacks which I did not experience with my first venture with three and six sashes, and even the first house, but with the larger boiler pits I experienced the trouble of water gathering around the boiler, and a possibility of having fires extinguished during cold weather. I have since seen construction which would never be affected that way.

Stick to Essentials.

So with all these possible hindrances I gained experience and knowledge. My reason for adhering mostly to violets and carnations is probably like the mother who wanted her boy to be either a butcher or a baker. She said, "Everybody eats bread and meat, hence the need of the producer." I thought carnations and violets were so essential among flowers that I would make no mistake, and should I wish to visit growers for the purpose of learning, I would not need to go far away.

I have never been backward in asking questions of others who know much more than I do; much of the information regarding fertilizers and other necessities has been gained in this way, and while there are many adverse conditions, which in spite of close attention and hard work often cause losses, yet with it all I love my plants, the open air life, and I love the work and everything connected with it, for when I began, about nine years ago, I was in very poor health, and now I am well and strong.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The long drought is ended and the aster and gladiolus growers have more cheerful faces. The peonies also needed the splendid rains of the last few days. Everything was thirsty. The carnation plantings were not promising, but now the outlook is bright and confidence is returning.

In the cut flower market peonies dominate everything, for the supply is unlimited. Before Memorial day prices for the best arrivals, especially Festiva maxima, were satisfactory, but since the memorial demand was satisfied values have steadily fallen, until now $5 per hundred buys the best, and for the inferior grades even $1 per hundred is accepted. Many peony growers cut their stock too closely and too soon. Much complaint is made by the wholesalers because of this. Often the stock is unsalable at any price. This market will not absorb and dispose of poor grade stock of any kind when there is, as now, an abundance to select from.

There are few good American Beauties arriving and a few perfect buds last week sold at 25 cents, but there were not enough of them for even one store, and 15 cents seems top this week for ninety per cent of the so-called specials. The heads are small and of poor color. Of the other varieties of roses, a few top grade selections command a fair figure, but most of the stock arriving goes at the buyer's offer, much of it being sold in the original boxes. The long spell of hot, dry weather hastened the overflow. Few carnations now touch $2 and a lot of stock was cleaned up Saturday and Monday at 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred. Orchids were retailing at 20 cents at Gimbel's June 3, and the buyer picked them from the box, fine stock that is ordinarily worth 50 cents at wholesale. Not long ago two wholesale houses controlled the wholesale orchid trade of this city. Now every wholesaler seems to have a large supply of them. Lilies still are abundant. The short-stemmed stock has sold as low as $10 per thousand, and 4 cents seems to be the top. Valley seldom touches 2 cents. Most of it sells at $1 per hundred.

School commencements have hardly begun. The only uplifts possible to the market are the June weddings and the foreign travel. One retail house on Fifth avenue had over forty boxes of flowers for one steamer June 3. This is not an exceptional case. Every prominent retailer has his share for the many society people on their way to Europe and the coronation.

Various Notes.

Monday evening, June 12, the New York Florists' Club will hold its closing session for the season. The essay committee has secured two excellent speakers for the occasion, John G. Esler, of Saddle River, who will speak on "Hail," and L. W. C. Tuthill, who discourses on "Advertising." Discussion will follow these addresses. There will be exhibits of peonies and other flowers. Chairman Al. Rickards has some special titbits for the inner man, and the club will bowl at Thumm's alleys in the afternoon. The outing is only three weeks distant. June 28 is the day. Interest is general and Chairman Fenrich says the sale of tickets is most encouraging.

July 6 the Greek-American florists' outing takes place at Wetzel's, via steamer, as usual. Tickets are $3 and the committee says it will beat last year's big record. Messrs. Cotsonas, Lecakes, Fellouris, Nicholas and others of the prominent Greek wholesalers and retailers are booming the enterprise.

Saturday and Sunday, June 10 and 11, the plant and flower exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York takes place at Bronx park. A goodly list of prizes will reward exhibitors. A meeting of the society will be held in the Museum building at 3:30 p. m., June 10, followed by a public lecture on "The Royal Gardens of Kew, England," by Dr. William A. Murrill. The grounds of the garden will be then visited, with Geo. V. Nash as escort.

A. Cova, manager of the Greek-American Florists' Supply Co., leaves on a two months' purchasing trip in Europe on the President Grant, June 10.

G. G. Stumpp, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., with Mrs. Stumpp and their son, sails June 10 for a two months' tour of Europe.

C. C. Trepel is booked for the Continent. Mrs. Trepel, manager at the Loeser store in Brooklyn, leaves with the family next week for the Catskills. It is probable she will have charge of the Trepel store at Gimbel's, in Philadelphia.

M. C. Ebel, of Madison, president of the Aphine Mfg. Co., was in the city June 3, making arrangements for the introduction of his latest discovery, a mosquito banisher. Mr. Ebel has realized the acute sense of smell of the Jersey bird, and has invented a mixture of pungent odor that acts as a skidoo.

Phil. Einsman and one of his nine olive branches sail for Europe June 27.

Several New Yorkers will attend the exhibition of the American Peony Society at Philadelphia June 8 and 9.

Wednesday, June 14, the Yonkers Horticultural Society will hold its spring exhibition at Hollywood Inn.

John E. Lager, of Summit, N. J., is visiting his European friends.

Alex. McConnell's new store at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-ninth street is a gem, and he is well pleased with the location and the business there. The immense basement minimizes the inconvenience of smaller quarters in the store. Mr. McConnell contemplates a trip to the old country and his old home before the season wanes.

One of the force of Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn, is in the hospital there, recovering from an operation for appendicitis.

Nicholas Lecakes and family leave next week for a summer residence on his farm in Connecticut.

Kessler Bros. report the largest bedding and window box season they have ever known.

J. K. Allen is on deck again after quite a serious tussle with the grip.

A. L. Young has rented the entire building at 54 West Twenty-eighth street.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

In summing up the reports for Memorial day one must admit that it was the best for some years. Even with our early spring, there was no outdoor stock available; consequently the florists had it all their own way. But these conditions had their drawbacks, for the intense heat previous to May 30 took the "tuck" right out of the cut flowers. For local use this stock could be worked off nicely, but for the shipping trade it was unsatisfactory, indeed. Even when the cream of the stock was shipped, reports have it that about one-fourth was unfit to handle. Especially was this true of the carnations. Since then, owing to more favorable weather, stock has again picked up nicely, except sweet peas. It will be some time before sweet peas will again be plentiful. Indoor gladioli and the few local-grown peonies were readily disposed of.

Club Meeting.

The joint meeting of the Chicago and Milwaukee clubs, held June 1 at the Blatz hotel, was in all respects a grand success. C. C. Pollworth made the speech of welcome. After the meeting was called to order by President H. V. Hunkel, of the local club, a motion by C. Dallwig giving the Chicago club charge of affairs, with Mr. Philpott as president, was carried.

After routine business was transacted Mr. Keimel, of Chicago, read his most ably prepared paper on rose growing. After a short discussion, various members were called upon for remarks. In responding, James Currie, of Milwaukee, recently appointed park commissioner, clearly explained, among other things, what a great benefit the florists' business is to the public at large.

Some time was also spent on the topic of the fall flower shows. President Hunkel stated that the Milwaukee show would run from November 16 to 20, and asked that the Chicago florists, if possible, avoid having their show on those dates. C. C. Pollworth explained how it was impossible last year, with four large shows running on the same dates, to do justice to either side.

P. J. Foley, of Chicago, stated that, on the whole, florists are among the best classes of people to deal with, for, from his experience, if they have time enough they will eventually make good.

After the meeting, which adjourned at 10 p. m., a Dutch lunch was served, which seemed to strike the right spot. Good fellowship reigned till nearly midnight, at which time the Chicago members, forty-one strong, left on the chartered electric car for home.

Various Notes.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. states that the Decoration day business this year exceeded that of any since the firm has been in business; so it must have been fine.

The Edlefson-Leideger Co. was unusually well pleased with Decoration day business. While it is customary with them to close at noon on that day, they worked till late that evening preparing for the rush of funeral work the day following.

Wm. Zimmermann reports having sold out clean on Decoration day, and that is saying a whole lot, for he carries quite a supply continually.

Currie Bros. Co. reports fine business for last Tuesday and a steady stream of funeral work ever since; no let-up with them.

Holton & Hunkel Co. reports shipping trade fine. They have just finished planting their three new houses at the Brown Deer place with tea roses. The houses are each 29x215, with cement benches and truss construction.

At the C. C. Pollworth plant at Wauwatosa they have just completed three new houses, each 30x265, which they will plant with mums and use for young stock after the mum crop is gone. They, too, say shipping is keeping up finely.

Otto Grade, Jr., member of the Fox Point Floral Co., celebrated his engagement to Miss Louisa Schultz on Sunday, May 28. E. O.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was quite brisk last week. Memorial day, funeral work, weddings and commencements have kept the store men on the jump. The weather is the hottest experienced in June for years, and this has put a damper on the flower bed business, making this line quite slack since Memorial day.

Trade for May 30 was no better than last year in most cases, and it is thought that the automobile races, which drew a crowd of about 100,000 people, hurt the flower business to some extent. It was said that the cemetery was almost deserted in the afternoon, most of the people having gone to the races.

Stock was plentiful, with daisies, feverfew, candytuft, roses, lilies, carnations, iris and peonies to be had in quantities. Most of the peonies were from cold storage and were not altogether satisfactory.

Various Notes.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, has started building two 200-foot houses.

Someone touched Albert Pittet's cash drawer in the flower market for about $60 one day last week.

A. Wiegand & Sons had a busy day last week for the Tudor Hall commencement. They furnished about 200 bouquets for the graduates.

E. A. Nelson reports his Memorial day business satisfactory, having entirely cleaned up his stock.

John Rieman had the order for 100 magnolia wreaths for the Elks this year.

Herman Junge and Alfred Brandt spent several days in Chicago last week. They visited the greenhouses of Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Bassett & Washburn, as well as a number of the wholesalers. They were particularly impressed with the Morton Grove establishment. H. L. W.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business done for Decoration day this year was much better than the trade expected. The larger part of the business was in shipping to the small surrounding towns. The wholesale stores were busy all day long, and there was plenty of stock of almost anything seasonable. The greenhouse men say they did a rushing plant trade, but, taken all in all, the local business for this day was not as good as in former years.

Last week business slowed up, the hot weather having this effect. The wholesale market had a great deal of stock on hand daily, but of poor quality; roses, especially, were scarce in the first grades. Carnations are small, with the prices not over $10 in thousand lots. There are plenty of lilies, both Harrisii and candidum. Sweet peas have been a glut. These, with a lot of outdoor stock, make up the daily market. In greens, there is plenty of good smilax and ferns.

Various Notes.

William Bouche has been appointed consulting landscape architect of University City. A more capable man could not be found for the position.

Kalisch Bros. had a $500 contract for planting Belleview garden and made an attractive job of it. They report a better Decoration day business than last year. They will rebuild their show house this summer, with a large plate glass front.

C. Young & Sons Co. had a heavy Decoration day business, with plenty of shipping orders for plants and cut flowers. Their special sales day on plants at their greenhouses has been a great success.

The four wholesale houses have made an early start this year with early closing. From June 1 to September 1 they will close each day at 5 p. m. and on Saturday at 12 m., so the local trade will have to act accordingly, and their employees are happy.

George Waldbart had an order for a large floral balloon last week for Balloon Pilot Von Puhl, who was killed at Denver. The cost was $100.

All officers of the S. A. F. were mailed invitations for the St. Louis Florists' Club's twenty-fifth anniversary banquet, which takes place June 28. The president of the Chicago Florists' Club was also sent an invitation and the members all hope they will come.

Miss Mary Ostertag will this week move her store from 3861 Olive street to 4947 Delmar boulevard. The new store is in the Delmar building and the location is considered a good one for a flower establishment.

Harry Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Mfy., Detroit, is in the city this week calling on the trade.

Mr. Jenecke is now assistant superintendent at the Missouri Botanical Garden and will make an able aide to Superintendent Irish.

Thomas Carr, D. Bova and Miss Frances Wilkerson, who run plant and cut flower stands at Union Market, say they had a big run of business Decoration day.

Now that the bowling season is closed, the bowlers will not attempt to do any practicing these hot days, as no team will represent St. Louis at Baltimore next August. The chance for the florists getting together again next fall seems good.

Ostertag Bros. did all the window-box planting at the Jefferson hotel and did excellent work. The cost was $450.

William Smith, Will Ossick, Paddy Patten and Frank Windler, all of the Smith Wholesale Floral Co., have organized a quartet and will make their first appearance at the florists' picnic. They are now rehearsing Paddy's new song, "Watch Us Grow." This song will be dedicated to the Florists' Club.

The National Clock & Electric Mfg. Co. is now open for business at the new location, 1906 Pine street. The firm has fully recovered from the recent fire at the old plant and is prepared to furnish greenhouse temperature alarm clocks on a much larger scale.

The A. W. Schisler Grain Co. has moved into its new location, at 708-710 North Fourth street, a block south from the old stand. The new move gives them the much needed room for their fast growing business.

H. M. Donbrava has been appointed assistant city forester to succeed W. E. Jordan, and Rudolph Windt was appointed an inspector. A. Y. Ellison was held over as an inspector.

Henry Montaine, a florist of Florisant, St. Louis county, while visiting here last week was held up on a street car and relieved of his pocketbook, containing $19.

David Geddes, head of the design work at Mrs. M. M. Ayers' place, on Grand avenue, has made application for membership in the St. Louis Florists' Club.

The Missouri Botanical Garden, better known as Shaw's Garden, had its first Sunday opening of the year June 4. The attendance was not so great as usual, owing to the intense heat. There were only 7,794 visitors during the day. Superintendent Irish and a host of students and employees were on hand to show the visitors over the grounds in groups. The record for a Sunday attendance is 33,690. The garden is in splendid shape and many new things have been added. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Trade remained fairly good the balance of the week following Memorial day and the present week sees business holding up well. Stock is not plentiful and prices on the whole are satisfactory. We have had comparatively cool weather, which has been a boon to both growers and shippers. Roses are not seen in large numbers and there is little surplus. Carnations are rather scarce and are cleaning up finely. Fair Maid is now showing up well from several growers. This remains a popular summer sort here. Sweet peas have advanced in price and the supply of good flowers is adequate. The Spencer varieties sell as high as $1.50 per hundred.

Large gladioli are more plentiful. They sell better, on the whole, than the small sorts. Valley has been a little druggy. With the passing of the week outdoor supplies will disappear and give a better field to the forced article. Peonies as yet are not abundant and sell well. The crop of these, both in quantity and quality, is much below par. Such flowers as feverfew, snapdragons and ten weeks' stocks are little wanted. Quite a few hardy flowers, such as German iris and pyrethrums, are seen. Cattleyas are selling better, as they usually do when in small supply. There is a good call for green stock for wedding decorations.

Various Notes.

The Montrose Greenhouses have had a successful season with roses. They are still cutting flowers of good quality. Eber Holmes states that benching is well advanced. They are planting 8,000 of the dark variety of Killarney which originated here and was introduced by A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell.

Fred H. Abraham has succeeded John A. Booth on the E. V. R. Thayer estate in South Lancaster, where at one time E. O. Orpet had charge.

Drought conditions continue to prevail in New England. We have been spared the excessive heat which other sections have had, but the lack of rain is ruining many crops. This added to the veritable plague of cutworms is making the lot of growers of outdoor plants a trying one.

A fine display of early peonies and other seasonable flowers and plants will be seen at Horticultural hall June 10 and 11 on the occasion of the annual rhododendron show.

E. K. Farr, of Stoneham, is sending to the Boston Coöperative Market a fine assortment of sweet peas on long stems, which are being eagerly snapped up.

J. H. Leach & Son, of North Easton, have an extra fine grade of lily of the valley at present. Their new carnation, Pink Supreme, still arrives in fine shape and it seems likely to be as good a summer as winter variety.

In Henry R. Comley's windows at 6 Park street this week were noted Clerodendron Balfouri well flowered, passifloras, Canterbury bells, vases of Calla Elliottiana and splendid Spencer sweet peas.

Wilfrid Wheeler, of Concord, is having a fine cut of white gladioli, which sell well at 2 Park street.

Walter Holden, one of the popular salesmen at the Park Street Market, is at Sebago Lake, Me., for two weeks' salmon fishing.

Owing to the sickness of William F. Anderson, W. H. Elliott's manager at Madbury, N. H., the base ball game scheduled to take place between the Boston Flower Exchange and Madbury teams did not take place June 3. It will be played later.

Charles Evans, of Watertown, and Miss E. Brown, of Waltham, were married June 3. The happy couple spent a week's honeymoon in New York and vicinity. On his return, Mr. Evans found his stall at the Boston Flower Exchange well decorated by his confreres. The composition on some of the posters was both original and unique. Mr. and Mrs. Evans were well remembered with gifts from a large circle of friends.

Kidder Bros., of Lincoln, who are noted violet specialists, have now an extra fine pick of Fair Maid and Queen carnations. They will, however, drop carnations and grow no flowers but violets next year.

Henry L. Shedd, of South Lowell, is sending a fine assortment of carnations at present to the Boston Coöperative Market.

Miss Washington, who succeeded to the business of her father, the late B. F. Washington, of North Stoughton, is bringing in among other flowers German iris, salpiglossis, coreopsis, Canterbury bells and gladioli. These are sold at 2 Park street.

The Willow Hill Greenhouses, of West Roxbury, have among the best marguerites now arriving.

Edward Wood, of Lexington, has some splendid double peonies, which are quickly bought, as are his Spencer sweet peas.

Adolph E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, is cutting the last of his crop of pink snapdragon. He has just filled orders for rooted cuttings to go to Iowa, Michigan and other distant points. Many visitors noted this snapdragon at the time of the national show.

Some excellent vocalists are engaged for the ladies' night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, to be held June 20. Spratt, of Allston, who catered at the club reception at the national show, will furnish the collation.

The H. E. Fiske Seed Co. reports a brisk business in both bedding-out and vegetable plants. Their seed sales have surpassed expectations.

Chester Paine, of Randolph, journeyed to the Pine Tree state this week and was married June 6. He has a handsome cottage beautifully furnished for his bride. His many friends wish both long life and happiness.

John Barr, of South Natick, continues to send in carnations of really remarkable quality for the season. Mr. Barr never seems to have any seconds.

Thomas Cox, of Dorchester, is in the market with a grand lot of single and double peonies. He still has some excellent hydrangeas, but the supply is running low.

The Mishawum Flower Co., through J. M. Cohen, disposes of 4,000 to 10,000 sweet peas daily. Among their carnations Fair Maid is now showing up particularly well.

William Patterson, Jr., of Wollaston, will soon lead a bride to the altar. He has already purchased a fine solitaire ring.

J. T. Silman, the well-known Waltham florist, had a large quantity of glass broken and over $300 worth of plants ruined by a deer last week, which mortally wounded itself.

R. Caplin, the Massachusetts avenue florist, is receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, has some of the finest Asparagus Sprengeri now coming in. His plumosus and longiflorum lilies are also hard to beat.

William McGillivray, a popular local private gardener, will be married June 14 at the Presbyterian church, Brookline. His bride is Miss Janette Scott. Many of his confreres will attend the wedding and reception to follow.

Donald McKenzie, of Chestnut Hill, sailed for a trip to Scotland last week.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18 1911.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

GOOD geraniums of the right color, in bloom, are again scarce.

Now is the time to present bills. If collections are not made soon, many accounts that are of the best will have to wait until after the vacation season; people will be away.

THE bedding plant trade has been immense all over the country, in spite of the fact that a quick transition from winter to midsummer, as this year, is not the most favorable condition for this business.

EXPRESS rates are much too high, but when you consider that half the money goes to the railroad, what the express company gets is earned. It is the railroads that are overpaid for carrying express matter. Relief will not be had until it is made illegal for a railroad to own stock in an express company.

THE June Everybody's Magazine has an article, "The Quest of the Perfect Rose," that makes good, easy reading, and which would be good publicity work for gardening and for the trade were it not for such statements as that "the profits from rose culture in America are fifty per cent," and that 227,000 roses cut annually in the big house at North Wales, Pa., are calculated to bring in $113,000.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. J. M. Charlton.

Mrs. Charlton, wife of J. M. Charlton, of the nursery firm of John Charlton & Sons, Rochester, N. Y., died May 27. The Rochester Florists' Association sent a handsome bunch of American Beauties to the funeral, which was largely attended by members of the trade.

John Eagle.

John Eagle, of Boston, who for thirty-five years had conducted a florist's store and was well known to the trade, died of a paralytic stroke June 1. Interment was June 4, and many florists were among the mourners.

John Jorden.

John Jorden, who some years ago was a prosperous nurseryman in Geneva, N. Y., died May 28 at the City hospital, Geneva, at the age of 73 years. He had been taken to the hospital a few days previously, for an operation. He was born in Ireland, and, with his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Jorden, came to Geneva when he was 3 years of age. He had resided there since that time. In early life he engaged in the nursery business and amassed considerable property. For the last fifteen years he had lived a retired life at his residence, 29 Middle street. He took an active part in politics, and was elected trustee of the Third ward on the Democrat ticket under the village government for several terms. He was a charter member of the Geneva council of the Knights of Columbus, and was formerly trustee of the St. Francis De Sales church, from which the funeral was held. He leaves one brother, Patrick Jorden, and one sister, Mrs. Michael Murphy, both of Geneva.

John Flanagan.

John Flanagan, a well known landscape gardener, died June 1 at the home of his daughter, at Berkeley, Cal. He had reached the age of 85 years and had retired from active business about five years previously. He spent over forty years in the neighborhood of Cambridge, Mass., before removing to California and many private parks in New England were started under his supervision. He was a gardener of the old school, kindly, generous and a thorough plantsman. He had a marvelous memory and his experiences in the landscape line, extending over half a century spent in many parts of the United States, made his conversation intensely interesting to the younger generation of gardeners.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Ever since Memorial day the market has been struggling along under the burden of heavy receipts of stock of extremely poor quality. Demand continues fair; it is nothing remarkable that orders should be on the light side, when June 4 gave a temperature of 95.3 degrees at the weather office at the top of the post-office dome. On the street it was a great deal hotter, and in the greenhouses conditions were such that one almost wonders that there is any good stock at all.

The excessive heat has brought the peony season to an end at about the time the cutting of the local crops ordinarily begins. Practically all the peonies are now cut; there will be a few small lots from northern fields, but the bulk of the stock either has been disposed of or is in storage. The quality of the peonies has been extremely poor this season, and in general those thus far disposed of have realized much lower prices than ever before. There has been an enormous waste and there are quantities in storage which will have little if any value later. At the same time, really good peonies have sold first-rate and have brought what should be considered satisfactory prices. The good stock in storage should realize the usual values, for the good peonies really are the best flowers now on the market.

Beauties are more abundant, and some of the growers who have begun cutting from plants run specially for a summer crop are getting really fine flowers. Of these the supply is so large that the quantities of low grade Beauties are left with an extremely poor market. Good roses are scarce; the bulk of the stock is short in stem and small in flower. It has been so hot that the growers have been able to do hardly any other work than the necessary watering and cutting; the result is a much larger proportion than usual of short-stemmed flowers. The best grades of Killarney and Richmond are selling fairly well.

Carnations are rapidly taking on the midsummer characteristics; they are small and soft. It is noticeable that the demand for carnations has been unusually light since Memorial day; it has been almost impossible to move the receipts. The stock gave such poor satisfaction when shipped in the extreme heat last month that buyers are afraid to tackle carnations—the orders call for peonies, roses, sweet peas and valley. Orchids have become less abundant, and it is wisdom to place orders in advance. There is plenty of valley. Sweet peas have improved in quality, but it is said the season will be short; outdoor peas already are arriving. Gladioli are abundant and selling cheaper.

Asparagus strings have joined smilax as among the few items in short supply. Not many southern ferns have arrived and the cold storage stock generally is extremely poor.

The general opinion is that seasonably cool weather will result in a prompt increase in demand and that business should be good all through June. As stock is being thrown out rapidly, supplies are going down quite fast, and those who are able to cut really good stock look forward to a prosperous three weeks.

Weather in May.

According to an official report, the month was the warmest May experienced in Chicago since the local weather office was established in 1871. In fact, all records were broken, not only for the extremes of heat, but also for the highest average temperature. There were six days with temperature 90 degrees or above, and the readings were above normal almost continuously after the first few days in the month. While the temperature was close to freezing May 2, with a fall of snow, the temperature reached or exceeded 94 degrees May 25, 26 and 27. The percentage of sunshine, seventy-nine per cent, also was greater than observed during any previous May. The rainfall, however, was exactly normal, although not well distributed.

Club Meeting.

Forty-one members of the Chicago Florists' Club made the trip to Milwaukee June 1 for a joint meeting with the Milwaukee Florists' Club. The party had a special car on the electric line from Evanston to Milwaukee and made the trip on express time. President Philpott had seen to it that there were refreshments on the car, which was decked out with the club's banners. On arrival at Milwaukee the two clubs went into joint session at the Blatz hotel. H. V. Hunkel, president of the Milwaukee club, called the meeting to order, but on motion of Mr. Dalwig the Chicago officers were placed in charge of the meeting. C. C. Pollworth made an address of welcome, and President Philpott cut the routine as much as possible to give opportunity for speech-making. W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill., read an excellent paper on rose growing. At 10 o'clock supper was served for nearly eighty people. It was 12 o'clock before the meeting closed and 12:30 before the special car started on the return trip to Chicago. Most of those who went reached their homes anthemums of the season for Memorial day. The variety was Golden Glow, and now a few dozens a day are proving slow sale. It was pretty well established last year that September is early enough to cut mums.

Charles Schneider, who formerly did business as the Central Floral Co., has started in the business again at 32 West Washington street, between State and Dearborn. The location is on the second floor, just above the main entrance to the building. The window makes a good showing from across the street, but is above the heads of pedestrians on the same side as the store.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., who has been unwell for weeks, has stayed at home the last few days.

Peterson's Nursery cut its first peonies May 27, the earliest date within the recollection of William A. Peterson.

Henry Muno, son of John Muno, is now a deputy sheriff attached to the court of Judge Fitch.

W. J. Smyth began the wedding month by sending three men to Pontiac, June 1, to put up a decoration of peonies and greens.

N. J. Wietor says that the big crop of White Killarney now being cut by Wietor Bros. is from plants which were rested early and cut back.

Burglars blew open the safe in the Forty-third street store of J. F. Kidwell & Bro., June 1. The combination knob was knocked off with a sledge-hammer and the door blown open, but the robbery was not discovered until Wm. Kidwell opened the store the next day. The loss was about $100 in currency and some valuable papers.

Frank Ayers, who is C. W. McKellar's right-hand man, underwent an operation June 2 for the removal of a growth on his left eye. Because of the condition of his heart no anesthetic could be given and the operation was extremely painful. His friends sympathize, but cannot refrain from laughter, for now he wears a pair of automobile goggles with one lense packed full of cotton.

Kyle & Foerster say that Klehm's Nurseries have cut and put in storage this year a larger quantity of peonies than ever before and that the Klehms expect the best sale they have had in years, the local crops being out of the way much earlier than usual.

George Fisher and Miss Dora Shapiro were married at Kalamazoo, June 6. They will make their home in Chicago.

with 2-foot stems. John Poehlmann believes it a valuable addition to the list, especially for summer.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports having shipped 550 dozen peonies to N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston, while the Memorial day hot wave was at its worst. Advices are that the stock arrived in first-class condition.

Jegen, the Dearborn street retailer, made a 6-foot cross of orchids and a large wreath of orchids and valley as a part of the orders for the funeral of J. V. Clark, June 2.

J. A. Budlong has added a big new safe to the office equipment. The old one will hereafter be the repository of valuables for Sinner Bros.

Bassett & Washburn have finished their Hinsdale peony crop before cutting was started last year. June always is a big month with them, and they make no complaint of lack of business.

At E. H. Hunt's C. M. Dickinson says the business in rubber hose has been remarkably heavy this spring. Within thirty days the house has sold as many thousand feet as usually are sold in three months.

E. C. Amling Co. has found two telephones inadequate to its needs and has put in the automatic instead of a third Bell line.

At Vaughan & Sperry's Mox Ringier, who looks after the shipping, says most of the orders include yellow daisies, smilax and asparagus strings—and these are about the only shortage at present.

Tim Matchen says that Peter Reinberg has planted his chrysanthemum houses and that rose planting is well along.

Frank Potocka, who was manager of Frank Garland's wholesale house during part of its existence and who later was in the retail business, is looking for a chance to get back into the trade.

house Co. has put nearly 6,000 dozens of peonies in storage. The crop was not so large as expected, due partly to the heat and partly to the plants having been cut too severely last year.

In an article, "The Quest of the Perfect Rose," in Everybody's Magazine for June, it is stated that "when a Chicago alderman a few years ago produced Mrs. Marshall Field rose he refused $50,000 for it." We venture this will be news to Peter Reinberg.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The first seven days of June have been disappointing in the sale of cut flowers. The good stock has sold well, but the outlet for the medium and ordinary grades has been lacking. So much of the stock fails to reach the top grade that the market, as a whole, is poor. The extremely hot weather has spoiled many roses and carnations, while greenhouse-grown sweet peas were completely prostrated. Outdoor sweet peas, when fine, are the best selling stock in the market, but there are not a great many of them. The rain that has come so freely at last makes the supply uncertain, while many are not yet in form.

Beauties, Marylands and Kaiserins are the best roses. These, when nice, sell well. Richmonds are commencement favorites. Valley, too, is in request for weddings, and gardenias are more popular. Cattleyas are dull. Carnations have suffered dreadfully from the heat, particularly Enchantress. Winsor has stood it better, while there are some nice whites. Carnations generally are on the back track at present, needing every breath of this cool wave to tone them up. Cornflowers are abundant. Peonies are waning. The height of the season has passed, but we will have peonies for three weeks yet. They have been offered at low prices since Memorial day. Much of the stock has been good, dry weather considered.

Business has been most active with the fashionable florists, who receive the lion's share of the wedding and commencement orders. Shipping has been fairly brisk. It is often difficult to get the high grade stock required by out-of-town florists. Allowance must be made for the effect of hot weather on flowers. It is hoped this cooler weather will improve the quality of flowers and so encourage business.

Various Notes.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report that the soft coal market is in bad shape, owing to restricted demand, but say that anthracite of the steam sizes is moving well, with prices seasonably strong.

Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, Delaware county, Pa., favored the members of

He does it, and does it well.

The cemetery florists report a heavy Memorial day business. Mrs. Mary Alburger experienced a heavy demand for bedding and vase plants and for cut flowers. Popular taste is all for BASKETS this year. It is decidedly to your interest to make the most of this fashion, because it gives you an opportunity to display your skill and to use short-stemmed flowers to advantage. Our stock of baskets is even finer than it was last season, when we were admittedly leaders in BASKETS as in all other FLORISTS' SUPPLIES.

Our selection of BASKETS for handsome gifts aims at simplicity. People who have cultured ideas about flowers and floral arrangements tell us that a basket should be simple rather than showy, with graceful lines and of pleasing proportions. We have carried out these ideas and offer you the result—an assortment of the most stylish BASKETS that you or anyone else has ever seen.

The Market.

The cut flower market here for the last two weeks has had its good and bad days. The early days of last week were warm and stock of all kinds was rushed on the market, which, with the light demand, caused a whole lot of stock to be dumped. Carnations seemed to have suffered the most, and what was nice stock up to this time is now small, soft and hard to sell at any price. There are still some carnations coming in that are good for this time of the year, and these are cleaning up fairly well.

Memorial day brought a lot of business, with most of the orders calling for carnations and peonies. The carnations were so soft it was uncertain to take shipping orders, but the wholesalers managed to get through the orders and when all the business was over the orders were well taken care of considering the shortage of good stock, and from all accounts the customers were pleased. Peonies were in great demand and sold up clean. The local stock was in for this holiday, and these, together with the southern stock in storage for the rush, helped out in great shape. The business for the week was fine, and if the weather had been right the trade would have enjoyed a record-breaking business for this holiday.

The week after Memorial day found the weather much cooler and business better all around. June weddings have started and the market has taken on a better tone. The week ending June 3 was a satisfactory one and stock of all kinds cleaned up. A great help for the growers was a flower day originated by a local charitable institution for crippled children, ordering 50,000 roses and carnations and selling them on the streets of the city, taking what the public would give for the stock. About 30,000 carnations were used this day and the balance of the flowers were roses and peonies. The sale was a great success, being handled by society ladies, and netted the home about $1,800, as well as bringing a nice sum of money to the growers. This day will be a yearly affair here, and it is the wish of the florists that the ladies in charge make it still heavier next year.

Local peonies are in full bloom at present and coming along too fast. A good many are being put in storage for later on. The stock is fine and hard to beat. The growers in this line are coming to the front and getting the best stock that money can buy.

Monday, June 5, found the market pretty well filled with a good lot of stock and business not so brisk as usual for the regular Monday trade. The weather suddenly turned hot again and is bringing in the peonies and roses by the express load.

Growers of bedding plants are all well pleased with the business. Stock in this line cleaned up much earlier than usual and a good many of the large growers are turning down orders right along. The retailers in and out of town are busy to their full capacity and are working overtime getting their orders out. All things considered, weather conditions and all, we think we have been fortunate, and we will soon close a successful season.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. F. Sullivan, who was injured nearly a month ago, is still at St. Mary's hospital.

B. Schroeter recently bought an Everitt "30" touring car for the use of his family. The florists of Detroit are all pretty well supplied with autos.

The month of May was unusually hot; consequently the last two meetings of the Detroit Florists' Club were called off. An important meeting will be held June 19, and after that little will be accomplished until September.

Philip Breitmeyer has been elected president of the Broadway Public Market Co. This company has commenced the erection of a large modern market building on Broadway. It is understood that several florists have applied for space. B. Schroeter's new store will be directly opposite this market.

E. Bleil, who recently sold out his interest in the Flower Shop, is now selling automobiles. H. S.

Savanna, Ill.—John Lambert, of the Savanna Greenhouses, has taken a partner, William Dunn, formerly with Hoerber Bros., Chicago. The newly organized firm has bought five acres of ground in the east part of this town and will remove to this tract the five greenhouses purchased a year or two ago from W. B. Lovell. Besides these five houses and the present range of four houses, two new houses will be added.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

On every hand the report is the same—"best ever." This refers to the business on Memorial day. Prices did not advance to such an extent as has been the case some years, and all along the line trade was good. Carnations were unseasonably short, but aside from that there was plenty of everything. Southern peonies were a novelty here this year and took well.

All the growers now have their hands full in outdoor work, while the greenhouses are being overhauled in readiness for the early benching. Graduations will follow within the next two or three weeks and, with the usual plethora of June weddings, will keep the retailers and decorators busy.

Various Notes.

Frank Morton had charge of nine extra men at the greenhouses of C. H. Hunt during the Memorial day rush.

A. T. Bunyard, of New York city, has opened his branch store on Bellevue avenue, Newport, for the summer.

Frank Barker, of Warren, reports that last season was the best he ever had on violets. He will raise a much larger crop the coming season.

Mr. Willard, of the Taunton Greenhouses, of Taunton, Mass., was a recent visitor. W. H. M.
